From the American Farmer.

Soiling Cattle.

Messrs. Editors:—I was pleased to learn from the last number of your paper that the Deer Creek Farmers' Club had discussed the question whether soiling cattle was profitable. I adopted the system of soiling many years ago, and am satisfied that I have derived great benefit from it. The extra labor attending it is not so great as some of the gentlemen who participated in the discussion supposed. Like a great many other problems in life, the difficulties which appear to attend them disappear or diminish when we attempt their solution. I doubt if any person who tries the system, after making the necessary preparations for it, could be induced to relinquish it. It is absolutely necessary to success, that the preparation should be thorough, otherwise it will be followed with disappointment. It consists simply in making the land rich where soiling material is to be grown, so that it will at the start produce all that it is capable of. It will be readily seen that one of the chief objections to soiling is removed if every square rod of ground cultivated for soiling is made to produce four-fold more than it would under ordinary cultivation, and this is easily done.

A great variety of soiling crops is neither necessary or desirable. A first crop of clover, (the second never,) green corn and lucerne, can be safely relied on to furnish the main supply. Especially is the last article named valuable, not only because it is a rich food and cattle fond of it, but also because on land properly prepared for it it will produce four good crops a year, of more than a ton to the acre at each cutting. Superadded to this, reseeding becomes necessary only about once in a quarter of a century. If treated fairly it may be said to be what it is called in Germany, "everlasting clover." Its roots are like whip cords, and penetrate the soil to a great depth, so that droughts do not seem to affect it. What is not fed green makes as good hay as was ever put in a barn. Cultivating this crop does away with the necessity of using the plow to any very great extent in providing green food, thereby lessening very materially the expense of soiling.

The other serious item of expense, in the opinion of some of the members of the club, is taking care of and feeding the cattle. If rightly managed this will not be as great as at first supposed. This part of the business should be entrusted to a single person; he should have his stated times for cutting the food, feeding the cattle and cleaning the stable, and it should be done with the utmost regularity. It will be readily ascertained how much time it takes to attend a given number of cattle, and then it will be known what may be properly required of the person having charge of them.

It is not necessary to cut green food for cattle each day, nor is it desirable to draw it to the barn and feed it before it has parted with a large percentage of its water. Cattle are much more fond of it in a wilted state, and they thrive better on it when given in that condition.

If the farmer who enters upon this system when he is ready for it, will open an account in which he debits the extra expense it involves and credits the saving which it enables him to make, he will be pleased with the result. He will not only be able to find his cattle when he wants them, and keep many more on the same area, but with what satisfaction he can contemplate the possibilities of his manure heap, which, like the widow's cruse, will never be exhausted. Poor soils can be made rich, and those that are rich already can be made richer still. The ratio between farm expenses and farm production will be soon changed for the better, and there will be less necessity for investing in commercial fertilizers.

There are other advantages growing out of the soiling system which I have no time to refer to here, but they will readily be revealed to any one who tries it.

I omitted to mention, in its proper place, that lucerne will grow luxuriantly in any deep dry, rich soil, and make a larger return for the labor and expense involved in its cultivation than any other forage crop.

WILLIAM FULLERTON,
New York.

Should Horses be Shod.

The question of shoeing horses is discussed at length in Fraser's Magazine for December. The writer thinks that horses are now worn out at least fourteen years before they ought to be, and that in this the United Kingdom loses $675,000,000 every twenty-one years. Different causes for the injury of horses are mentioned, but the writer thinks that abuses of their feet are the most serious, and he asks:

"If the working of the traditionary system leaves the horse a wreck almost before he has reached his prime, if the lessening of the weight of iron and of the number of nails used in fixing the iron has been followed by direct and important benefit in every instance; if even those who hold that a horse must be shod have discovered that which they look on as a protection to the fire foot is merely harmful to the hind feet, is it possible to stifle the suspicion that this insignificant remnant of a system so fruitful in mischief may have no magic power, and, in short, that the horse may do just as well without them?" In his reply to this he says:

"The plain truth is the difference in the quality of the soil, be it hard or soft, stony or sandy, smooth and slippery, is of comparatively little importance to the horse whose feet are as nature made them. In the words of 'Free Lance,' the unshod horse can successfully deal with all roads; and assuredly no one will dream of asserting that shod horses can do this, for on the setting in of frost, for instance, they cannot be worked until certain ceremonies shall have been gone through at the blacksmith's forge. The unshod horse can tread firmly on the slime of wood pavement when shod horses are slipping and struggling in agony around them; he can gallop on loose and trod for miles together on the hardest and roughest flint roads, with far more ease and comfort than horses whose feet are shod with iron or even with gutta percha. 'Free Lance' rightly remarks that if they could not there would be an end of the thing, for evidently the horse should be able to go anywhere and everywhere, and at a moment's notice. It seems hard to produce the conviction that the natural sole of the horse's foot is almost impenetrable, that it is so hard and strong as to protect the sensitive sole from all harm, and that all feet exposed to hard objects are made harder by the contact, provided only that the sole is never pared. The horse is clearly intended by nature to serve as a domesticated animal, and so long as we do not interfere with the proper function of any part of his body (and the abomination of bearing reins and other such practices interfere with them grievously and even fatally,) we bring it under no conditions which it was not designedly calculated to encounter. It cannot, indeed, be too strongly insisted on that the foot of the horse in no way needs to rest on soft and yielding surfaces."

