Cupid And Cost Of Living.

The relation between the cost of living and the activity in the issuance of marriage licenses is recognized as intimate, even though the economists may not be able to express the subtle fact in a mathematical formula. But there can be no doubt that Cupid keeps an eye on the market prices of provisions, even though he may have little use for the tailor.

There can be no doubt that this sprightly promoter of felicity has abandoned the old fallacy, enticing but illusory, that two persons can live as cheaply as can one. Perhaps that untruth in domestic mathematics took form at a time when girls were different in some material respects from the maidens of today. It was once the fad that they should be delicate, without appetite, taking food after the manner of birds, with anemic results. They were more fond of cakes and sweetmeats than of prosaic bread, potatoes, and roast beef. In those days there might be more economy in the feminine menu, even allowing that cake costs more than bread. But the girl of today is brought up to be buxom and robust. There has been a reaction, both sensible and widespread. She takes proper pride in her appetite and in her muscles, which she has learned are not at all inconsistent with gentle sentiment. She emulates her brothers in fondness for the open air and for suitable athletics.—Washington Post.

A Delicate Proposal.

A Scotchman who had survived three wives and who had a fourth in contemplation decided upon a delicate method of proposing to the latest object of his affections. Accordingly, he took her to walk one afternoon and before she realized where their footsteps tended they had arrived at the graveyard, where his lost loved ones lay buried. Standing between the three tombstones he said:

"There lies Jeannie, there lies Grissel, there lies Maggie, and," he added, pointing to the next vacant space and taking her hand tenderly, "how wad you like to lie there?"—New York Times.

A statistician has figured out that last year's broom corn crop was so small that each American family can have but one and one-seventh brooms this year without allowing for business houses, corporations or municipalities.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. Ford, 2207 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

The College Journalist.

At the University of Missouri is the first working school of journalism in the world. As practical laboratory work, a daily paper, with telegraphic reports, is issued. Walter Williams, its dean tells of the vicissitudes he encounters in turning laymen into journalists.

A student was sent in haste to cover a railway wreck at a twon a few miles away. It was almost time for the daily to go to press, and still no word had been received from the young man on the assignment.

In desperation Dean Williams telegraphed, asking why the story was not forthcoming. The reply was "Too much excitement. Wait until things quite down."—Kansas City Journal.

Something Missing.

A Canadian farmer, noted for his absent-mindedness, went to town one day and transacted his business with the utmost precision. He started on his way home, however, with the firm conviction that he had forgotten something, but what it was he could not recall. As he neared home the conviction increased, and three times he stopped his horse and went carefully through his pocketbook in a vain endeavor to discover what he had forgotten. In due course he reached home and was met by his daughter, who looked at him in surprise and exclaimed: "Why, father, where have you left mother?"—Leslie's.

An Emotional Witness.

A witness in a railroad case at Fort Worth is called to tell in his own way how the accident happened, said:—

"Well, Ole and I was walking down the track, and I heard a whistle, and I got off the track, and the train went by, and I got back on the track, and I didn't see Ole; but I walked along, and pretty soon I seen Ole's hat, and I walked on, and seen one of Ole's legs, and then I seen one of Ole's arms, and then another leg, and then over one side Ole's head, and I says, 'My God! Something muster happened to Ole!'"—Everybody's.

Paternal Love.

A young mother went up stairs one evening to be sure that her son was safely sleeping. As she paused at the door of the nursery she saw her husband standing by the side of the crib, gazing earnestly at the child.

As she stood still for a moment, touched by the sight, tears filled her eyes, and she thought, "How dearly Frederick loves that boy!" Imagine the shock to her feelings when he suddenly turned toward her and said:

"Amelia, it is incomprehensible to me how they can get up such a crib as this for three dollars and sixty cents."—The Youth's Companion.

THE STORY OF THE PEANUT SHELLS.

As everyone knows, C. W. Post, of Battle Creek, Michigan, is not only a maker of breakfast foods, but he is a strong individualist, who believes that the trades-unions are a menace to the liberty of the country.

