"NEXT HARVEST—OR BUST" PLENTY OF WHEAT IN FALL

Baltimore.—"All the wheat in the world next fall won't do our allies much good if we let them starve to death or worse in the meantime," is the State Food Administrator's warning against too much joy over the optimistic crop forecast just issued from Washington. "The outlook for a record harvest means a lot, but it doesn't lessen a jot our present task of "carrying on" till the new wheat is actually reaped. For about four months we have to save wheat as never before. Every single soldier we sent to France is a liability instead of an asset to the Allied Forces if the U. S. A. doesn't add one more wheat ration a day to the amount we have already been shipping. Upon the size of the coming crop hinges the chance of early victory, it is true. But until that crop is harvested, we must not for an instant lose sight of this solemn fact—that every Maryland boy who crosses the sea would be better at home unless his fellow-citizens spare from their own consumption enough wheat to give him each day his daily bread."

Wheat experts are sanguine about an abundance next autumn. Winter wheat may break the 1915 record. Acreage is increased 20 per cent. over last year, and the condition is unusually good. Spring wheat shows an acreage increase of 15 per cent. In addition, we may be able to get some of Argentine's 100,000,000 bushel store for which ships cannot be spared this summer. India has 12,000,000 bushels and Australia 180,000,000 bushels all ready under a British guarantee of four shillings a bushel. A few sailing ships and neutral tramps are carrying some 7,000 miles from Australia to 'Frisco, but barely enough to take care of California's excess of consumption over production.

So, while there is plenty of wheat within sight, it is not yet within reach. We must hang on till it is available and no loyal Marylander will add any dead weight to the burden. Every home which can do without wheat at all—and the majority can—should give that visible proof of patriotism. Hotels and restaurants have better facilities for using substitutes and quick breads and so have even less excuse for serving any wheat at all. The Maryland Food Administration trusts that the prospect for a real bumper crop in the fall will spur citizens on to ensuring that we reach that date with our cause unimpaired by selfishness. It is a case of "Next Harvest—or Bust."

TRY FOR A GARDEN PRIZE.

COTTAGE PIE.

(Official recipe.)

Cover the bottom of a baking dish with hot mashed potatoes—add a layer of cold roast beef, chopped or cut into small pieces, seasoned with salt and pepper and onion, and moisten with some of the gravy. Cover with another layer of mashed potatoes. Bake until dish is heated through and potatoes browned on top.

ALL OFF TO AN EVEN START IN RACE FOR GARDEN PRIZE

"Start a war garden and show that you, too, can fight the Hun," is the advice of the Food Administration in asking the women of Maryland to make haste and enter its Produce Contest which awards twenty prizes in each county for the best gardens. "Best" has nothing to do with size. The small thrift-plot has the same chance of carrying off the honors as its big rival, for the $16,500 State total of garden prizes goes where there is the best yield per square yard calculated on the market value of all potatoes, tomatoes, sweet corn, beans, turnips, cabbages and onions either actually sold or put away and stored for home use.

Then get the girls and boys to show they have the spirit of their sires. The Garden Contest is the new American holiday game. There is not a boy or girl in Maryland who, given half a chance, would want to be an idler or a parasite at a time when the best effort of everybody is needed to bring about a quick, triumphant peace. They would rather be young soldiers of the soil.

Give the slacker acres no rest. Turn the youngsters loose on all bits of neutral land in the neighborhood, to convert them into patriot patches.

Send in an entry at once to the Contest Department, 700 Equitable Building, Baltimore.

Class F is for gardens of at least one-half acre, but in Class F anyone can compete who can beg, borrow or steal even one-sixteenth of an acre, which is just over 300 square yards. No one has a bit better chance than your own child to win the $600 State Championship, provided there is the right spirit, good advice and a little plot of ground twenty paces along each side. Is there any prize a red-blooded American boy or girl would rather win?

EVERY GARDEN HAS A CHANCE.

BUY BINDER TWINE NOW.

Farmers are urged to buy their binder twine early as a precaution against shipping delay at harvest-time. The Government is doing its level best to keep down the price, but "sisal," of which it is made, is in the hands of a Mexican monopoly over which the United States has no control. The surest way to lower the price is to cut our demand to our bare necessity.

Sugar in ice cream is not reduced by the food order effective May 15th, as it is desired to encourage the dairying industry. Manufacturers of soft drinks, chewing gum, confectionery and such nonessentials will be allowed only four-fifths as much as last year.

A little arsenic will persuade eating insects to leave your war garden alone while nicotine extract suffocates bugs which suck. Get your sprayer ready.
