AT WASHINGTON PLAY CENTERS

By
CLARENCE McI. PENDLETON

WASHINGTON. — Play centers were more or less "washed out" during the past week by the rain. There was a slight falling in the downpour which permitted the Dunbar-Armstrong classic, but Thursday brought many a tear to youngsters who wanted to see the Howard - Lincoln Thanksgiving game.

Rens Win 2 Games in Single Night from Celtics

NEW YORK. (ANP) — Any doubt as to the supremacy of the Renaissance basketball team on the court was completely dispelled Thursday evening when the Rens took the measure of the Original Celtics in two games that night, one in the Bronx by a score of 45 to 33, and then an hour later at the Renaissance Casino, 49-46.

In the latter game, the Celtics got away to a commanding lead and it looked as if they would not be headed off. Reinforced by Lulu Bender, one of Columbia University's stellar players of a year or two ago, the wearers of the green were making it uncomfortable for Bob Douglas's boys.

Wee Willie Smith — a certain was being completely out-jumped by Herlihy in the first half and the Rens just couldn't seem to get going. However, a shift in the line-up in the second part of the program saw, Tarzan Cooper back at his old center position and knocking Herlihy's efforts into a cocked hat.

From that point on, it was a battle royal. First the Celtics were in the lead, then the score would be tied and a Ren man would break away and sink a basket. It was thus until within four minutes of the final whistle.

The Celtics had a two-point lead and were attempting to freeze the ball, but one of the crazy Renaissance players broke through the defense and captured the spheroid, and right away began one of those brilliant passing forays of the Rens working gradually to the basket. And bingo, a shot, then a foul, then another basket, and the Celtics were behind to stay behind.

Wednesday night, the Rens had taken the measure of Red Wolfe's Nationals in the Bronx by a 54-36 score. Thus far this season, the Rens have lost one game, that to the Brooklyn Visitations and by one point. They have met the Celtics three times this year and to date, the Celtics have yet to beat the colored champs.

Clallin Beats S.C. State, 6-0, on Intercepted Pass

BITTERS and SWEETS

By OLLIE STEWART

It has only recently occurred to me that this sports business covers a lot of territory. One while limiting himself strictly to sports, write on almost any subject that comes to mind, and still remain within the confines. There are indoor and outdoor sports. Some well-known and incessantly written about. For instance, teams and games of good clean paper will pressed into service, to tell about Thanksgiving Day football games, which, more or less, closed the official season for 1934.

Much has been written concerning Willis Ward, Michigan University's all-round athlete who was not named on any All-America football eleven, but did manage to get a berth on the second Big Ten all-star team as end.

Simmons of Iowa has and will come in for a large slice of adulation for just about everything what he did for Iowa—and what Iowa did or did not do for him.

Edwin Tolan, according to the papers, is off to Australia on a tour of some sort. We'll wake up any morning now to hear that the former Michigan flash has donned his glasses (or pulled them off, I don't know which he does when he gets ready to sprint) and has run 100 yards or 100 meters in so-and-so seconds.

Then there is the hullabaloo that is already being raised because Morgan, Kentucky State, Texas College and Langston have staunch and loud-mouthed supporters who claim for each of them the mythical national football championship.

Also the death of Tom Bass, veteran horse trainer, went so far as to excite comment in the obituary columns and the first mixed prize fight card in Richmond, not mixed bouts, you will please, mind, caused no end of "Can you beat it?" remarks.

JUST A REMINDER

These bits of history—sports history—have been with us for a long time, so to speak, to remind all concerned that the white athlete has competition from a darker brother in just about any sport you care to name. The right word, for there is one sport in which the colored man has had little to do with.

Tennis, of course.

Nazi authorities have recently repealed the prohibition of studying Hebrew and Latin, and students are once again ringing in the Third Reich.

German youths are once again seeking to have their faces slashed, which leaves permanent scars, better known as badges of courage.

There must be something rather fine in all this—brutal perhaps, but grand and glorious, for many it is a national sport. In American cities it is not so grand and no one boasts of scars. There is a kind of fencing in our fall game.

It is done with razors.

THE TEXAS WAY

And here is what happens when one goes to a high school football game in Houston, Texas, according to the Houston Informer:

"He finds that the man who sells him his ticket is a white man; he finds that the man who takes up his ticket is a white man, he finds that he couldn't have a box seat for himself and his wife, because all of the box seats are reserved for white people (at least there were two rows close enough to the game to see what is going on.

"He finds that he cannot even have the best grandstand seat in the ballpark, as all of these are reserved for white people; he finds that the cheer leaders and rooters for the colored high school teams cannot get the most out of their bands, because the fraternity boys have been removed some distance away and placed next to the white preserves, to entertain and make enjoyment for the white people.

"He even finds a colored policeman on guard to see to it that no colored people even walk down the aisle by the box seats and the white people."

All of which, if you will pardon my Southern accent, is an example of the good old American sport of jim crowing.

But the Texans don't take it sitting. For next year it has been advocated that parents of football players keep their sons home; that ministers urge their members to stay away from any park where such discrimination is in effect, and that every Negro in Houston join in a protest to the school board against such a situation.

Resentment and intelligent efforts to obtain social justice can also become both an indoor and outdoor sport, if you and I stopped long enough to realize it.

In the third period, Art Travers received a punt on his own 35-yard line and dodged his way down, The try for the point failed.

