PROTECT THE BAY FISH

In These Days of High Prices Protection of Fish in The Bay is Essential Not Only to Those Engaged in The Industry, But Also to Consumers—If Fishermen Won't Conserve Supply, The State And Federal Governments Will Take a Hand.

The Conservation Commission has made a ringing appeal to Maryland fishermen to protect the fish of the Chesapeake Bay from destruction. The appeal ought to hit home in these days of high prices. If it does not, the Federal and State governments will take a hand. Limits will be placed on the size and area of nets, seines and weirs. The Federal government has the power to interfere if necessary, as fish are placed in the migratory list. They swim from state to state. Hence they are subject to interstate laws and regulations. The oyster is stationary. If it moved from state to state, Uncle Sam would have long ago extended his strong right arm to save the oyster. The same is true of terrapin. Its home is local. It does not wander beyond state lines. Hence its lack of strong protection. Hence also its partial destruction.

In its appeal to "the fishermen of Maryland" the Conservation Commission says:

The industries growing out of the various crabbing, fishing and oystering operations in the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries are very important. They furnish occupation for many thousands of Maryland citizens. It is the paramount duty of the Conservation Commission to foster these industries so as to cause greater productivity and to introduce better regulatory and control methods whereby the interest of the citizens may be benefited.

At this time, with high costs of food generally, the fish, crab and oyster should enjoy an unprecedented demand. Even in the years of greatest plenty in Chesapeake Bay the production has never been near the maximum because nature alone and unassisted was depended upon and waste took an enormous toll. Annually an enormous quantity of undersized, unmerchantable stock, which if permitted to mature would have represented untold revenue to the fishermen have been wantonly destroyed.

Save the small stock, which never sells at good prices, and let it grow to maturity when the increase in volume and the full market price will amply repay you for the effort. Do not depend alone on nature's production, help it, save it.

Only citizens of Maryland may fish for shad and herring in the Chesapeake Bay between March 1 and June 1, in the Potomac River from March 1 to June 1, and Northern limit of Bay fixed by line from Carpenter Point to Grove Point, thence to Howell's Point. Penalty, $50 fine, apparatus forfeited.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

THE EGGLESS CAKE

High Cost of Living Reduced By Several Millions.

The prestige of the hen is being curtailed in a new and interesting way.

She lays a billion eggs or so for the human race each year, and, under world war conditions, the price of eggs per dozen to consumers had approached a dollar in some parts of the United States and has reached the prohibitive price of two dollars or more in the belligerent countries.

Therefore when the high cost of living looms large in the public eye, unusual importance is attached to the announcement of the best known baking powder company in the world that it has evolved a ready and practical way for the housewife, to save, in the aggregate, many millions of dollars in household expenses through the use of more Royal Baking Powder and less eggs.

Months of experimenting have elicited a large number of recipes for the making of home baked products with fewer eggs and these recipes are being distributed gratis. It is claimed that they prove conclusively that the baking powder saves eggs—in some cakes about half the cost of the cake is saved. In recipe calling for the use of eggs, the number can be reduced and excellent results if healthful, appetizing cakes, muffins, corn bread, etc.,—obtained by using a small additional quantity, about a teaspoon of Royal baking powder in place of each egg omitted.

The acme, or top-notch achievement, in this connection is an eggless, milkless butterless cake that is pronounced by all who have tasted it to be delicious and wholesome. Its appetizing quality, it is claimed, will be surprising to the house who tries it according to the recipe given.

The idea of using more Royal baking powder and less eggs in baking is not entirely new, but the elaborate enlarging and perfecting of the idea just accomplished renders it a very present help, meeting the necessities of the housewife of moderate means in a time of soaring food prices.

In the British Isles the news has been received with enthusiasm. The baking powder company, while not being accused of being an out-and-out philanthropist in the matter, is pointed out as having provided the means of effecting an enormous saving in household affairs in a way that benefits everybody and harms nobody—except it be the pride of the autocratic hen. The company only completed its experiments recently, and already the announcements are being spread broadcast in the newspapers, which, it will be remembered, many years ago made the name of Royal Baking Powder a household word all over the world.
