KANSAS CITY WINS LITTLE WORLD SERIES

Chiago, Ill.—The Kansas City Monarchs won the little world series from St. Louis and the right to meet the Hilldale club, champions of the East, in the World Series. This makes the second time these two teams have met for the world championship.

At a meeting of the directors, it was decided that the series should be the best four out of seven instead of five out of nine for the little world series.

The Monarchs won Saturday's game 5 to 4 but lost to the St. Louis Stars on Sunday 2 to 1. Kansas City won a doubleheader Monday, 9 to 3 and 4 to 0 which gave them the required four games. Kansas City won the opening game in St. Louis 8 to 6.

Hilldale will play in Kansas City Thursday in the opening game of the World Seres. The two teams will play in Philadelphia October 8, 9, 10.

Afro Will Give Super Service During Series

Conforming with the policy of the AFRO-AMERICAN to give its readers the latest and detailed news service on important happenings, the AFRO will have special correspondents covering the Hilldale-Kansas City series this week in the West and the following week in the East.

The account of all World Series games will be published play by play. A super service will be rendered the baseball fans who wish to follow the series inning by inning. A special wire will inform this office the outcome after each inning during the series. By calling Vernon 6016 or 6017 readers will be informed of the outcome of the game a few minutes after they are played in St. Louis, Kansas City, Philadelphia or Jersey City.

SPORTS MIRROR

By AFRO SPORTS EDITOR

Sportsmanship

Baltimore fans pride themselves on their sportsmanship and fairness in athletics. You will find the races almost evenly divided when the Black Sox play at home. You will find any number of ribald Oriole fans among the colored people. Yet all effort to induce Jack Dunn to let his seven time champions play the Sox in an exhibition has failed to date.

Many believe it is purely a matter of race prejudice on the part of the Oriole boss that prevents a post season series between the two clubs that represent Baltimore. As a rule the type of men that play on the Orioles are real sports and above petty and trifling matters.

Ed Rommell, former Oriole, pitching for the Athletics, played with his team against the Sox last year. Rube Parham has played against several colored teams. Last year the Orioles were willing to play the Sox a post season series, but their owner refused to sanction the games and the Birds were not allowed to play under the name of "Orioles", even at this several of the champions were in the line up.

An effort on the part of the Sox management to play a late series with an out of town white club in Oriole park was refused by Jack Dunn.

Hilldale, champions of the Eastern League is planning a post series with Jersey City of the International league. The Lincoln Giants will play an all star white team in New York next month. Camden and other teams in the Penn-Jersey league meet some colored team at least twice each week. And it might be remarked for Mr. Dunn's edification that none of the black came off the players and the fans prefer to see these contests as they are aware that they are going to see a real contest regardless of the winner.

Jose Lombardo

When Jose Lombardo fought Lew Mayrs here several weeks ago, Lombardo was highly touted as a South American and posters appeared all over town with the New York fighter pictured as white, altho a South American, the featherweight boxer from Panama has a decidedly dark complexion and could no more pass for white than Jack Johnson.

After the fight the several sport writers on the Baltimore papers referred to the colored boy as "South American," "Dusky" and every other term except Negro. These fellows were evidently trying to kid themselves into believing it was not a mixed fight pure and simple. The little fighter from Panama would get highly insulted if he were referred to other than as a member of the Negro Race. He lives in Harlem and all of his associates are colored.

Day Or Warfield

Which is the greater second baseman, Connie Day or Frank Warfield?

Thousands of fans have asked this question during the season and the answers seem about evenly divided. It is an undisputable fact that both are great—surpassing everything else in their particular position in both leagues.

A comparison of figures and statistics show that they are hitting and fielding on an even basis. Day's batting average is 323 while Warfield's mark to the same date is 325. Not enough difference to note for the season's work.

Day has a slight advantage in weight and height which is in his favor, while the Hildale player is a better base runner which again brings the scales to a balance. Both are about the same age, so acording to figures and all appearances these two players share honors as the greatest second basemen in the country.

Yet, on the otherhand, Warfield is at his best, that is he is playing under almost ideal conditions. His club is a winner, that gives him confidence. His team is well balanced His team mates are congenial and the whole club has been practically intact for the last two years. There has been no squabbling or petty grievances to disrunt the organization or cause friction among the players. These conditions have brought forth the best in every man on the club. Under these circumstances Warfield has developed into a great second baseman.

While Connie Day is the equal of the Darby daisy, playing conditions have been a decided factor in keeping the Sox player from showing his best wares. At times Day flashed a brand of baseball that far surpasses anything in the Eastern or Western leagues.

A change of managers, bickerings, dissatisfaction have kept the club in ill humor. These have a direct bearing on the playing ability of every player. Day with other Sox members has felt the effects. Under these trying conditions Day has been classed as the equal of Warfield whose playing conditions are almost ideal.

Playing Conditions

Under similar environment, Day would beyond a doubt stand out as the greatest second baseman in the country. He is what you might call a "natural" ball player. Blessed with a large pair of hands, very few grounders pass him. Long arms enable him to reach balls an ordinary player would fail to touch. He has the uncanny ability to sense just where the batter intends to hit.

