Romance Between Youth and Age Ends in Tragedy

he insists that 27 is not the right age of Ross.

"That man," he told the coroner, "is nearer 47 than 27."

Officer Thomas Roach, who arrived on the scene a few minutes after the crime, stated that Mrs. Sewell told him that Ross had been in a gambling house and had come back out.

Officer stated that when he arrived, Ross was dead, and hospital examination showed that the victim bled to death.

Beatings Occurred

According to those who know Mrs. Sewell, Ross beat her frequently and on the night of the crime, is supposed to have kicked her in the stomach.

The woman, who is a small-bodied, soft-voiced woman, was committed for action by the grand jury.

Ross's body is still in the morgue and Dr. Ferdinand C. Link, coroner, received a telegram from Ross's legal wife who is in Norfolk, Virginia. She says she did not care to claim the body.

Maddox Returns to Face Charges in Scott Murder trial of Angelo Herndon on "fluke" charges than has ever been shown in any efforts as far to bring Maddox to trial.

Family Pays for Probe

Evidence placed before the grand jury to obtain the indictment of Maddox was not gathered by the state, but through a private investigation directed and paid for by the dead man's family.

Shortly after Scott's death, Maddox was arrested and brought here for the inquest which lasted twelve hours, the second longest in the history of Fulton County. At that time Maddox was freed.

The story of the case reads almost like a novel. On the one side was the young publicist, just thirty, who in a few short years had risen to prominence through the establishment of a chain of newspapers in Southern cities. But along with his business activities, he found time to marry four times. By his first wife he had two children who survive.

His third wife was Ella Ramsey, beauty shop owner, who had once lived in Chicago. She was several years older than her husband. He divorced her and married Agnes Maddox subsequently.

Carried Pistol

When Scott began to receive allege threats against his life a few weeks before he was shot, he obtained a police permit to carry a pistol for protection. He was accustomed to carry the pistol under his coat.

On the night when he was shot, he left his wife's home for that of his mother. His clothes were packed for him, and his pistol put in the suitcase. As a result, when Scott was shot he was unarmed.

Made Death-bed Accusation

George Maddox, for the first time in a year, came to the city when Scott was shot and left immediately afterward. But the following day, he walked into the office of the Birmingham World to inquire about the condition of the wounded publisher. No one there knew at that time that he had been shot.

For several days after the shooting, Scott thought he was going to get well. At that time, he told different versions of the shooting. But when he realized that he was going to die, he is said to have named George Maddox.

His family insists that as long as Scott thought he was going to get well, he preferred to "cover up" on the shooting to keep down any possible scandal, but that when death approached he told the truth.

2000 in Harlem Plan a Fight on Gerrymander

Colored Area So Districted Colored Congressman Can't Be Elected.

DELEGATES CALL FOR A NEW DEAL

Representatives to Be Sent to Albany to Make Fight.

NEW YORK. — Two thousand Harlemites, delegates from sixty-five organizations of all political, religious, social and civic faiths, Tuesday night sat and stood through five hours of speaking and planning as the Harlem political union entered on the battlefield to get a state senator and Congressman from Harlem's election districts.

Martin J. Healy, district Democratic leader; and Chase Mellen, Jr., Republican state chairman, both white, were present. Father Michael Mulvoy, Catholic priest; Father Divine, and A.M.E. bishop, Reverdy C. Ransom, were on the same platform, and spoke.

Young and old, some white Harlemites, commoner and college-bred; all presented such a united front as Harlem has seldom seen.

District Lines Assailed

The meeting was called to bring pressure to bear on Albany so that in the present plan of redistricting the state, Harlem's 300,000 citizens, all living in one community, will be able to elect a colored candidate to as high an office as Congressman.

At the present time, five assembly districts cut into black Manhattan in such way that Harlem's colored votes can never elect a colored man. Harlem's 21st Congressional District is the largest district in the county.

Full Rights Demanded

Stressing community needs, and declaring the political union was not waging a race war, resolutions were passed, and as a result, affiliated organizations named one hundred delegates to carry the fight to Albany.

"Clean ballots, get together and fight so that Harlem shall no longer have taxation without representation," was the dominant idea of the meeting. All speakers contended for full social, economic and political emancipation.