Farm Notes.

A writer in the Practical Farmer gives the result of experience in saving flower seeds. No general rule can be laid down, each sort requiring special treatment. Pansy seeds must be saved while they are quite green, as the pods burst as soon as they turn yellow throwing the seed several feet. Plants of phlox are pulled up when a fair amount of seed is ripe, and spread on a large sheet in a warm garret. On a small scale hand-picking may do. Petunia and portulacca are treated in the same way, except that the portulacca plants are cut off, and they grow up again for another crop. Verbenas must be hand-picked twice a week for several weeks.

A London live stock journal, speaking of horseshoeing, pertinently remarks: If the farmers or blacksmiths are anxious to do something useful at a small expense, let them publish an illustrated broadside fit for hanging in blacksmith shops, telling smiths and their masters what not to do. 'Don't carve the frog, don't open the heels, don't rasp the outside of the hoof, altering shortening the toe, if needed, fit the shoe to the foot,' and so on, as common sense dictates.

A writer in the Farmer's Review gives the following remedy as a sure preventive against the ravages of the cabbage worm. Place the suds used in washing in sunshine until soured. When the worms appear give the plants two or three sprinklings. This has proved a success. Several persons have tried this simple remedy and raised the best cabbage they ever raised, and consider it a success.

The New York Herald recommends as an excellent remedy for sprains, sores and bruises, sprained hock joints and stiff joints generally in domestic animals, a liniment composed of creosote, one ounce; olive oil, two ounces; mix and rub upon the affected parts. It is also of great advantage in the stable and for for.

Water slightly acidified with nitric acid is recommended for soaking seeds; a very little ammonia added to the water greatly accelerates germination.

An insane physician poisoned two men to death at Lyon, Minn., before his insanity was discovered.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is extracted from a peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1110. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

Only Imported by HAYLOCK & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS FOR AMERICA, 7 Dey St., New York.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and personal observation.

Among the many readers of the Review in one part and another of the country, it is probable that numbers are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said: "Write at once to Haylock & Co., 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Mercantile Review, Sept. 2, 1865.

and on and after that date the collector will be prepared to receive the taxes, and will allow the following discounts on both State and county taxes, WHEN PAID IN CASH.

On August Payments	5 per cent
On September Payments	4 "
On October Payments	3 "

Special Notice.

The attention of tax-payers is especially called to the provision of the new Code of Public General Laws, which says, emphatically, that the collector shall collect and pay over the taxes within six months after receiving the books, and in the event of his failure to do so, he shall be liable to prosecution and severe punishment.

This means that the collector, having received the tax books on the 3d of August, 1880, is obliged by law, by his oath of office and by the bond he has given for the faithful performance of his duty according to law, "to collect and pay over the taxes within six months," that is by the third day of February, 1881.

The collector has no discretion in the matter. Having accepted the office, he is bound to execute its duties in accordance with law, and he will therefore be obliged to collect by the summary process of distress or execution of all taxes that are unpaid on the third day of February, 1881, and notice is hereby given that all tax bills for 1880 in arrears on the third day of February, 1881, will be collected by the legal process.

Tax-payers should therefore make haste to comply with the requirements of law so as to pay their taxes for 1880 before February 3d, 1881, and thereby save costs, trouble, and much unpleasantness.

I have been using John Lucas & Co.'s Celebrated Enameled Ready-Mixed Paint, very extensively for the last two years and have tested it very thoroughly, and after using from eight hundred to one thousand gallons in 1879 alone, I have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best paint in the market. The following qualities make it superior to any I have ever used:

1st. It has no water in it, and can therefore be used in the coldest as well as the warmest weather.

2d. Two coats of this paint will give as much satisfaction as most other paints with three coats.

3d. One of its most desirable qualities is its uniform thickness; it is not so thin in warm weather as to be fit only for priming, nor so thick in cold weather as to not spread easily and evenly.

I have the exclusive sale of it in this county.

I have obtained the signatures of the following persons upon whose houses I have used this paint during the years 1877-78-79, (all of these houses were new and most of them finished with only two coats) and they recommend it as entirely satisfactory in solidity, brightness and durability.
