DR. RILEY, OF MINNESOTA, GETS OFF SOME FRESH AND ORIGINAL REMARKS.

The Legislature of Minnesota, the other day, had before it a bill to prohibit the manufacture of wine in this country. In opposition to proposed internal revenue legislation, He said that it was "damnable thing," and "shame to a legitimate and honorable industry." He said:

In the place where he resided there were a large number of Germans who had come from the old country and planted grapes, and now they were magnificent vineyards, stretching along the hillsides, where formerly there was not grass enough to feed a sheep. They raised large quantities of very fine grapes, which they shipped every year to Chicago, New York and all over the country. They make very fine wine, too, and he loved to drink it, because he thought it did him good.—This legislation would destroy those vineyards. The proposition was like that proposed in New England several years ago, when it was proposed to cut down the apple trees because some tramps went around begging hard cider for inebriating purposes. Such a law would destroy 40,000 trees in the State of Minnesota.

The great legitimate information I have, proceeded the speaker, of the manufacture of wine, is when Jesus Christ made it.—He set it before his disciples and commanded them to drink. He ought to follow his example and it will do us good. "Give strong drink to them that are ready to perish, and wine to those that be of heavy hearts." (Laughter.)

Now let us consider whiskey and alcohol—that good old American drink.—[Laughter.] I was born in Southern Illinois several years ago. My father's before me was a distiller, and almost the first thing my eyes rested on after I was born was a still. My father never sat down to dinner without a bottle of whiskey on the table, and we all drank it.—Ever since I can remember I have been in the habit of taking a drink of whiskey, wine or beer every day. I have skipped a day I have forgotten it. They say that whiskey kills men and bloats them. It hasn't killed me, and I ask any member of the House to say if he thinks it has bloated us. [Great laughter.] I don't look bloated. [Renewed merriment.] I am a physician, and I have no hesitancy in saying to it whiskey is the most vitalizing stimulant we have. When great injuries are inflicted on a patient the best thing is to give him a little whiskey, for the purpose of putting his blood in circulation.

If the Anti-Whiskey crowd are serious in helping the cause of temperance, let them do as the saloon-keepers do. [All over this city—all over over this State—from 11 to 2 o'clock, you can go into a saloon and get your glass of beer and all the lunch you want to eat for 5 cents, and if you haven't any money you can sit down and eat your fill, and never be kicked out. I myself have seen lots of men who hadn't a cent go into a saloon when they were hungry and tell the saloon-keeper the fact and they would be invited to help themselves from the sumptuous lunch counter. That's the sort of bidding the saloon-keepers make for patronage. Let these temperance people follow their example and establish places where a poor devil can get a cup of coffee for 5 cents and not be in danger of being kicked into the street if he asked for a piece of bread. [Laughter and applause.] This is the way to advance the cause of temperance, not by passing such laws as this one. I tell you this thing won't last long. There are millions of dollars invested, property tied up in this State, which pays large taxes, while this miserable shanty of every poor man is taxed to the utmost. The time is coming when all this property will be lost. Men will force us to do it, and we will soon do it.

The Prohibitionists claim that drinking tends to impoverish the people. For God's sake, do we believe that? Look at the Germans. Many of them take a piece of land which would scarcely support a hog, and make a fortune of it.—They all drink lager. They take their wives and their children to the beer garden, and sit down and drink their beer every day, and even the babe in arms will stretch out to get a taste of it. These people are not impoverished by it. These people are so healthy in my neighborhood that I have actually not been able to make a living out of my German constituents, and I have been obliged to run for the Legislature in order to get money enough to buy bread. [Great laughter.]

They say, too, it tends to the degeneracy of the human race. How does it happen that in New England, where prohibition laws are in force, the race has so degenerated that they don't seem to be able to raise any children? There the families don't average one child apiece. Look at the Irish, who drink whiskey all the time. You will find seven children in every Irishman's shanty in the country. That's the effect of drinking whisky. Look at the Germans, who drink beer all the while. You will find a large family of children in every German's house. Are they degenerate? The children of total abstinence people are constantly dying. From the vital statistics of Minnesota I learn that over 2,000 children died last year under two years of age. They would not have died if they had been fed on good, wholesome beer. I would advise mothers—and have advised them in my practice—to give their sickly children plenty of beer and whiskey, for all I know I have cured many an infant's life. Beer is the best cure for dyspepsia in the world. I have cured women of the terrible disease by advising them to drink three glasses of beer every day, and I say to you mothers who are here that if you will drink beer and whiskey and feed your children on whiskey [illegible] raise more children and [illegible] [Great laughter.]

Referring to the vital statistics of the State, I find that but six months of intemperance, from the last year, two of delirium tremens and four of something else which they couldn't tell anything about, and so called it intemperance.—And yet you want to stop drinking. Eleven years ago I passed a law against the same thing. Why don't you abolish horses—never use them nor go near them? Thirty-five committed suicide. Why don't you prohibit the use of fire-arms, knives and ropes, and drain all our lakes and rivers for fear some poor fool will drown himself? Some 152 died of heart diseases. I don't want any heart in mine. Twenty ladies were scalded to death. You ought to prohibit the use of hot water for fear that more ladies will get into it and perish. [Laughter.]

England, away across the sea, has brewed beer for 2,000 years, and will continue to brew it for 2,000 more, and to the fact that English people have drank beer all that time I attribute her present greatness. Shall we say that the sun never sets on her dominions? Beer drinkers are slow but sure. Look at Germany, that great nation. We couldn't pay her for the money we have borrowed of her. Her great army, the finest in the world, was raised on beer. In America, where we drink all kinds of liquors, we are the greatest nation in the world. If injury is done, the wine is not to blame, but the poor devils who don't know enough to take care of themselves. It is good sense to give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine to those that be of heavy hearts. [Laughter and applause.]

Why is a railroad train in motion a safe place in a thunderstorm? Because it is furnished with a conductor.

Every farmer should have good fences, good farm houses, good orchards, and children enough to gather the fruit.

Ask a man's advice, it is not stooping, but of much benefit.

I do not resort to them, but I would not place a dollar in an awkward position so to recommend me above any other person. That's the kind of a man I am.
