Richmond Restaurants

AN OPEN LETTER

A Norfolk paper, in its January 22, 1938, edition, carried in its column, "Merry-Go-Round," written by "Bill" Jordan, the following statement: "It is odd that the large number of people in Richmond would not support an up-to-date restaurant. From Washington throughout the deep South, it is impossible for colored travelers to get a decent meal. There is no place for a man to take his wife and family for a Sunday's meal, in case he wants to give the wife a day's holiday from the kitchen stove."

I hereby call attention to the fact that my hotel and dining room have been approved by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. During the years I have been in business, I have served most of the leading colored people from coast to coast and they have lauded my service. Our hotel carries an A class rating in the State Department Inspection Board. In our dining room we serve the best of food.

The writer of said article, at one time was proprietor of a restaurant said in Richmond and had the opportunity to offer what he termed a "decent" eating place, but has left the city for one in more other cases and like is he destined to do now.
