Leaders Laud Character of George Biddle

Rites for First Colored Principal Were Held Saturday

BALTIMORE—Outstanding Baltimoreans paid homage to the late George W. Biddle, 84, first colored school principal, at funeral services conducted by the Rev. Robert F. Coates at Sharp Street M.E. Church, Saturday.

Mr. Biddle, until his retirement in 1926, was the oldest living school teacher in the city. In that year, he had served the school for thirty-seven years. Previous to the combining of the Waverly schools with the school system he taught in that section and in Kent and Baltimore counties for fourteen years.

Dr. Wood Talks

Dr. Francis M. Wood, representing the department of education said: "No man was more highly respected than Mr. Biddle. The history of Baltimore schools would not be complete unless Mr. Biddle's name were added."

Dr. Miles Connor, president of Coppin Teachers' College, representing the principals' association said, "Today we're building on the foundation he and others have helped to build."

George B. Murphy, retired school principal, paid the following tribute to Mr. Biddle and Miss Fannie Barbour: "We owe these two fine characters an everlasting debt of gratitude. When the best came and they held our future in their hands, they did not fail. They made good. As a result, there are more than fifty men and women occupying positions as principals and supervisory officers in the schools and more than 900 teachers."

Was a Christian

Dr. John Nutter, presiding elder of the Centreville District, Baltimore Conference of the AME Church, "He would not have been a great man had he not been a Christian. He was not only a school teacher, a leader and helper of men, but a Christian and my best friend."

The Rev. J. W. Bond, representative Bishop Monroe H. Davis, who was in North Carolina said that the only reason Bishop Davis was not there in person was due to business in the South. He expressed sympathy to the family for Bishop Davis.

Music was furnished by the Sharp Street Church choir. Interment was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

The Rev. George F. Bragg, Jr., pastor of St. James PE Church, said that he knew the late Mr. Biddle must have been a great man to have taught school for fifty-one years.

Willard Allen, grand master of the Masons, said that he was representing the citizens of Baltimore and paid respects on their behalf.

The Rev. Robert P. Coates said, "He was a leader in the interest of human life and his people. If George Biddle had failed as first principal of a school in Baltimore, the humility and shame would never die. Our teachers here today should keep the door open which he helped to open and should keep the faith and integrity which he had and tomorrow will be more glorious. You will praise God for giving you this very splendid character."

Resolutions from Sharp Street Church, the King's Daughters and Sons and St. John AME Church were read.
