THOMAS HILL, Adjutant. "The Two Orphans."-- The Frost cided success last Tuesday evening at Ravenscraft's Opera House in presenting "The Two Orphans." The play is a tax to professionals; to our amateurs it was, of course, an immense undertaking. The result, however. fully justified the great effort made. and surpassed the expectations of all save a few privileged attendants at rehearsals. The costumes were brilliant, and the stage settings elaborate and tasteful. Without halt or jar the play proceeded to the end, each actor and her character. We could not particularize without naming all, which has already been done in these columns. The company as a whole deserves unlimited praise for a most card; it's like excellent performance, and in saying this we echo the popular judgment. It ought to be stated, however, that cutting the couto Peter Laemmert belongs the credit of selecting and assigning the several members of the company o the parts, and of directing and training them subsequently. Many who failed to see the play regret it; many would like to witness it again. Hence, it is hoped the company will favor the public erelong with another presentation. A correspondent elsewhere points out ment of the audience. No doubt the recent successful presentations evoked the following from the Lonaconing Review of yesterday: Quite a number of persons in town have at different times expressed themselves in favor of organizing a Dramatic Association for the purpose of giving our people something that we seldom have, viz.: a good entertainment. This idea has been successfully carried out in Frostburg, and that city has now a first class company of amateurs, and we see no reason why Lonaconing with the dramatic talent and ability it posseses should not follow suit.
