DOUGLASS Cagers Capture Close Tilt from DUNBAR

Douglass Scores 30 to 23 Victory Over Dunbar High

WASHINGTON — Playing a strong defensive game which kept his locals' score low until the late stages of the game, the Douglass High School quint of Baltimore, Sunday, in its initial invasion of the city this season, def ted Dunbar High School's basketball team, 30 to 23, at the Cardozo High School gymnasium.

Gaining a 9-7 advantage during the first period of the game, the Ducks, led by Lewis and Pearson, guards, readily increased their advantage over the Poets until late in the encounter when the Sunbarites came within three points of the Baltimore team's score.

The score at half stood 17 to 9, with the Ducks on the long end.

Poets Minus Center

The Poets were slightly handicapped by the loss of Bob Fenwick, center, during the majority of the playing time. Fenwick injured three personal fouls early in the game and was benched by Coach Jacobs until the second half.

He committed the fourth offense late in the fourth period as the Poets were in the midst of a rally and left the game via his personal foul route.

However, he was high-point man for the victims, with four goals from scrimmage and five goals from the free-throw line.

Lewis, who counted five field goals, and Pearson with a duo of field goals and a trio of foul throws, led the Ducks to victory.

Is This a Record? Armstrong Scores 84 Points in Game

WASHINGTON—Piling up what might be a record score for South Atlantic high school conference circles this year, Armstrong High School toppled another opponent, Friday, when Mayfield High School of Fredericksburg, Va., a new conference member, fell victim, 84 to 18, at the Terrell Junior High School gym.

Led by Joe Hall, veteran Tech center, who rolled up ten floor baskets to garner high point scoring honors, the Generals walked away with the encounter. Handicapped by the lack of substitute players, having only five available for participation in the game, the Mayfield quint never proved threatening to the locals' attack.

Inter-Nos Routs Douglass, 37-29, in Fast Contest

The Inter-Nos five upset the Duck basketers, 37 to 29, in the Douglass gymnasium, here Thursday night. Selby, Inter-Nos guard, flipped the first score of the game, which was tied a minute later by Green, Duck center.

Playing heads-up basketball, the teams fought to a 5-6 count which was not broken until early in the second quarter, when Pearson, forward, gave the one-point lead to the Ducks with a shot from under the basket.

Visitors Take Lead

Spurred on by Dais, captain and guard, the visitors took a 20-10 lead before the end of the period. Selby was forced to retire because of four fouls as the quarter ended, and Green, the victim, of both free throws, leaving the score 20 to 12 when the whistle blew the half.

Jazz Butler, Duck star, opened hostilities as the game continued, but the Inter-Nos five was still leading 30 to 18 when the third quarter ended. Jazz, with twelve points, was high man. Wilson, placed with eight points, while Bowen showed seven.

Boasting their second consecutive victory, the Junior Varsity dropped the Sportsters' AC, 18 to 12, in the prelim.

BITTERS AND SWEETS

By OLLIE STEWART

NO GIRLS' BASKETBALL!

I wonder if any person or persons can tell me exactly why there is basketball competition for young men only, in the CIAA?

I wonder why, for instance, Morgan College does not have a team of young women dribblers; or why Virginia State co-eds, or those of Howard, Bluefield, Hampton and (no, I can't quite include Lincoln in this) Union can't meet on light-footed courts just like the big-he-men do.

During my spasmodic visits to Morgan, I seem to remember seeing potential rage stars swaying along the walks, in a most delightful manner. Yet, to my knowledge, the recent CIAA officials prepared no schedule by which young women may engage in intercollegiate activities, especially basketball.

Personally, I am rather fond of young women; no one who knows me will deny that. Most young men are, and should be, fond of young women. But few young men, if any, are ever made boon companions.

Young women in boarding schools, who do nothing more serious than manicure fingernails or cavort at a dance now and then, are certainly not receiving all they deserve in the way of physical development.

"Basketball is too rough for girls," I heard it said recently.

Basketball is not too rough for girls when played according to the rules set down for girls. Collegiate athletic authorities have considered the amount of exertion young women require and can stand, and have codified regulations for girls' basketball games with this in mind.

So, if conference powers come to earth long enough to realize that young women today do just about everything else young men do; and that young women need exercise during the winter months (and basketball is the answer), they might easily schedule games for the girls, to be played as preliminaries to the boys' games.

Little additional expense would be called for. And the presence of young women might possibly add a few nickels to the box-office receipts, should anybody want to be cold-blooded about the matter.

Will someone please tell me why it would not be practical to have a preliminary game tonight (Friday) between Union's girls and Morgan girls? I should appreciate being informed.

NORDIC PSYCHOLOGY

Gilbert Browne, 1231 N. Bond Street, recently wrote to a local sports editor:

"I am a colored man and a great admirer of the all but magical Maxie Baer. . . .

"The great Jack Dempsey was another of my pugilistic idols. . . . When they began calling Harry Wills the leading contender for Jack's crown, I used to hope that they would never meet, because I knew Dempsey would just about kill him.

"And while it is my opinion that a world's champion should be compelled to meet all comers, regardless of race or creed, my admiration for Dempsey was never affected by his refusal to meet Wills.

"I think a black man has as much right to aspire to a pugilistic championship as anyone. After all, boxing is not a society affair. And if Joe Louis proves himself worthy, he should be given a chance.

"I am glad Maxie has shown himself to be white both inside and out. . . ."

As indicated, there was more to the letter than is quoted here. Upon reading it, I seem to remember hearing the expression, "He's one of the whitest men I know," at some previous time.

It is no crime to be white. It's no crime to be proud of being white. It's no crime to use white as a criterion for a man's worth; that is to say, to let white stand for the last word, the zenith—perfection.