Finley Wilson Speaks

Among the other speakers were: J. Finley Wilson, Alderman Connel A. Johnson, John Clifford Hawkins, John William Smith, Lamar Perkins, Edward D. Johnson, all former aldermen or assemblymen; John L. Royal, veteran realtor; and the Rev. H. King.

Telegrams came in from Washington and Albany, pledging support to the campaign. Allan Dingle, president of the union, presided.

Mitchell is Absent from H. U. Prexy's Birthday Party

Congressman Declines to Pay $1 to Get in Presidential Mansion.

HOWARD U. TO GIVE MITCHELL RECEPTION

Olive Branch Offered to Heal the Breach.

Mrs. Bertha Lomack, Mrs. Estelle Jackson and Mrs. Alma J. Scott.

Congressman Mitchell is reported to have said in reply to the invitation to attend President Johnson's birthday party:

"No! I've been here for some time and the president of Howard University has not seen fit to say anything to me."

Dr. Johnson Sees Mitchell

Last Thursday, three days before his birthday party, Dr. Johnson, accompanied by Dean Edward P. Davis, of the College of Liberal Arts, waited on the Illinois Congressman in his office in the House Office Building and extended to him an invitation to attend a reception to be given at the university by its officers, in honor of the Congressman.

Questioned, Dean Davis told an AFRO reporter this week that he and President Johnson extended the invitation to the Congressman and that the Congressman requested that a committee on arrangements be appointed to plan the reception and submit their plans to him, through Dr. Johnson, for approval.

Dean Heads Committee

Dean Davis was appointed to head the committee, he told the AFRO, and he and his committee are at work making plans.

Asked when the reception would take place, Dean Davis said that it would depend on the Congressman, who, after approving the plans, would set the date.

Mitchell Duck: Reporters

In keeping with his statement last week that he would not grant interviews to newspaper reporters, Mitchell was successful in dodging two AFRO reporters this week and therefore no statement concerning the affair could be obtained from him.

"Too busy," "In conferences," "On the floor of the House," or some similar statement greeted reporters who called at his office in the Congressional Congressman.

Members of the committee who arranged the birthday party for Dr. Johnson could not remember whether they invited Congressman Mitchell or not, when questioned about the matter. They could not remember whether many members of the local alumni attended the reception or not.

President Given Bag

One thing each of the three persons on the committee could remember, and that was that the president was presented with "an elaborately-fitted bag."

The subscription price of the banquet was one dollar, and circular letters of invitation, placing stress on the one dollar, were sent "to members of the faculty and administrative officers of Howard University."

Robeson Pleased with Soviet Social Scheme

Says Only Color Question Works to His Advantage.

FINDS FREEDOM FOR ARTISTIC EXPRESSION

Will Move His Family to Soviet Soon.

Soviet Union. While here he expects to play the leading role in "Stevedore." He will probably play the leading role in "Black Majesty" also.

Robeson will a t under the direction of Sergei Eisenstein, noted Soviet film director.

A reception was given to Mr. Robeson upon his arrival in Moscow which lasted until 2 a.m. When asked if he had seen a race question in the Soviet, Robeson answered: "Only that it seems to work to my advantage!"

In an interview with Vern Smith, he said:

"I feel more kinship to the Russian people under their new society than I ever felt anywhere else. It is obvious that there is no terror here, that all the classes of every race are contented and happy under the government."

Robeson commented on the absence of slums, on the huge buildings of workers' apartments in the factory districts, such districts as are favorably compared to capitalist cities. He declared that he will make an extensive study of the club life of the Soviet workers, especially as the clubs serve centers of instrumental and vocal musical training, and of dramatic art.

Plans Researches

He has "selected the Soviet Union as a most proper center from which to conduct his researches, and as the only country giving him unstintedly the social and other environment in which he can systematically complete his research and work towards this new form of artistic expression.

He says that he intends to remain in the Soviet Union until about the middle of January, then will have to return to England for the final completion of the film on African life and to wind up his other affairs there.

Then sometime during 1935 he will come with his whole family to the Soviet Union for a prolonged stay, working on his researches and on the first steps of the new form of drama and opera, meanwhile singing and acting in the Soviet theatres, and moving pictures.

