over one and a half million bushels in 1934. Admitting that a good many of these were not planted properly, or possibly, were not planted at all; yet, we should have had some results if the system was right.

On the other hand, the Conservation Department planted approximately sixty thousand bushels of seed, an investment of around $8,000 and to date, there have been removed from those areas approximately 150,000 bushels, resulting in a profit to the watermen of around $60,000 and I understand many more will be taken from these areas before they are depleted. It is true that those areas will be cleaned up in three or four weeks, but had the Conservation Department planted ten times as many as they did, there would have been sufficient areas to carry the dredgers, tongers and scrapers throughout the season, which would have resulted in a tremendous increase in the supply and naturally, reduce unemployment and relief to a minimum.

To obtain this supply of seed, shells must be planted in the seed area and in any area where spawning occurs and when the spawn is in the water. Ten thousand bushels of shells, planted at the proper time, is far better than planting a million bushels in a haphazard manner.

Different areas in the Bay will probably spawn, or rather, spawn will appear in the water, in different months and the Conservation Department has the facilities of the Biological Station at Solomons Island to ascertain just when the spawn appears in the various areas. If there is no spawn, I am told the northern states do not plant shells at all.

If there is a large catch of spat in any area they will not mature to marketable size Oysters until they are again transplanted.

It is my firm conviction that if the Government could, or would make an outright grant of an additional $100,000 for the purpose of planting seed Oysters, (if we didn't have sufficient seed, they could be purchased from Virginia) that relief and unemployment in Tidewater Maryland would be eliminated, so far as able-bodied men and women were concerned, within a year and a half.

In other words, if this program could be completed in the Spring of 1936, there would be no relief or unemployment in the Fall of 1937 and I believe that results could not be obtained quicker in any other way.

Poachers Use Wire To Trap Shore Ducks

Federal And State Authorities Move To Stop Slaughter Of Wildfowl

Federal and State Conservation officials are planning an intensive campaign against the poachers that each year slaughter thousands of ducks in the tidewater counties of Maryland.

A quiet investigation has revealed that the trapping of ducks, a procedure that has been against the law for years, is being carried out on a wide scale in the back country regions on the islands bordering the bay. It is reported that so great has been the slaughter in some sections that dressed wild ducks have been selling as cheaply as 75 cents per pair.

It has also been reported that certain restaurants on the lower shore have put wild ducks on their menus, selling them to known customers. Strangers, however were served farm-yard ducks to avoid creating any suspicion.

The trackless marshes in the vicinity of Chesapeake Bay are the hunting grounds of the trappers. Hundreds of ducks are taken in one haul by the large-scale operators, who strike quickly and move their hunting locations frequently.

A report that several "blunderbus" crews are operating is also under investigation. A waterman, who for obvious reasons declined to allow his name to be used, said:

"The trapping of ducks is a very simple matter, and hard to detect.

"A mesh wire is spread over the surface of the water, with raised sections at one end. The water under the wire is heavily baited, and a trail of bait leads to the entrances. The ducks, attracted by the bait, dive through the doorways and come up under the wire. In their struggle to free themselves, they are drowned. By dawn the trappers are out to collect the kill."

The blunderbus hunters operate from boats. Guns carrying a terrific charge of shot are mounted in the bows. The boats are rowed into a sleeping flock of ducks, and a brilliant flashlight turned on. The damage done by one discharge of the big gun is appalling, according to Conservation officials.

Because of the noise made by the guns, this form of poaching has been largely abandoned during recent years.

The most spectacular form of illegal hunting ever uncovered in this territory was shooting from an airplane. One day a strange plane appeared, and began diving at ducks, frightening them into the air. Then a man in the cockpit, armed with an automatic rifle blazed away at the birds.

No effort was made to collect the game, and it was apparently just killing for the sake of killing.

"THE FLAME" EXTINGUISHED

Our Senior Class Play, "The Smouldering Flame", was a success, thanks to all those who contributed time and material for making it thus. We played to a full house. The profits will be used for the expenses of the commencement exercises. All those taking part in the play did their best to make it interesting and we enjoyed acting as much as the audience enjoyed seeing us act. We are very proud of our successful entertainment.

JUNIOR NEWS

We certainly are glad that the senior play was a success. We sold candy to earn money for the Junior Prom. We took in a few dollars which will help very much.

We are very glad that the Holidays are here and we wish everyone a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

SOPHOMORE NOTES

Once every week ,usually Monday, we have "Current Events", a weekly newspaper published especially for schools. It is one of the most popular studies with the sophomore class. Miss Sewell our teacher, makes it more interesting by appointing a chairman each week to take charge of the lesson. The important parts missed are then discussed by Miss Sewell. We rather enjoy asking instead of answering questions. Last week the current event of most importance was about the life of Andrew Carnegie, of whom, of course, we had all heard. This year marks the hundredth anniversary of his birth.

FRESHMAN NEWS

We have been studying a section about clothing in science. We have learned how to test materials so that we can tell the true quality of clothes. To test cotton or wool, put the fiber in lye solution; if it is cotton it will shrink a little, but if it is wool it will dissolve. A test for distinguishing wool from linen is by burning it. Wool burns faster than linen. Real silk is much stronger than rayon when wet. A test on this section brought success to most of us. We are all glad to see the Christmas holidays and hope that the New Year will be even more successful than the old for all of us.

St. Peter's Church was built in 1826 through the efforts of the bride's maternal ancestors. The wedding of Mrs. Owens was the first nuptial mass there of any of the descendants.

Following the ceremony, a breakfast was served at "Bolingly" for the immediate family and close friends. Decorations in keeping with the season, together with white roses and carnations for the table, colored the historic Friel home.

After the breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Owens left on a motor trip through the south. Mrs. Owens' going away ensemble was of ashtaupe woolen fabric, trimmed with beaver, with hat and accessories to blend. After March 1, the young couple will take residence at 3016 St. Paul Street, Baltimore.
