HOOVER OVERSEES SAYS KEEP ON SAVING

Herbert Hoover, who is in Europe to study and devise relief measures for the food situation there, asks the American people in a cable sent several days ago not to relax in the slightest degree their conservation efforts. The little nations just released from German oppression, he says, are in dire need and it is to America alone that they can look for succor. It is many months since they had sufficient food to sustain them, and it will be many more before they will have enough food of their own to save them from starvation.

The world's needs and its resources have been weighed, and the result shows that they will be just about equal until the next harvest if America saves to its utmost and eliminates waste absolutely.

The Food Administration's new conservation program calls for rigid economy in all foodstuffs; and rigid economy demands thought and perseverance and conscience. The Administration is not asking for a short, brisk saving campaign in this or that commodity; it is asking for continued, rigorous, and scrupulous conservation in everything. To comply may be somewhat difficult at first, considering the recent relaxation in the rulings, but it is merely another chance for the American people to show that they can accomplish as much without restrictions as with them. They have complied splendidly and enthusiastically with rulings and requests made by Mr. Hoover during the past year, and the results accomplished have been remarkable. They can do as much, and more, without restrictions if they say they will. Mr. Hoover believes it, and he of all people should know. A year and a half ago he said, "We hold it in our power, and ours alone, to keep the wolf from the door of the world. This duty is wider than war—it is as wide as humanity."

Today this appeal is repeated, and there rests Mr. Hoover's case. He believes in the American people sufficiently to be convinced that they will not fail to respond heroically to this appeal to their "world conscience."

In the homes of America is the strength of the people. By household habits national vigor is greater or less. The new conservation program is an appeal to all households to save food.

In winning the war food proved an effective weapon; in keeping it won food will be our most valuable tool.

The war has been brought to an end in no small measure by starvation itself, and it cannot be our business to maintain starvation after peace.

WHY SUGAR RULES WERE LIFTED.

The Food Administration has received a great many inquiries of late as to the reason for the recent removal of the sugar restrictions. In reply, the Administration says that its policy has been from the beginning to adjust its measures for conservation to conservation needs. The public has been duly appreciative of this attitude, and the Administration, in turn, appreciates the spirit in which the public has complied with its every request.

During the past five months, under the sugar ration plan, 775,000 tons of sugar were saved, this amount including, of course, that saved by the restrictions upon confectionery and soft drink products.

The purpose of the Administration in asking for sugar economy was to ensure a supply that could meet the needs of both America and the Allies for the duration of the war. In order to do this, it was necessary to take adequate precautions to guarantee a sufficiency through the year. The signing of the armistice, however, released so much unlooked-for sugar that it was possible to modify our sugar program. Hence the lifting of the restrictions. Economy in the use of sugar, however, is still urged. Don't go the limit just because you can.

STUFFED PRUNES.

Steam one pound of prunes and remove the stones. Stuff part of the prunes, each with another prune, stuff others with chopped salted nuts, or stuff with a mixture of one cup each of raisins and walnuts and a few candied cherries. Another suggestion is to stuff the prunes with a stiff orange marmalade.

PRICES AND PROFITEERS.

Not all high prices are evidence of profiteering. Says Herbert Hoover, "We cannot raise wages, railway rates, expand our credits and currency and hope to maintain the same level of prices of foods. All that the food administration can do is to see as far as humanely possible that these alterations take place, without speculation or profiteering and that such readjustments are conducted in an orderly manner. We are in a period of inflation, and cannot avoid the results."

There are, however, cases that have required stern measures and millions of dollars have been refunded in one way or another to the public. The number of firms penalized is proportionately not large to the total firms engaged.

Until next harvest the American table must be set according to the food resources of the world and the needs of Europe.

There is one food policy that cannot change, and that is the vital necessity of simple living.

The spectre of famine abroad now haunts the abundance of our table at home.

From the inability of governments to secure food for their people grows revolution and chaos.

What is the difference between an OCULIST and an OPTOMETRIST?

The Oculist treats diseased eyes and fits glasses according to the laws of optics. The Optometrist uses the same means for detecting any disease, but does not treat, but refers to the Oculist or family Physician. The Optometrist fits glasses according to the laws of optics just the same as the Oculist, but without drugs or drops.