Believing this, and being a "natural-born" scrapper for the right, as he sees it, Post, for several years past, has been engaged in a ceaseless warfare against "the Labor Trust," as he likes to call it.

Not being able to secure free and untrammeled expression of his opinions on this subject through the regular reading pages of the newspapers he has bought advertising space for this purpose, just as he is accustomed to for the telling of his Postum "story," and he has thus spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in denouncing trades-unionism.

As a result of Post's activities the people now know a whole lot about these organizations: how they are honeycombed with graft, how they obstruct the development of legitimate business, curtail labor's output, hold up manufacturers, graft upon their own membership, and rob the public. Naturally Post is hated by the trades-unionists, and intensely.

He employs no union labor, so they can not call out his men, and he defies their efforts at boycotting his products. The latest means of "getting" Post is the widespread publication of the story that a car which was recently wrecked in transmission was found to be loaded with empty peanut shells, which were being shipped from the South to Post's establishment at Battle Creek.

This canard probably originated with President John Fitzgerald, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who, it is said, stated it publicly, as truth.

Post comes back and gives Fitzgerald the lie direct. He denounces Fitzgerald's statement as a deliberate falsehood, and underhanded and cowardly attempt to injure his business, having not the slightest basis in fact. As such an effort it must be regarded. It is significant that this statement about "the peanut shells" is being given wide newspaper publicity. In the "patent inside" of an Eastern country paper I find it, and the inference naturally is that labor-unionites are insidiously spreading this lie.

An institution (or a man) which will resort to moral intimidation and to physical force, that will destroy machinery and burn buildings, that will maim and kill if necessary to effects its ends, naturally would not hesitate to spread falsehood for the same purposes.

We admire Post. While we have no enmity toward labor unions, so long as they are conducted in an honest, "live-and-let-live" kind of a way, we have had enough of the tarred end of the stick to sympathize thoroughly with what he is trying to do. He deserves support. A man like Post can not be killed, even with lies. They are a boomerang every time. Again we know, for hasn't this weapon, every weapon that could be thought of, been used (and not simply by labor unions) to put us out of business, too?

I am going to drink two cups of Postum every morning from this time on, and put myself on a diet of Grape-Nuts. Bully for Post!—Editorial in The American Journal of Clinical Medicine.

HOME IDEAS and ECONOMIES

Artistic Lamps.

Many clever women find most beautiful lamps for their drawing rooms or dining rooms by buying a vase of quaint design with a suitable receptacle for oil and having a burner fitted to the top at some lamp establishment. In this way one can easily find pottery to harmonize with the furnishings of the room and have a wider range of choice than by making a selection at the lamp shop.—New York Journal.

When Dusting.

After the room has been swept and any dust there may be has settled, the woodwork should be wiped with a damp cloth, using a little whiting on the cloth for dirty places in the case of paint or turpentine on a dry cloth for varnish.

Don't forget that the pictures need dusting, the backs as well as the fronts.

See that everything is moved for dusting. Dusty rims around ornaments proclaim a careless housekeeper. The best plan is to have the first duster slightly damp, and finish off with a dry one.—New York Press.

Washing Gingham.

The following is the recipe for washing gingham:

Make a hot suds from a pure soap—not one strong with alkali—and in this put an even tablespoonful of kitchen salt to one gallon of the soapsuds to set the color.

When well mixed, put in the garment to be washed, rub it on the hands and dip it up and down. Do not rub on soap. Rinse in two waters and lastly in faintly blued water. Wring dry as possible, shake out and hang in the shade to dry.

If any starch is used it should be thin. Do not starch a skirt above the hips. Shake out the goods before hanging.—New York Telegram.

To Clean Old Glass.

Antique glass which does not require mending, but is dim and lusterless, may be made to shine and sparkle once more if it is washed in water to which a little ammonia has been added.

Soapsuds spell ruination to crystal ware, while drying it with a duster only serves to dim it still more. After having rinsed and left it to soak in ammonia water, using a soft brush if the glass is cut into facets and the dirt has caught in the squares, the article should be placed in a box and covered with sawdust. After an hour it will be found that the wood dust has dried the glass and given it a bright luster.

