THE WONDERBERRY OR SUNBERRY.

Has Proved a Great Success—Thousands Say It's the Best Thing They Ever Grew.

The Wonderberry or Sunberry, the marvelous garden fruit originated by Luther Burbank, and introduced by John Lewis Childs, the well-known Seedsman, of Floral Park, N. Y., has proved a great success all over the country. Thousands of people say it is the best thing they ever grew.

Mr. John Burroughs, the well-known author, Naturalist and bosom-friend of Theodore Roosevelt, says it is the most delicious pie berry he ever tasted, and a marvelous cropper.

A Director of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station says it fruits abundantly even in pure sand. In the short season of North-western Canada it is a godsend, and fruits long after frost has killed most garden truck.

D. S. Hall, Wichita, Kan., says thirty people grew it there last season with perfect satisfaction.

K. S. Enochs, Hammond, La., says it yields $250 worth of fruit per acre with him. Mrs. J. H. Powers, 4732 Kenwood avenue, Chicago, raised enough berries on a space 4x10 feet to supply herself and friends.

J. P. Swallow, Kenton, Ohio, says its equal for all purposes does not exist.

Rev. H. B. Sheldon, Pacific Grove, Cal., says he likes the berries served in any and every way.

W. T. Davis, Enon, Va., says it is true to description in every way, and fruits in three months from seed.

Judge Morrow, of U. S. Circuit Court, says the Wonderberry is simply delicious raw or cooked.

Mr. Childs exhibited one plant five months old bearing 10,375 berries which measured about eight quarts.

Mrs. Hattie Vincent, Hayden, New Mexico, says it stands long, hard droughts of that climate and fruits abundantly all summer.

It is certainly the most satisfactory garden fruit and the greatest Novelty ever introduced.

To check New Jersey's destructive forest fires the State has ordered the railroads traversing its pine forests to clear the ground for 50 feet each side of the tracks and plow up and gravel 10-foot strips to prevent the growth of brush again.

Bacteriologists are now using an electrically heated incubator to hatch germs, because the temperature can be controlled for an indefinite period without variation.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was badly a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE MCKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. AL. HERZOG, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

AGRICULTURE

Relative Profits.

Too many farmers know little or nothing in regard to the relative profits from the individual cows in their herds. Yet to make the daily farm what it should be, this is absolutely necessary. If they will seriously consider the subject they will soon conclude that the pleasure of milking and feeding a cow twice each day and otherwise caring for her is not sufficient compensation for the labor.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Choice of Sows.

One should choose his sows from a breed that is long bodied, roomy in her build, and prolific. You want a large number of pigs to the litter and you want them to have plenty of milk, so pick a sow that will give both. Then cross her with a boar of a compact, easy fattening, quickly maturing type, and these characteristics will appear in the offspring to a marked degree if the breeds are well suited for mating.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Good Roads.

During the winter we have a chance of knowing where the bad roads are if we ever do. We know many country highways that are almost impassible during the winter and spring months. Recently a prominent educational man said to us that he thought good roads were at the bottom of all improvement in rural schools. We cannot have good schools until they are consolidated and consolidation is impractical until the roads are put in at least passable condition throughout the year. And it is true good roads lessen the cost of marketing crops and increase land values. Why do we hesitate about making an improvement?—Farmer's Guide.

Skim Milk and the Pigs.

Where dairies or butter factories are, or where the milch cow is a factor for other purposes than the sale of milk as such, the pig is a most useful and profitable adjunct. Upon the skim milk judiciously used with other and more substantial foods, he thrives, grows and fattens, utilizing a by-product of tremendous volume which without the pig would represent little of available value. It is said that the skim milk from the butter factories of New York alone amounts to nearly a billion pounds in a single year. The use of this skim milk does much to give relief from monotony so common in the hog's feeding, besides adding to the returns from the other or main foods with which it is given, and every hog-raiser is glad to have it.—From Coburn's "Swine in America."

To Control Mildew.