It is no unusual thing for Day to race across the field just as the pitcher is about to deliver the ball across the plate and stop on the spot the ball lands.

Day and Warfield are the greatest second basemen in the East, but if the Sox player were working under better conditions, he would far excel the Hilldale player.

DEMPSEY SIGNS TO MEET WILLS

Niles, Mich.—Harry Wills, heavyweight boxer, ended his six-year quest here this week by signing articles with Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world for a 10-round no-decision bout to be staged in Michigan City, Ind., September, 1926.

After the articles were signed, Wills and Dempsey shook hands, but the champion refused to look the Brown Panther in the face. Wills smiled broadly, thanked Dempsey for the title and wished him luck.

Promoter Fitzsimmons announced that neither Wills nor Dempsey had been guaranteed a cent and that both will box on percentage, the respective shares of which he declined to reveal. He announced that he had posted $200,000 as a forfeit, that Dempsey had posted $100,000 and that Manager Mullins had put up $50,000 for Wills. Both Wills and Dempsey will receive $25,000 as preliminary expenses. This money was paid them Tuesday.

The forfeits have been posted in the First National Bank in South Bend.

ORIOLES AND SOX WILL NOT PLAY SERIES

There will be no series played between the Baltimore Black Sox and the Orioles this year.

Charlie Spedden, owner of the Sox has no objections as far as the Sox are concerned, but the Birds have flown to Louisville, Ky., to play a junior world series with the St. Louis club and according to their management do not care to spend an added two or three weeks in Baltimore for the little money it will net them.

An effort to reach Jack Dunn, Orioles' boss, this week, failed but his secretary told an AFRO reporter the series would be left to the men and after going through a world series they had no desire to play a post series, as $75 or $100 did not mean much to them as they are anxious to get home at the end of the season.

The secretary said prejudice played no part in the International. Leaders make up and it was not due to discrimination that the two teams had not met. Some of the men came from as far West as California and after the strain of the season and world series for the last seven years no desire was left for extra games for the small sum it would bring. However, the secretary did not say what might happen if the men did not play the world series each year. He added they would not be allowed to play under the name of Orioles.

Jersey City, of the International League, has just finished a series with the Hilldale club in Philadelphia. They played under the name of Jersey City Club. Altho the complete lineup of the Skeeters was lacking, a number of the regular men played the Hilldale, team.

Jacobson, centerfielder, Dowd, second baseman, Goebel, right field and Zellers pitcher, were the regulars that played against the Eastern League nine.

The Black Sox management has been trying for five years to get a game with the Orioles but Dunn thus far has refused. Spedden said this week that he would not ask for a series this year.

HILLDALE BEATS JERSEY CITY INTERNATIONALS

Phila.—Hilldale, champions of the Eastern League, gave the Jersey City International leaguers an 8 to 2 setback yesterday afternoon at Hilldale park through the effective pitching of Rube Currie and the heavy swatting of Judy Johnson and Paul Severs, of Manager Bolden's champs.

Rube allowed but five hits. The only inning the International leaguers were able to bunch a couple was in the third, when they scored their two lone runs. Jake and Judy took kindly to Rube Zellers' curves, Jake snaring three singles and a double, while Judy hammered out the same dish. George Johnson stepped into the limelight when he socked one of Zellers' pitches into the centerfield bleachers for a home-run clout.

Hilldale started after Zellers in the first inning. Briggs bounced one for a single off the portsider's glove. Stevens beat out a bunt, which Malone overran. Carr sacrificed. Mackey's sacrifice fly scored Briggs. J. Johnson beat out a bunt; and when the latter stole second Niebergal threw wild and Stevens scored.

They added two more in the second. G. Johnson was safe when Lena Stiles dropped Berg's assist. Warfield beat out a bunt, Currie was safe on Zellers' boot, filling the bases. G. Johnson scored on Briggs' sacrifice lift to Urbanski. Warfield counted on a wild pitch. Urbanski's triple, Niebergal's single and a force out gave the leaguers two runs in the third.

In the fifth G. Johnson hit his home run. In the sixth successive singles by Stevens Carr and Mackey, with a double by J. Johnson sent two more runs over the plate.

Grays Here Oct. 11

"Cam" Posey and his sensational Homestead Grays of Pittsburg will be the attraction at Maryland Park on Sunday October 11.

The Homesteaders are the nine that has been creating such a stir in baseball circles for the last few years. Heretofore, Eastern league clubs have refused to play them, but the Sox are casting precedent to the winds and will hook up with the Smoky City lads next Sunday.

All fans remember old "Cyclone" Joe Williams who is one of the hurling aces of the Pittsburg aggregation this year. He is known thru out the country as the "daddy of all pitchers."

To say that fur will fly when these two teams meet is to put it mildly. The Grays have been hankering after a chance to show their wares against the Eastern leaguers for some years and this meeting will give them their long awaited chance.

Sincerity and Honesty of Purpose are the cardinal principles upon which I have built my practice, and upon these principles I invite all sufferers to come to me. Come to me as a friend with mutual confidence between physician and patient and expect me to render you such service as my qualifications and years of experience will permit.