Sings in Russian

At the reception given in his honor here, Robeson sang, besides several workers' songs and spirituals, four selections in the Russian language: two from the opera Boris Godunov, one old folk song and a Cossack lullaby. Hearty applause and the voiced opinion of thos: present testified to his success in this rather difficult Russian language.

He has deliberately and for a long time been laying plans and preparing to move to the U.S.S.R. as the most suitable center for the important work of artistic innovation which he has in mind, and because he has decided on the basis of much evidence that it is a place where a man may do such work with greatest freedom and facility. He said in his interview that he is more than satisfied that the Soviet Union is just such a place.

tractors are so unconcerned about the safety and beauty of the building that they had the building half up when it was discovered that no space had been left for a door. It was necessary, it is stated, to knock a side of the wall out to make room for the aperture.

Time Element

Another charge which burns the students up is the fact that the building was scheduled to be ready for use on January 1, and it is highly problematical whether it will be ready by March or even April.

Just what this means to the students can only be appreciated when it is recalled that it is the first year that Lincoln has had a chance to cop a basketball championship in several years, and has a perfect C.I.A.A. schedule but no place to practice.

Use Whites' Gyms

The delay on the building forces the team to travel to Oxford or Coatesville to use the gyms of the white schools when they are available, which is not often.

Add to all these complaints the apathetic manner in which the school administration winks at the lily-white policy of the contractors. While many skilled and unskilled laborers in the community are crying for work it is easy to trace the causes of unrest and dissatisfaction.

Espionage System

Students also charge that the white faculty members are combatting the agitation which has been brewing for some time by developing an espionage system which keeps them informed concerning the activities of radical leaders.

The campus is said to be infested with "stool pigeons" who exchange information for class-room and other favors.

Public mass meetings have been suppressed and the disgruntled students find it necessary to confine their activities to secret caucuses to avoid being railroaded out of their views.

Some, however, have dared to quiz the administration on its lily-white policy but got no answer to their inquiries.

Many Grievances

The grievances of the students are many, and most of them center around the color question.

The administration has been repeatedly asked to intercede on behalf of the students and have the jim-crow policy of the two Oxford motion picture houses rescinded, but the students have received no cooperation on this score.

One white professor is alleged to have told the students point blank that he was being paid to instruct them in the classroom, not to solve the race problem. He advised them to go home and get a job and go out doing good-will, but he did not see how he could do both at the same time.

Missionary Work

A bad psychological effect is had on the students, it is charged, by the insinuation of inferiority propaganda which is systematically instilled into the students in an underhand manner.

Whenever the students rise up and clamor for certain rights they are constantly reminded that the white people who comprise the faculty do so at great sacrifice merely as missionaries, and that the poor colored students should be ever grateful for the great opportunity they are being given. They are reminded of the deplorable state and status of the race.

Students contend that this instills a sense of inferiority into the students and instead of building men fit for leadership, they are being turned out with their minds psychologically and morally handicapped.

Jim-Crow Schools

The existence of jim-crow public schools in the Lincoln University community is also cited as agitating points.

The system of this commonwealth is controlled by members of the Lincoln faculty, it is alleged, and the school for white children is of the highest building in fine house, while the colored building, in the community across the street, is called the "annex."

Just what effect the blowing-down of the gymnasium on all these social problems is not advanced other than this was the straw that broke the camel's back and brought all the other grievances to light.

Christ's Church Is Scene of Two Solemn Rituals

Memorial to Late Dean to Continue at Grave on Sunday.

THEOLOGY HEAD ALSO HONORED

Gaither's Aide Speaks at Service.

Two services, one a memorial for the late Dr. George W. Kennard, dean of Christ's Institution, and the other in honor of the Rev. Cyrus W. H. Briddell of the theological department of the institution, were celebrated at Christ's Institution Church, 7th Ensor Street, during the past week.

Three altars bedecked with flowers, attended by a priest giving mystical chants, lent unusual awe and reverence to the memorial service on Friday night. The exercises will continue throughout the day this Sunday. Following the 11 o'clock service, the procession will depart for the Laurel Cemetery. There, a short ceremonial service will be presented and a wreath placed on the grave of the deceased dean.