The old-fashioned cut crystal decanters which are so much used nowadays become almost hopelessly discolored when they have held old port or any wine which leaves a deposit. To clean them an old-fashioned remedy is that of fine chopped potato skins with which the decanter should be filled, and a cork inserted in the mouth in place of the stopper. This should be left for three days for the skins to ferment, when it should be well shaken, emptied, and rinsed with clear water. The decanter should either be reversed and left to drain for a day or two or may be dried more expeditiously at the side of the stove.—London Standard.

Recipes.

Egg Lemonade—Beat 1 egg to a froth, then squeeze in the juice of 2 lemons; slice the rest of the lemons with 2 cups of sugar and mash thoroughly. Then add the egg and juice and 3 pints of water and pieces of ice.

Meat or Potato Croquettes—Two cups meat or potato, chopped fine, 1 tablespoon of butter, 2 tablespoons of flour, little salt; mix together, then dip in egg and rolled cracker crumbs and fry in hot fat. Be careful not to burn them.

Cucumber Jelly—Cucumber jelly is delicious with cold meats or salads. Pare cucumbers and scrape fine enough of the pulp to fill two tea cups; stir into this salt, pepper and juice of a lemon; dissolve 3-4 ounce of gelatine in 1-2 cup hot water; stir this thoroughly into the pulp; pour into a mould and serve when cold.

Fluffy Cake—Cream six ounces butter with a quarter pound sugar, add two eggs well beaten. Sift in half a pound of cornstarch and two teaspoonfuls baking powder, beating well. Mix one tablespoonful milk with one teaspoonful vanilla extract and stir in. Butter and flour gem pans, half fill with mixture. Bake in hot oven for ten minutes.

Sweet Tomato Pickle—Slice green tomatoes and sprinkle salt on them; let them stand over night. In the morning turn off all the water. Take a gallon of vinegar, flour, a pound of sugar, tablespoon of whole cloves, stick cinnamon, 1-2 tablespoon of kernels of black pepper. Put all in a kettle and boil until tender. Don't skin the tomatoes, and if you prefer the spices up in small bag or net.

Tomato Soup—One can of tomatoes; or 1 quart of fresh tomatoes, sliced and boiled in 3 pints of water one and one-half hours and strained, 1 tablespoon of flour, dissolved in water and stirred in, butter the size of an egg, 1 pint of milk (sweet) scalded and poured in just before it is ready for the table; a little pinch of soda improves it. Some add a spoonful of sugar, and whipped cream is a great improvement, added last with a little salt and pepper.

Spaghetti, Tomato Sauce—Push half a pound of spaghetti into a saucepan of boiling water. Do not break spaghetti. Boil for 30 minutes; drain and throw into cold water. Put one tablespoonful oil or butter into a saucepan, add one sliced onion, one teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of paprika and one pint of strained tomatoes. When boiling add spaghetti, then add quarter pound of grated cheese, stir till cheese is melted and serve at once.

WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES SUSPECT THE KIDNEYS.

Backache is kidney ache in most cases. The kidneys ache and throb with dull pain because there is inflammation within. You can't be rid of the ache until you cure the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

J. F. King, 221 W. Union St., Jacksonville, Fla., says: "Dull, nagging backache and irregular action of the kidneys bothered me for five months. Doan's Kidney Pills proved just what I needed, driving out the pain and restoring the kidneys to normal condition.

Pessimism And Potatoes.

There was a time when "plain living" required as little definition as "high thinking" still does. But, alas, with the science of dietetics the troubles of the poor layman have steadily multiplied. He hardly knows what to eat, or how.

Here is a London expert advising him to "cut out" potatoes from his diet without regard or mercy. Potatoes, the aforesaid savant asserts, causes chronic dyspepsia, depression, worry and premature death; they contain no nutriment and overtax the digestive apparatus; the idea of eating them is too absurd to be tolerated another day.