The fourth quarter opened with Mason faking a pass and going through the entire Jacket team for a touchdown. Berry hit the line for the extra point.

With the score 13-6 against them and with only two minutes to play, Billy Jackson went in at end. Mason heaved a beautiful pass to Jackson and he went across, standing up, for the second touchdown for the Jackets. Johnston failed to add the extra point. The game ended with the score 14-13.

Last year the Howard Bisons represented the C.I.A.A. conference in the orange blossom festival, and were defeated by the Famous gridders, 9-6.

Kappa Alpha Psi Tops Shore Legion

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—Minus the services of their stellar forward, Jack Wilson, the Shore Legion quint went down to defeat, 26-25, before the onslaught of the Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity of New York City. The game played on the floor of the Y.M.C.A. auditorium court, was one of the roughest contests ever staged at the shore, the fresh substitutes of the fraternity boys turning the tide of battle.

Pro Battles, Baker, Work and Smith, scored the winners. Gray for the N.Y. fraternity while Hall and Jackson, Gray and James did valiant work for the Legionnaires. The Legionnaires trailed at half time, 17-12.

Southern Announcer Uses Real Dialect in Grid Broadcast

Alabama-Vanderbilt game, Birmingham, Thanksgiving Day, broadcast by a colorful Southern announcer.

The crowd seemed small and concerted cheering absent.

Both teams apparently lacked college songs, for the band played football songs from Harvard, Yale and Navy, and most of the other numbers played, but not included the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," a song that is supposed to make all Southerners see red.

The announcer had his own vocabulary to describe the plays. "The team is lined up conventional (huddle)." "They have adjourned (out of huddle)." "They march up the trenches, get set and go."

Instead of saying the player was tackled by an opponent this announcer declared he was shot by an opponent.

In the names of players, both the first name and title was given, as for example, "Mr. Dan Lewdy went over right tackle for three yards."

As examples of the English, there was "broadcastin' for broadcasting, "kin," for can, "twenty-fo" for twenty-four, "heah" for hear, and "wah" for war. And this so-called Negro dialect was spoken by the white announcer.

Bethune-Cookman Beats Florida Normal, 13-0

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (ANP) — Bethune-Cookman College defeated Florida Normal, 13 to 0, before Thanksgiving Day in another encounter between these age-old rivals. Jones and Garfield scored touchdowns for the winners.

Suspend Boxing Referee and Judge

NEW YORK. (ANP)—As a result of the recent controversy on the Peter Jackson-Sammy Fuller verdict in the Garden last week, Danny Ridge, judge of the fight and Barnes, judge, were suspended indefinitely by the boxing commission. Friday afternoon.

No reason was given for the suspension, but it is believed the ruling is in the form of a reprimand because of the repudiation by the referee and judge of the fight point scoring system which was used for the first time in the Garden last week. Ridge and Barnes voted for Peter Jackson, but after the fight stated that they did so against their better judgment. The new point system entitles a fighter to four points for clearer and harder hitting, and so on.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE.— The Virginia Union Panthers slid, clawed, and splashed their way to a 6-0 victory over the Hampton Pirates in their twenty-minute Thanksgiving Day clash that looked like a combination of a water polo game and a swimming meet.

For two days rain had dropped down on Armstrong Field, rendering the historical battleground muddy and leaving little pools of water all over it. By game time it appeared that all the clouds in the heavens were assembled overhead, and the referee's opening whistle seemed to be the long-awaited signal for them to finish emptying their cold liquid contents on the battling players and the brave spectators who had most accurately anticipated a keen battle to the finish.

The Union touchdown came when the Richmond boys took advantage of a break. It was the first period, Smokey Joe Dismond, backed to punt, found himself a little too wet and as it slipped and sneak across the Hampton goal line, Poole pounced upon it on Hampton's 21-yard line.

Then a steady drive, with Union's weight advantage giving the Panthers a decided edge in the sliding contest, ended in a touchdown. The heroes of the attack were Coleburn and Games, the latter carrying the pigskin over for tally. Poole's place-kick for the extra point was blocked.

The Pirates came within two inches of scoring only a few minutes later. Taylor replaced Culver for Hampton and put Hopson into scoring position by kicking out of bounds on Union's 1-yard line. The Hampton forward wall, determined to block a kick, stuck Coleburn so fast that he was unable to punt any farther than his own 19-yard line.

Hopson then tried and threw a pass from Dismond to Starks made it first down on Union's twenty-yard line. Hopson crashed the line for no gain. Then Dismond picked up three on a hard smash. Hopson made two more at a lick, and it was Dismond who added the last 3 yards to go.

Dismond hit the line with all the force of a trip-hammer, but the referee ruled that the weighty Pirate back was downed two inches from the goal line. The half ended with the ball still deep in Union's territory and in Hampton's possession.

The second half was marked with brilliant individual performances, most of which were good runs and vicious tackles. Union's forward passing attack for the Union boys on their toes all the time. Evening grew tense in the fading moments of play as Hampton fought bravely to score and Union fought desperately to keep them from doing so. Taking the ball on Union's 43-yard line, the Pirates made a series of first downs.

Eight stalwarts, five of Hampton and three of Union, battled the swan songs at the close of the game, Hopson and Poole. The Union men are Everett Poole, Captain; Samuel Jenkins, and Nelson Taylor. Saying bidding good-bye to Hampton's squad are Captain William Bell, Listar Bayard, Sylvius Moore, Reginald Jackson, and Thomas Culler.
