To increase grain corn production, either plant part of the corn acreage with a variety early enough to mature grain, if not all of the acreage is needed for the silo, or plant a variety for silage that will mature grain for corn in a good corn-growing season.

TO CANVASS POST-WAR PLANS OF COUNTIANS

As announced in this paper some weeks ago, a county-wide committee of 50 county leaders is actively at work attacking the problem of job openings for returning service men and women. Every business firm in the county is being canvassed. Cooperation in this work has been fine, but not 100%. A canvass by mail is also being made to determine the buying power of the people of Kent, as an indication of need for goods, services, equipment and so forth; as a guide to the number of workers needed to produce—sell—install and service the needs, wants and desires of the buying public.

The head of every family in Kent County is to receive a one page form, on which the recipient is requested to record the intentions of his family to purchase when available. The form requests the party answering to indicate the items they will buy the first year after the war. Then the things they expect to purchase during the succeeding years. This should reveal the items which will be most in demand immediately after the war.

Farm folk (landlord and tenants) receive an additional sheet on which to record their intentions to build-repair—buildings, silos, equipment of quick freeze cabinets, and any other conveniences they hope to purchase all sorts, use of soil conservation practices—conveniences such as electricity, bath rooms, septic tanks, in the later war period. The farmers are requested to list anything they intend to buy during the first year, second, third years, etc.; as a means of revealing the volume of first choice needs. The farmers, like the business firms of the county, also are requested to list their probable labor needs, both year around and seasonal, as further effort to reveal job openings and employment opportunities in Kent County.

The questionnaires are being distributed by County Agent J. D. McVean who stresses the point that no signatures or identifications are requested or expected from the people who cooperate in filling out the forms. This precludes anyone who answers from having his or her name on "sucker lists" and from being pestered with solicitors seeking to sell items in which cooperators may be interested. Mr. McVean stresses the fact that there are no commercial or political connections in the work of this committee. It is purely an unselfish effort to help prepare the way for the normal return of our service men and women to jobs and the American way of living as rapidly as possible in the after war period.
