THE SEPTEMBER GALE.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

And though I was a youngster them, That gale I well remember; The day before, my kite-string snapped, And I, my kite pursuing, The wind whisked off my palm-leaf hat;-For me two storms were brewing!

It came as quarrels sometimes do, When married folks come clashing; CARDS, &C., Before the fire was flashing,— Before they rent asunder,-A little rocking of the trees, And then came on the thunder.

Lord! how the ponds and rivers boiled, Public Square, Sharpsburg Md. Nov 4. As if the Titans battled; And all above was in a howl,

> And all our things were drying: The storm came roaring thro' the lines, I lost, ah! bitterly I wept,-Nov4-1y. I lost my Sunday breeches!

> > I saw them straddling through the air, They were my darlings and my pride, My boyhood's only riches,-"Farewell, tarewell," I faintly cried,-"My breeches! O, my breeches!"

That night I saw them in my dreams, How changed from what I knew them ! The dews had steeped their faded threads, The winds had whistled through them ! I saw the wide and ghastly rents Where demon claws had torn them; A hole was in their amplest part As if an imp had worn them!

But those young pantaloons have gone And not till fate has cut the last Of all my earthly stitches, This aching heart shall cease to mourn