"Briddell Evening" was celebrated at the church on Sunday, and took the form of a consecration service. During the ceremonial, bands were laid on the heads of the Rev. Mr. Briddell and the Rev. J. H. Walters, who has charge of the science department of the church college.

Commissioner's Aide Speaks

The principal message was given by the Rev. Howard Thompson on "Sacrificing Our Bodies for God," while substituting for the Rev. George J. Garnett, pastor of the Morning Star Baptist Church, a welcome address was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Walters, and a solo sung by the Rev. James E. Smith. Prof. George H. Keene spoke on "A Recipe for Greatness."

These preparations were followed by an address by Mr. Brennan, secretary to Police Commissioner Gaither, who spoke on "Law and Order." The Rev. Mr. Thomas H. Hall, pastor of the church, presided. A letter relative to the Rev. Mr. Briddel from Woodstock College, where he spent six years, was read by James Wilson, secretary to the pastor.

Into the pan 1-3 of the batter, smooth it off, and cover with one of the papers. Pour in another third and cover it with the second circle. Add the rest of the batter and bake as usual. When cooled the layers will separate easily. Just before serving, whip the cream untill stiff and fold into the jelly, which has been beaten until frothy. Spread this over the first layer and cover the filling with thin slices of banana. Add the second layer of cake, spreading it with filling and more bananas. Put the third layer in place and cover the top and sides of the cake with the filling, garnishing it with the rest of the banana slices. Cut in wedges or slices and serve.

Hot Mushroom Sandwich

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 medium cream of mushroom soup
Thin slices of meat
Slices of bread
1 hard cooked egg
Minced parsley

Blend the melted butter with the flour, cooking gently for a minute over a low heat. Add the soup and cook until smooth and thick. Cut the crusts from the bread slices. Place the meat (chicken, veal, beef, or ham) between the untoasted sides. Arrange each sandwich on a separate plate and pour over it some of the mushroom sauce. Press the yolk and white of the egg through a sieve, sprinkling it over the sauce. Top each with bits of minced parsley and serve hot. On this same plate should go potato chips, or serve a small helping of fruit salad instead.

Peanut Butter Fudge

2 cups sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup peanut butter
1 tablespoon vinegar

Mix together the sugar, milk, peanut butter and vinegar. Boil slowly until a few drops in cold water form a firm ball (236 degrees F.). Cook until lukewarm, then beat until creamy. Pour into buttered pan and cut into squares.

Individual Sandwich Loaves

For each loaf use three slices of bread cut 2½ x 4 inches. Spread the first buttered slice with chopped pickles. Add the second buttered slice and cover this with chopped ham blended with minced pickles and mayonnaise. Add the third slice, unbuttered, and press all three together. Spread over the stack a thin layer of cream cheese blended with a little tomato catsup. Garnish the top with a slice of stuffed olive and radiating "petals" of sweet pickle slivers.

Mince Meat Tarts a la Mode

Prepare a fairly rich pastry and roll it thin. Cut into rounds and fit each of these into a small greased and floured cup cake pan. Spread the inside of the pastry cups with melted butter, then fill with meat. Arrange narrow strips of pastry across the top of each in lattice fashion, then press the edges of the cup with fork dipped in flour. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Cool slightly and turn the tarts out onto individual dessert plates. Just before serving drop a small ball of ice cream on the top of each.

Eat Eggs in Winter, Urges Health Chief

Eating of eggs in the winter time because the yolk is rich in vitamin D and of the failure to get much sunshine which stores up the element in the body, is suggested by Ferdinand A. Korff, commissioner of food control, of the Baltimore Health Department.

The number of possible hours of the sun is diminished by clouds, fogs and rain and snow, and foods containing vitamin D should be included in the diet, the director states. Eggs protect the consumer from certain deficiency diseases which might otherwise occur if the vitamin D-containing food is not eaten in sufficient quantity, it was pointed out.

"Ordinary milk and cod liver oil," according to Mr. Korff, "contain some vitamin D, but it is not very generally known that the yolks of eggs are a rich source of
