IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE.

Two years until today;
I sing my gentle lay:
Our Anna sleeps;
Her dust that rests below
The green turf or the snow
Her Savior keeps

Till in the Eternal Year,
Round of the heavenly sphere,
We all have come,
Our joys and trials past
With God to be at last
And there find room

In his own dwelling place
With those that see his face,
The pure in heart,
Upon the sunlit shore
With eyes from which no more
The teardrops start.

Companion of my youth!
Our vows we made in truth
That Christmas Eve,
As we together stood
And in the sight of God
That we would leave

Or forsake never, one
The other; now well done
Your sweet troth is;
Sacrament more divine
Dear faithful heart is thine
For you are his.

Our thirty blessed years
He kept your jeweled tears
In His own thought;
Such treasures pure and sweet
Your gifts unto His feet
As Mary brought.

Rest now, my bonnie bride!
Taken from by my side
In life's noonday;
A better place is thine;
May it some day be mine!
With Him for aye.

Shine brightly mid-day sun!
Your gracious beams upon
The spot where lies
The wife, the mother true
Who paid each day anew
Her sacrifice

Of love and duty till
It was the Master's will
That she should rest;
Her weary head to lay
After her well spent day,
Upon His breast.

Shine softly stars of night!
Blow zephyrs, mild and light
Above her tomb,
Till in that glad Spring day
God's precious seed laid 'way
Like flowers bloom.

"I'M LITTLE, BUT I'LL TRY"

Brave Child of Section Foreman Saved Train and Set Example for All Others.

She was only seven years old, Eileen Martin, the section foreman's daughter, as she stood reaching up to a telephone at the little town of Alta, Cal., telling the agent at the nearest station that a rail was broken. Childlike, she knew the semaphore signals, had come to the track to see the Overland Limited whirl by and had watched the long finger drop, letting the train into the block.

"I'm pretty little, but I'll try," she said, when the station agent asked her if she could not stop the train that was past him, and started out with her sister of fourteen who had just appeared. They ran down the track, stopped the train and saved a wreck.

Pretty much every primary school in the city ought, within the next week, to hear of Eileen's "I'm pretty little, but I'll try." The alert attention which knew the semaphore signal, the quick wit which understood what a broken rail meant, the decision and initiative which alone sought the telephone, the courage with which she and her sister started up the track, waving their aprons to stop the big Overland Limited as it bore down upon them—these are the qualities which through life bring self-help, for others, success and happiness.

And she was only seven years old, "pretty little," but ready to "try."—Philadelphia Press.

WORKED LONG FOR SUCCESS

Mrs. Stannard Wrote Steadily for Years Before "Bootle's Baby" Made Its Hit.

It is interesting to recall just now that the late Mrs. Stannard, otherwise "John Strange Winter," once described herself as a woman writer but not a "woman's righter." Yet there was certainly no lack of character or brain power about the author of "Bootle's Baby," who was indeed an eminently capable woman with a clear, well-balanced intellect, much robust common sense, and a great capacity for organization, which served her in good stead when she turned from literature to commerce.

Struggling authors may be interested to know that it was only after ten years of incessant work that Mrs. Stannard, who lived to write something like one hundred books, scored her first real success. And even this might not have been achieved but for a little piece of luck, for "Bootle's Baby," the work in question, had then been rejected by six London publishers and cast aside as hopeless. Mrs. Stannard's husband, however, happened to pick up the manuscript one day, read it, liked it, and suggested that he should send it to the Graphic. Mrs. Stannard answered: "Send it anywhere you like," and no one was more astonished than herself when in due course the Graphic took it.—Westminster Gazette.

Interesting Antiquities.

One of the huge stones of the Avebury Druidical circle, which is much larger and older than Stonehenge, has fallen owing doubtless to the effects of weather. Aubrey, who acted as guide to Charles II on a visit to this district in 1663, declared that Avebury as far surpassed Stonehenge as a cathedral does a parish church.

The rampart and fosse enclose nearly 30 acres, but of the original 600 stones there are now only 18 standing, the number in 1722 being 44. In addition to the circle Avebury possesses an interesting church dating from before the Conquest and an Elizabethan manor house, while a mile away is Silbury hall, the largest artificial mound in Europe, being 135 feet high and having a base which covers five acres.

Bunting Thoroughly Tested.

In very truth a modern battleship does, in modern phrasing, carry some bunting. About $150,000 is spent by the United States navy for flags each year. Every case of bunting costs the government $560; every roll costs $11.25. The bunting comes from Massachusetts. Every piece is subjected to the most severe test. It must weigh five pounds to every forty yards and stand the weight test of seventy pounds to two square inches. It is steeped in salt water for six hours and then exposed to the sun for the same period of time. If after this treatment it continues to be bunting of a distinguishable color it is pronounced fit for service.

Snakes in Plaster.

In a small part of a South Carolina swamp represented on the second floor of the American Museum of Natural History is included a snake group among the logs, vines and water hyacinths. The group shows side by side poisonous snakes, the water moccasin, and the non-poisonous, the brown water snake.

An example of the deadly moccasin water snake of the south is made from a wax cast by James C. Bell, with color work by Frederick H. Stoll. It is extremely lifelike and realistic, quite enough to give the visitor an acquaintance with the species.
