AT THE MOVIES NEXT WEEK

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

Mirth in the ultra-modern manner is the keynote of Damon Runyon's engaging story, 'The Three Wise Guys,' which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer brings to the New Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday, June 1 and 2.

Robert Young is co-featured with attractive Betty Furness in a tale of reckless youth as amusing and pleasant as might be definitely anticipated from the mind of Runyon, whose ideas and people are as fresh as today's news.

The story relates the adventures of a spendthrift boy who, while traveling on a deluxe train, meets a charming girl. The fact that she is living on the dangerous edge of society—drawn toward respectability by the innate fineness of her character, swayed to the half-world by outside influence—lends drama to the wealth of humor.

Certainly they fall in love and the three wise guys who would circumvent the romance are hopelessly defeated in a swift-paced battle of wits and wisdom.

The supporting cast, with Raymond Walburn, Thurston Hall, Bruce Cabot, Donald Meek, Herman Bing, Harvey Stephens and Harry Tyler, provides a set of accurate characterizations which were drawn so sharply in the original by Damon Runyon in his prize winning short story.

Harry Rapf was the producer and George Seitz directed with deep understanding of the story and its mood.

The picture carries us on a modern stream-lined train from the gaiety of New York to the super-gaiety of Palm Springs, with stop-over privileges in Hollywood and at a Pennsylvania farm community. It is a neat slice of typical American life of today, cut diagonally across the continent.

'England expects every man to do his duty.'

This historic phrase sets the keynote for 'Till We Meet Again,' stirring story of a devotion to country that was strong enough to tear a man from the arms of his sweetheart. The picture comes to the New Lyceum on Wednesday and Thursday, June 3 and 4, with Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael sharing leading honors.

'Till We Meet Again' is a story of the War—but not of troops and cannon-fire—rather of the tortured suffering brought to the hearts of lovers who realized that with the first blare of trumpets, their paths led them apart, probably never again to meet.

Marshall, an English actor, and Gertrude Michael, in the role of a Viennese actress in London, are madly in love, and plan to be married, just before the War breaks out. Mobilization wrecks these plans, and Marshall is sent by his fiancee to join his colors. She, unknown to her lover, is a German secret service agent and she, too, hurries to place herself under the leadership of her commanders.

Marshall's fluent knowledge of languages causes him to be assigned to the Secret Service Division of the British Army. He penetrates into Germany disguised as a German soldier. On the verge of discovering secrets of vital importance, he is seen by Miss Michael, who accidentally gives him away to the authorities, identifying him as an enemy spy.

The manner in which Marshall escapes from his German captors, and helps his sweetheart to evade the penalties which the Secret Service deals out to all agents who wish to break away from the service, furnishes the thrilling climax to this action-filled picture.

The supporting cast, headed by Lionel Atwill in the role of the German Secret Service chief, and Rod LaRocque, playing the heroic British spy who sacrifices himself that Marshall may have a better chance to escape, is uniformly excellent.

Robert Florey directed the film for Paramount.

FOR THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibilty rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies within his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.