Now the potato has been a godsend to millions in times of famine, and it has figured prominently in all plans for the simple life—compulsory or preferred. If, however, it is really the cause of pessimism and nerveousness—diseases of the age, as they have been called—we must not put it on the index of forbidden foods for the sake of the joy of life. But are we not entitled to ask for something like a unanimous verdict of the specialist jury? How about the perplexity and pessimism caused by divided opinion on things that so closely concern us as the potato does?—Chicago Record-Herald.

Where Bacon Lived.

Fulwood's Rents, the little Holburn court leading into Gray's Inn Gardens, which will be largely rebuilt, formerly possessed the privilege of "sanctuary," and hence became a notorious resort for fraudulent debtors and still more unpleasant characters. Yet this dingy "dive" can boast of many glorious memories. Francis Bacon lived here in Fulwood's House and valued his furniture at £60, a huge price for that period. Here the Whig Club and Melbourne and Oates' Club met in the reign of Charles II., and here stood Squire's Coffee House, from which several numbers of the spectator were dated.—Westminster Gazette.

Permanent Position.

"Mr. Smith," spoke up the young lawyer, "I came here as a representative of your neighbor, Tom Jones, with the commission to collect a debt due him."

"I congratulate you," answered Mr. Smith, "on obtaining so permanent a job at such an early stage in your career."—Success.

SHE QUIT
But It Was a Hard Pull.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such condition as it did an Ohio woman. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not, and could not quit drinking it, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around, had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. For months I never went to bed expecting to get up in the morning. I felt as though I was liable to die any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one time it came over me and I asked myself what's the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions and I want to tell you, that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I now like better than the old coffee.

"One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework and have done a great deal beside."

Profit From Pests.

It is always a gratifying economic development when through science, experience or even accident those things which hitherto have been regarded as objectionable or injurious are made valuable. The Australians are now sending their surplus of rabbits in cold storage to stock the game larders of Europe. The malva plant, long the scourge of Cuban planters, has been found to be susceptible of conversion into an excellent quality of jute. Those midnight marauders, the skunks, are being domesticated for their fur, which ranks high among the cheaper grades.

The fur market is a rising one; more in proportion, perhaps, for cheap furs than for the expensive. The trolley and automobile have increased the demand enormously. The people who buy rich furs are constantly becoming more numerous, and they have their imitators among the many who can afford only the lower grades. But muskrat farming would be a good occupation for farmers' boys. That part of the business and its profits, which would interfere but slightly, if at all, with the main service, might be left to them. Then, perhaps, not so many would improve the first opportunity to escape to the cities.—Boston Transcript.

It Suited Him.

The late Patrick F. Sheedy, the well known gambler, always cautioned young men against gaming, though he had been himself so successful at it.

"Never gamble," he said, one winter day in his art shop, to a New York reporter. "A gambler, in his despair, will stake his life and his honor to win a dollar or two."

"The desperate gambler is, in fact, like that poor fellow who rented a steam-heated flat one very cold winter in Eight Hundred and Ninety-seventh Street.

"As this man sat reading in his overcoat and gloves one evening, a little group of firemen burst in on him.

"'Quick!' they cried. 'Stir yourself! The house is afire!'

"'Very good,' the man replied, turning a page calmly and selecting a fresh cigar. 'Very good, indeed. It will be the first time this flat's been warm this winter.'"—Washington Star.

How to Keep Baby's Skin Clear.

Few parents realize how many estimable lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of the proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic and torturing, disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings dispelled.

To this end, nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the use of Cuticura Soap, assisted when necessary, by Cuticura Ointment. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. The Mongoose Story.

"Do you remember the story of the man who walked along the street one day carrying a basket on his arm. A friend said to him: 'What is in the basket, Tommy?' 'A mongoose,' said Tommy. 'You see, my brother has been drinking hard, and lately he has been bothered by rats and pink mice and spotted snakes and other venomous creatures. Now a mongoose just eats those things alive, see? So I am taking this mongoose to him to kill those rats and snakes.' 'But, Tommy,' said the friend, 'don't you know those are imaginary snakes?' 'That's all right,' said Tommy. 'This is an imaginary mongoose.'"—Chicago Daily Socialist.
