Gadabout-ing in Baltimore

4By LULA JONES GARRITT

AWAKE BETIMES to a morning that is like a pastel print . . . all gold-streaked, blue and grey . . . Bending a pensive ear to a rumble of thunder and wondering what it bodes.

So to a breakfast on a slight smack of ginger snape, hoping against rain hope that they'd stop me dog, but it's no use, the toll of this persistent merrymaking is too much. Back into the old coma for a brief lookabout upon the news of the day.

For sheer loveliness the decorations done up by the Educo at their dance at Odd Fellows' Hall, Friday night, took the cake. Stretching a fine net slightly below the ceiling they piled it high with myriad colored balloons; clustered great groups of them in the space between the windows, and centered their dancing space with gorgeous greens.

Punch was dispensed from a great crystal bowl throughout the evening . . . or morning. I should say, since the natives have completely given up doing their dancing ere midnight . . . and at intervals, two pretty uniformed maidens distributed confetti and ribbons, adding other streams of color to the already colorful assembly.

There were about three hundred guests dancing with the club that evening.

Mrs. Frank Sorrell were the loveliest frock of silver-beaded tunic over a flowing chiffon trailing skirt . . . and Mrs. Ruth Shipley's frock boasted a cunning silver ruffle outlining the backline of her red crepe . . . Miss Catherine Williams was in the classic all-white, with the trimming consisting of a bead-incrusted bodice . . . and Miss Inez Mero donned a taffy model of pale relieved egg shell.

Then there was Miss Rosalia Clarke in red, gold-spangled and Mrs. Ethel Hucles who selected a brocaded orange taffeta with a running ruffled neckline . . . I think it was Mrs. Martha Williams, too, who had on a dowdy blue frock with a huge ruffle about the neck . . . there were so many lovely ladies, beautifully gowned, that one's head was in a whirl, yeah, even these jaded old feminine eyes of mine took on an added glint and you can imagine what the men were doing.

That punch was more or less potent, too, and the air bubbling with gaiety . . . Somewhere reached a balloon, which was the signal for him and her and her and him to have one, too . . . then someone stuck a pin in his neighbor's trophy . . . and in another second of time was the pop pop pop! of miniature explosions and dozens of the gay bubbles were punctured all over the place . . . It must have been long past three when the International tucked instruments into cases ere the reluctant guests were convinced the dance was of the past . . . and I journeyed on to another hop at a cabaret or probably breakfast at which several were entaining following the affair.

Earlier in the evening most of the younger set, and a representative bunch of their elders were to be found at the New Albert Auditorium, where the Morgan and Howard teams were doing a basketball struggle. . . . A bunch of the Howard students were here, including: Ola DeNeal and Iona Wood, of Baltimore; Creed Mitchel, Muriel Kelley, Ada Fisher, Louise Fisher, Owen Plummer, Thelma Dale, Carriebell Hughes and a dozen others; Evans Fernando, of Baltimore; Perry Howard, Jack Butcher, Frank Reeves, Billy Brooks, Joe Weaver, Daniel Bailey, Joe Burch, Pickie Bland, Red Carter, George Whitted, Theodore Goodlet, Bennett Snowden and a few others.

Mrs. Estelle C. Young, former president of the King's Daughters Swan Sons and N. M. Carroll Chapter of the Epworth League, of Sharp Street M.E. Church, was at home in honor of both groups, Friday.

After a short meeting by the King's Daughters and Sons there was a program rendered with Milton Carr presiding, which included: Remarks by Mr. Carr, then group singing; piano solo, Mrs. Veronica Caldwell; vocal solo, Miss Fannie Hays; vocal solo, Miss Anna Bennett.

Mrs. Annie Russell Frisby was speaker of the evening, taking as her subject, "Maturity."

At the close of the program, Mrs. Young was presented with a silk comfort by the King's Daughters and Sons, and a quilted silk pillow and a beautiful clock by the Epworth League. A delightful repast was served later.

Those present were:

Mrs. Daisy Robinson, Mrs. Carrie Cullison, Mrs. Annie E. Durand, Mrs. Emma Bonds, Mrs. Essie Slater, Mrs. Mary Stanley, Mrs. H. Ella Overton, Mr. Thomas Whittington.

Mrs. Laura Carter, Mrs. Elvira M. Bond, Mrs. Lillie Johnson, Mrs. Sophia Siddons, Mrs. Hester Floyd, Mrs. Helen Watkins;

Messrs. Milton Carr, Grover C. Hayes, Robert Young.

Mrs. Young was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Hester Floyd, Misses Anna Bennett, Fanny Hays and Grover C. Hays.

All who attended the musical tea of the Philharmonic Guild Sunday were in accord with the opinion that this group of music lovers is one of if not Baltimore's most talented musical groups.

Headed by a most efficient and capable leader, Allan Collick, the guild has been meeting informally since early fall, studying, appreciating and enjoying music of the world's most famous composers.

The guild claims among its membership, Mes. Wilhelmina Brown, Miss Geraldine Bell, the James H. Young, the William E. Lewis, Messrs. Charles Edward Bush, James A. Young and Vernon Thornton.

Mrs. Mary Campbell Lewis is secretary of the guild.

