WASHINGTON COLLEGE

A new spirit is manifesting itself at Washington College. The students have pledged themselves to revive the old Washington College spirit and to uphold the traditions of the school which have kept the old institution alive for over 200 years. The man who is directly responsible for this revival is Prof. Howell. He delivered a most inspiring address to the three upper classes who were gathered in the gymnasium on the night of Oct. 23. When he had finished speaking he left the hall midst the hearty applause and approval of the whole gathering. Then the student body was addressed by several studnts from the gathering. As the minutes passed on the assembly got into such a frame of mind that there was hardly one who would not then have gotten up and willingly given his last drop of blood for the defense, honor and glory of old Washington. Each student solemnly pledged to uphold Washington College wherever he went, to the last of his days. Immediately they set to work out a plan by which this new work is to be accomplished. The most important part of the work is to teach the new students the old traditions of the college and to imbue them with the Washington College spirit. So a plan was devised under which every new student will be placed under the guardianship of an upper classman, whose duty it will be to teach him the necessary things, guide him in his conduct around the Hill, see to the high standard of his work and in genral to transmit to him the college patriotism which every upperclassman must and does feel himself. Under this new plan hazing would be almost entirely wiped out from the institution. For so long as a new man followed the directions of his "big brother," he would be unmolested and respected by both the upper and lower classmen.

The first meeting of the Freshman class took place Mondady night, Oct. 23. They elected the following officers for the year: Monahan, President; Kelly, V. P.; Culver, Secretary; Stewart, Treasure; Fiore, Sergeant-at-Arms.

The first dance of the season was given by the Adelphia Literary Society on Oct. 21. With the excellent music furnished by the Adelphia Marimba Orchestra and the large attendance, a very enjoyable time was had by every one. The men who composed the orchestra were: R. Pippin, D. Straughn, B. Nichols, Kelly, Flowers, D. McMenamin, W. Graves and Eshman.

The Glee Club is just about completely reorganized for this year. In addition to the new male voices there have enrolled several female voices. Practice has already been started and a complete program is expected in the very near future. Prof. Howell will again direct the club this year.

The new men and the old men will again fight for the championship of the Hill in football on Monday, Oct. 30. No admission will be charged, and everybody is invited to come out.