Still, I fail to see the virtue of any colored person's use of white as a criterion. White people themselves are proud enough of the color of their skins; they make white the last word and everything else a badge of inferiority. But they can be excused, because they are white.

The Nordic psychology that makes white mean perfection; that makes the expression, "He's a real white man," mean that the person in question is "the top," is the sort of psychology a colored man can have and promulgate only to his damnation.

It will act as a boomerang. It will eventually come to mean that to be "black both inside and out" sets a man apart as being exactly opposite what Mr. Browne wants us to believe Max Baer is.

Baer is white and the best, they the man who is black must necessarily be something else.

MARRIAGE RACKET

Racketeers seem now to be all-inclusive. This week it was called to my attention that there is a heated rivalry between the ministers who hover around the license bureau at the city clerk's office, upon unsuspecting and fluttery couples who have to secure from the legal right to live as one.

Complaints have been heard from several quarters concerning this procedure. It has been said that the gospel men take their business so seriously that the poor frightened about-to-be bride and groom do not have time to consider for the last time what they are about to jump into.

The ministers evidently feel that after the license is paid for, there should be no more hesitation; and the quicker the knot is tied, the better for all concerned.

Those who were heard to complain, think themselves deprived of a constitutional right when they are hurried into this fatal step. They want to be able to choose the person who shall doom them to their fate, at least.

Dunbar Defeats Cardozo, 18-15 in Rough Game

WASHINGTON — Out-scoring the Clerks from the foul line, the Dunbar High School quint, Friday, gained its first win in the South Atlantic high school conference series, defeating the Cardozo High five, 18 to 15.

Aided by two sensational baskets from mid-court by Flatney Marshall, the Cardozo flash, the visitors went into the van, 15 to 13, with only si. minutes remaining for play. Pete was a home jinx for feat as Rucker and Hayes, whose defensive work had proved a great help to the Purple and Gold cause, were disqualified via the personal foul route.

Vocational Bows, 21-23, to Cardozo

After tying the count at 15-all for the third period, Coach Jim lead as Wilson scored from ta off. This was followed, however, as Marshall, sessions, sub center, and McKelvin sank baskets in rapid succession, and a foul shot by Powell sent the Purple and Gold count soaring to 23.

Miner Surprises; Nips Howard, 45-36

WASHINGTON — In a basketball game that saw the score deadlocked from no less than a half dozen times, Miner Teachers' College Saturday night, Washington, defeated Howard University's quintet, 45 to 36, at the Miner gymnasium, before an overflow crowd.

Play in the contest was so fast and furious that the lead changed so often that it will be impossible to recall the last time the encounter that the future teachers were leading the visitors.

Off to a fast start, the Martin-coached five took a 16-7 advantage on the Bisons early in the game. Howard came back with a 16-9 score in their favor, as Boots Williams, Howard subsitute, sank a long shot. The lead for the Bisons just before the half was twenty-one, 21-16.

Bisons Even Count

In the second half, the Bisons with Jones and Wynne, stellar forwards, who were able to register only eight points between them the entire game, shooting slightly better than their mates, forged and closed the seven-point gap and tied the score at 32-all.

From this point until within the minutes of the conclusion of the forty minutes of play, the game was a nip-and-tuck affair, with the lead alternating consistently.

Thrice in that last three minutes, the Teachers were on the verge of a victory, but Howard, away to seal the victory as Cook, Hubert and Brown shot successive baskets from mid-court.

Howard was slow in the game, the Honesty and Parker teamed to score 11 points for the Bisons.

Jimmie Talbert, southpaw forward of the Teachers, was a thorn in the side of the Bisons, scoring the sensational goal while giving difficult angles on the floor. McNeil, center, and Brown, guard, aided their mates materially with ten and nine points, respectively. Jim Parker, Williams and Bayton led the Bisons's attack with seven and six points, respectively.

Awaiting Joe's Arrival

SAN FRANCISCO (ANP) — Frisic fans last week were seriously awaiting the arrival of Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing sensation, who was scheduled to arrive for the West Coast following his recent victory in Philadelphia.

Downingtown Tops Cheyney, 34 to 9; Skeelers, 32 to 24

CHEYNEY, Pa.—Downingtown Industrial School and Cheyney State Teachers' College opened their M3A basketball season here on Thursday evening with a 34-9 victory for Downingtown over its college rival.

Each team showed rough spots in its court work. Cheyney, playing its first game, was woefully wanting in shooting and did too much fouling.

The Downies, with a slight defense and a greatly improved offensive, failed to take advantage of their free shots, making good on only four of twenty-three tries.

The Downingtown pill-pushers took the sting out of the Rho Kappa Pi Skeelers, when they posed out the Philly countrymen, 32-24, at Downingtown, Saturday night.

The win was the fourth straight for the Downtown quintet.

In a preliminary, the girls' varsity quintet racked up a 27-15 conquest of the Boys S. S. with Al Bradley tossing eight doubledeckers through the cords for high-scoring honors.

P.A.L. Basketball Tournament to Get Going Next Week

The P.A.L. amateur basketball tournament will get under way next week with enough teams for two divisions competing for the coveted title.

The Red Circles are out to defend the amateur supremacy that have been closely guarding for the last four years. The Royal Dukes and Rens A.C. have indicated their intentions of defending the champs.

Other teams entered include the Pilgrims, last year's runners-up, Douglass Centers, Secret Five, Alpines, and Wilberforce Five. The deadline for entry is Tuesday.

The Red Circles have won two legs on the Urban League trophy.

Commanders Romp Over Rho Kappa

PHILADELPHIA — The giant passers of the Commanders Club romped over the Rho Kappa quintet at the Seger Recreational Center, by the score of 45-24.

C. Sykes, towering forward, piling his first game with the Commanders, was the star. He scored ten points, four field goals and two fouls.