Among those enjoying an evening of rare entertainment and sipping tea with the guild were:

Dr. and Mrs. McKinley Reeshy, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hunt, Messrs. Ethel Carrington, Genevieve Patterson, Marie Marshall, Ethel Hucles, Martilia Kelley, Beulah Myers, Jessie C. Collick, Anita Greiger, William Jessup, Allen Crawford, Wilhelmina Anderson, Alice West, Genevieve Dent, Mary Jane Short, Helen Parker, Susie Denton, Mary P. Prout;

Misses Evangeline Mitchell, Mildred Felton, Georgia Lawrence, Rosa Wright, Elizabeth Donoho, Mary W. Winn, Sarah Brown, Daisy Campbell, Marie Burgess, Dorothy Sullivan, Hattie H. Green, Carrie E. Mathews, Francis Chambers, Sophia Morris, Helen Travers, Grace Bowling, Anna Bell Bowling, Mrs. J. Peters;

Mrs. J. Leslie Jones, Charles Freeman, Clarence Hunt, Howard M. Prout, Marjoin Henry, William Jessup, M. L. Tynes, Bernard B. Lark, William U. Hatchett, Mason Reaves, Mclein R. Logan, Philip Trutt;

Clarence Lightfoot, Douglas L. Smith, Richard H. Ryans, James Gaines, Mrs. C. S. Spencer, Mrs. Katherine Johns, Miss Catherine Gaines.

In the Offing

The Pofcs (that group of postal clerks) whose dance is scheduled a coupla Friday eves from now, are swearing that it will be the neriest-least formal to decorate the season's social calendar.

The whole backbone of the community, as well as a goodly supply of the spare ribs will be there when Allyn Hill sings at Douglass Hi, Tuesday night, as one of the presentations by the Women's Cooperative Civic League . . . The same evening Miss Georgia Lawrence is appearing at a dinner recital at Ames Church.

The smart set is all-atwitter over the Swags' tackey party, which will be held this Friday night, and have searched every local attic for grandma's old gray bonnet, or the hoop skirt that Aunt Serina thought such a whang, in which to make themselves ridiculous.

Would you pin a coupla violets each on those two fellows who expressed their feelings with their fists at the Lafayette dance a past Friday eve, and who were quite adept enough to fell it to a judge this week without mentioning the gel's name . . . so many folk, you know, are so obvious . . . Mrs. Edna Lewis is laid low with an illness at her Catonsville domicile . . . and it was a wrinkled turkey dinner that Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Moore dispensed at their lovely suburban home, Sunday afternoon . . . Mrs. Essie Marie Potts Dawson, of Philadelphia, is renewing old friendships here this week, seeing the town from the roof tree of Dr. and Mrs. George Hall . . . and Mrs. Irvin Brown, also of Philly is guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thurgood Marshall.

Saturday evening, Mrs. D. Grant Scott, was the charming hostess to a few friends at bridge.

Among those present were:

Mesdames Ida Brown and Estep of Annapolis; Carolyn Brown, Clara Frisby, Genevieve Harris, Mary Phillips, Edith Scott, Addie Hill, Shell, Ireen Dotson.

Misses Mary Earles, Dessadra Thomas, Margaret Williams and Regina Wright; Mrs. G. Harris, Mrs. Ida Brown; and Mrs. Estep took prizes at bridge.

Editor Carl Murphy is Surprised on Birthday

It Was a Game of International Geography with the Kids Which Friends Turned into a Smoker.

Carl Murphy, president of the Afro-American Co., is 45.

So, this week Mrs. Vashti Murphy, his wife, spread some secrets about among a number of the old gang, and about 9 o'clock Wednesday night, they dived suddenly into his study in their Morgan Park home and informed him that he had been dubbed host of honor for the evening.

The surprise news came in the middle of a game of international geography he was playing with little Misses Colette and Francis, who had the fun to pretend they did not know a thing about the opening event and that it was to end with a bed-time story, after which the whole family would sink into the arms of Morpheus.

Boyish Surprise

Expressing a real boyish surprise at the Afro's president on the occasion, accepted the felicitations and of course hand-shaking, and then the game stag was on. In the meantime, down on the first floor things were happening. What Mrs. Murphy modestly termed a "snack" turned out to be a number of appetizing bi-monthly dishes with the necessary liquids to add zest.

And then came the reminiscences which took the gang back over school pranks and sundry high and low spots of human behavior. This was followed by a sizzling story-telling contest in which, believe it or not, the eminently, and always, correct Dr. Thos. I. Brown brought down the house. His story, by the way, was strongly suggested by the honoree, and three versions were told in succession by Harry T. Pratt and George B. Murphy, Sr.

"Following in the footsteps of dad" suggested the theme for the evening and brought an impromptu tribute to the late John H. Murphy, Sr. It was recalled that Carl had some 24 years yet to go up the ladder of success, to reach his father climbed. Everybody present voiced the feeling that he was more than keeping his time schedule.

Newspaper spirit was injected into the evening when Samuel R. Morpell of "Y" brought forth an aged copy of the AFRO-AMERICAN, in which the elder Murphy had written an editorial for the occasion of a flag-raising. This newspaper spirit inspired discussions ranging from African customs to the high spots in the present administration, and, when it was spiked now and again by humorous "miters" on some of the more humble feelings, brother George said:

Among those present were:

Dr. Thos. I. Brown, Dr. Mary O. A. Reid, Joshua Maxwell, Harry T. Pratt, John H. Murphy, Jr., Grafton H. Brown, George B. Murphy, Sr., Samuel R. Morpell, Howard Murphy, William N. Jones, and D. J. Cornett Murphy.