It is very well worth while to have some bushes of the big English gooseberries. They are enormous fruiters, the berries almost as big as plums and of fine flavor; but as stated they are subject to mildew. For years this was considered a fatal defect, now it is recognized that all that is necessary is to give the bushes a spraying early in the spring and at intervals later until bearing time. The spraying solution which has given the best results during several years of comparative trial by the New York Experiment Station is: One ounce of potassium sulphide to two or three gallons of water. This has proven superior to the Bordeaux-soda mixture or copper carbonate solution. The mildew generally makes its appearance during May or early June and it is first noticed in glistening frosty spots on the young fruit and on the lower shaded parts of the bush. Later the spots enlarge and turn brown. If the attack is bad, it will affect the young twigs and may even destroy the bushes in a single year. As with all fungus diseases, the attack is always worse in a wet year than during a dry season. It should be remembered that spraying against fungus is always mainly preventive, and that treatment must commence early in the season, before the disease shows itself.—G. E. M., in the Michigan Farmer.

Tuberculosis in Cattle.

Tuberculosis or consumption in cattle is an infectious and communicable disease known by the formation in the glands and other parts of the body of small bunches called tubercles. It is from these tubercles that the disease receives its name, Tuberculosis. The germs of tuberculosis enter the body by way of the nostrils in the air breathed, or by way of the mouth or digestive tract in feed. As soon as the germs enter the body they begin to multiply, slowly but surely, until the entire body of the animal becomes affected; such animals spread the disease to other animals stabled with them and calves or pigs consuming milk from a tuberculous cow are liable to become affected as are human beings.

All germ diseases, and especially tuberculosis, are more liable to affect animals that are in a run down condition, such as cows afflicted with infectious abortion or retained afterbirth, than those that are in a strong, healthy condition, for the reason that the animal that lacks vitality acts as a hot bed for the germs of diseases to propagate and multiply, while the healthy, strong, vigorous animal may ward off the disease to some extent.

Tuberculosis being largely a house or stable disease due to artificial life such as being housed or stabled every possible precaution should be taken to prevent disease. One tuberculosis cow in a close, foul, hot, badly ventilated stable is liable to infect all other cattle in the barn. To prevent and guard against disease, it is necesary to maintain absolute cleanliness.—Dr. David Roberts, in the Farmers' Home Journal.

Farming an Endless Job.

We are told everywhere that farming is an endless job. The constant routine of planting, cultivating, harvesting and preparing the soil may be handled in such a way that there would be a little rest period between but the endless amount of smaller details that have to be taken care of occupy every moment of the farmer's time whether the sun shines or the clouds o'ercast the sky. It is not the purpose to refute the statement that farming is an endless job but rather to show that there are some things a good deal worse than having an endless job, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

In the first place the farmer who carries on his work systematically is never deprived of a vacation of a few days or weeks, as the case may be. If he will handle his work right he may leave it safely and go away for a change of scene and for a rest. There are countless men scattered over the country who would be mighty glad to have just such a job as the farmer has; that is, an endless job. When a man is away looking for work and when his family is at home suffering for the needs that his wages must buy for them, the bugbear of an endless job loses all its gruesomeness and looks more like a blessing than a curse.

There is another side of the question also. These countless details that make farming an endless job are in variably of a nature that will increase profitableness of the farm and the farm stock. When a man is working in such a way as to constantly increase the value of his holdings he takes such an interest in his work that all the hardship quickly fades away. There are a great many things that are worse than an endless job and consequently there are a great many things worse than farming.

Farm Notes.

Don't let the machinery cry for oil. Oil is the cheapest machinery we have.

Better house the machinery in the winter; clean and oil it and keep it in repair.

The manure spreader is not a passing fad. It is a labor saver and has come to stay.

It is estimated that it costs the farmer more to haul a bushel of grain than it does a railroad to haul a ton of it.

Be sure to drain all water from the steam or gasoline engine as soon as you are through with it. New cylinders and pipes are expensive, and Jack Frost was never known to do them any good.

Remember that the farm machinery manufacturer made the following statement: "If the farmer cared for his machinery as he should, there would be a need for us to manufacture but one machine where we are now putting out two."

If you raise grain why not own a fanning mill? It will pay for itself in one season. There is always some grain that needs cleaning or grading before it is ready for the market or for seeding purposes, and the fanning mill is the machine that will put it in condition.

The gasoline engine requires about one pint of gasoline for each horse-power per hour, or one gallon for running. Thus, a two-horse power engine will use about two gallons in eight hours. Figuring gasoline at 15 cents per gallon, this engine could be run eight hours for 30 cents' worth of gasoline.

