TRAVELS

IN UPPER AND LOWER EGYPT,

During the campaigns of general Bonaparte in that country, and published under his immediate patronage—by Vivant Denon. Embellished with numerous engravings. Translated by Arthur Aiken. In two volumes, octavo, price five dollars bound.

IT is presumed that an account, by an eye-witness, of the romantic but unprovoked invasion of Egypt by general Bonaparte, will not be uninteresting to the public. The author, a member of the institute of Cairo, and an excellent drafts-man, was selected to accompany the troops designed for the conquest of Upper Egypt, that under the protection of a military escort, he might have an opportunity of examining those stupendous remains and eternal documents of the ancient civilization of the country, to which its then unsettled state had denied a peaceable admission. Hence the work contains an agreeable mixture of incident and description; and if the journal of the desultory operations of a campaign against an enemy whose rapid motions, whose invincible courage, whose persevering bravery, always rendered him a formidable opponent, interrupts unseasonably, now and then, an account of the venerable monuments of Thebes and Tenteyra, yet this very interruption becomes a stimulus to curiosity, and the attention of the reader, though kept active to the last, will not be withdrawn ungratified.

Citizen Denon not being a soldier by profession, and therefore not hardened to the attrocities of war, has, notwithstanding his natural partiality towards his countrymen, and his personal regard for many of the chiefs in the expedition, given a fairer account of the treatment which the natives underwent from their invaders, than we are likely to receive from any other quarter; and, indeed, of the campaigns in Upper Egypt, he is as yet the only historian. In this view, therefore, his narrative is of peculiar value.

The military transactions, however, are neither the most pleasing nor the prominent features of the work. The author was, by necessity, a soldier, but by profession an artist, and a man of letters: hence the remains of the architecture, the sculpture, and the painting of the ancient Egyptians, were the principal objects of his attention; and these he has described both by words and the pencil, so as to render them highly interesting to all those who feel any curiosity about a nation, from whom ancient Greece derived her sublimest philosophy, and which is inseparably connected with the earlier ages of Jewish history.

Public Characters;

Or, Cotemporary Biography.

In one vol. 8vo containing about 500 pages handsomely printed and bound, price 2 dollars 50 cents.

Biography, in all its forms, is allowed to be the most fascinating and instructive species of literary composition. It not only possesses all the advantages of general history, the various excellencies of which may be judiciously interwoven with the lives of eminent personages; but it frequently discovers the minute and latent springs of great events, which in the comprehensive range of history, would have escaped attention.

Many of the attractions of biography in general, and some additional advantages, are possessed by Cotemporary Biography. The memoirs of men, who are the present actors on the great theatre of life, who acquire and demand public confidence, and from whom further results of action or meditation are to be expected, necessarily excite a higher degree of curiosity, than the lives of those who have made their exit from the stage, by whom no future good or evil can be performed or perpetrated, and who, "dead, gone, and forgotten," are generally carried down the stream of oblivion, and swallowed up in the gulph of unregistered mortality.

MEMOIRS of the following Personages will be found in this work:

Circulating Library,

Kept in north Charles-street, third door above the Baltimore Bookstore.

THE proprietor most respectfully informs his subscribers, that ever attentive to their pleasure and profit, he has just made an addition to his library of the newest and first-rate London publications, not only calculateded to amuse the polite and fashionable circles, but to entertain the industrious family, who after their daily toil, will be amused with the delineation of characters which their more confined situation precludes them from observing in real life. To hold the mirror of human life up to nature, is the province of the novelist; the end and design being to expose vice and folly, in order to excite aversion or ridicule; and on the contrary, to display the amiable qualities of virtue in so striking a manner as to render them at once objects of admiration and imitation. Patent Horizontal Wind-Mill.

THE subscriber offers to the gentlemen farmers and others of Maryland, and the other states, an invention, which for utility has not been exceeded by any piece of mechanism which this or perhaps the last century can boast of. It is a peculiarly, though simply, constructed horizontal Wind-Mill, adapted to the grinding of all sorts of grain, and at the same time threshing out wheat and rice, fanning them and pounding the latter, powdering plaster of Paris, cutting tobacco, &c. &c. Its aptitude to all those various and useful purposes, will be more easily and justly estimated by a view of the machine itself, than from any description that can be given here. —A model of this wind-mill can be viewed on Federal Hill, where it is kept for the conveniency of shewing it in operation, by applying to Mr. Marche, No. 4, south Gay-street, by whom also the terms will be made known for the model only to erect a mill by, or for the patent right for a whole state; or by

A CARD.

H. O. HEBERT (from Philadelphia) solicits the attention of the citizens of Baltimore in general, and invalids in particular, to his "Air Pump Vapour Bath," a machine constructed on true philosophical principles, the efficacy of which in gout, rheumatism, palsy, contractions and enlargements of joints, withered and enlarged limbs, cutaneous and many other diseases, both chronic and acute, can be testified by many respectable persons who have had recourse to it.

This machine comprehends and combines the application of fomentation and the cupping glass, two of the most powerful external applications for the removal of disease, and that on a plan more extensive than was ever before known.

As many persons who have never seen the apparatus might be deterred from using it, either from the reports of prejudiced persons, or fear, they are respectfully assured that its application is not attended with either pain or inconvenience—It possesses all the good effects of warm bathing, without its attendant consequences, debility and relaxation; on the contrary, it invigorates and strengthens the whole system, but particularly the part to which the machine is applied. Persons desirous of further information respecting the nature and effects of this machine, will please to apply to the proprietor, at Bryden's hotel.

N. B. "The Air Pump Vapour Bath" is particularly adapted for the removal of all obstructions occasioned by violent colds, which are the forerunners of consumptions, &c.

Complaints peculiarly incident to females, which too generally baffle the remedies hitherto applied, and to which they frequently fall victims in the prime of life, are readily and effectually removed by the application of this machine.