The question is often asked: "Which is the best make of machine?" The answer to this is, select one of a standard make that is known to be good, even if it costs a little more than something you cannot be sure about. Select the machine for which you can secure repairs in a short time. It is usually best to buy from your local implement dealer. He should be able to furnish the necessary repairs and will see to it that the machine works satisfactorily.—From "Farm Machinery Notes," by H. M. Bainer.

FARM LANDS IN PANAMA.

Good Soil Found by Government Expert, but Methods Are Crude.

The Panama Canal Zone, considered from an agricultural point, is a country possessed of possibilities, but utterly devoid of plows, farmers, or farming. That is the substance of a report made by H. H. Bennet, one of the experts of the United States Bureau of Soils, after an examination of the land on the canal strip. Mr. Bennet's views of the farming possibilities of the canal strip are not pessimistic by any means.

"We find in Panama the crudest agriculture imaginable," he says in his report. "The people do no plowing or cultivating, but simply put in a few hills of corn, rice, or inferior vegetables and allow nature to do the work. How they can live on these little patches of a half acre or so is more than I can understand at this time. They do live, however, and occasionally sell enough fruit to buy a little rum and some clothes for the older members of the family.

"There are no plows on the Isthmus of Panama, as far as we have been able to learn, except a few belonging to the Canal Commission. There is not a great variety of soils, but they are exceedingly hard to get at. The topography is extremely humpy and rough.

"Trains are scarce and often impassable on foot. They are never passable in a buggy. The only way to move through the uncleared country is to cut a path. So far I have seen two important soils. One is a residual red clay and the other a brown clay loom of alluvial origin. The former covers about three-fourths of the territory explored on the Pacific side.

"I believe that as a result of our investigations there will be some effort to establish school gardens throughout the zone, as a means of interesting the children of laborers and natives in agriculture."—New York Times.

"Yes," replied the girl, "that's it. But, if you please, I'd rather have it bound. It's so easy to lose the pages, you know, if it isn't."—New York Sun.

The Fateful Hyphen.

It happens frequently and perhaps usually, where the hyphen is employed to phrase a controversy, that the losing party of the first part and the winning that of the party of the second part. Thus, in reference to a war, the name of a defeated nation familiarly precedes that of the victor; the Spanish-American War, Franco-German, Russo-Japanese. It was the Cook-Peary controversy as generally phrased from the first; and the result confirmed the rule by a curious fatality. Possibly in the psychology of what seems to be purely an accidental arrangement, the first place is allotted to the apparently weaker controversialist, pending the decision Possibly, too, a sense of rhythm is influential; though this may be more imaginary than real. "Peary-Cook" might not now sound odd had that been the original arrangements. Consider Ballinger-Pinchot. Secretary Ballinger has drawn the first blood; but will he be able in the end to overcome the mystic omen discoverable in the relation of his name to the hpyhen?—Providence Journal.

In response to a growing demand in his home, Henry Kitchell Webster author of "The Sky Man," once went to his father's house, borrowed the family high chair and started taking it home by hand. He had to wait long for his car and, when it finally came, its conductor was a humorist.

"Aren't you pretty big for that chair?" that official ventured.

"Yes," admitted Webster, wearily. "I grew up while waiting for the car."—Success Magazine.

INSOMNIA

Leads to Madness, if Not Remedied in Time.

"Experiments satisfied me, some 5 years ago," writes a Topeka woman, "that coffee was the direct cause of the insomnia from which I suffered terribly, as well as the extreme nervousness and acute dyspepsia which made life a most painful thing for me.

"I had been a coffee drinker since childhood, and did not like to think that the beverage was doing me all this harm. But it was, and the time came when I had to face the fact, and protect myself. I therefore gave up coffee abruptly and absolutely, and adopted Postum for my hot drink at meals.

"I began to note improvement in my condition very soon after I took on Postum. The change proceeded gradually, but surely, and it was a matter of only a few weeks before I found myself entirely relieved—the nervousness passed away, my digestive apparatus was restored to normal efficiency, and I began to sleep restfully and peacefully.

"These happy conditions have continued during all of the 5 years, and I am safe in saying that I owe them entirely to Postum, for when I began to drink it I ceased to use medicines." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Epidemic of Itch in Welsh Village.

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse; as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.
