THIS HOARD WOULD HAVE DOUBLED IN VALUE—

Deposited in this bank at 4 per cent interest, the hoarded money which has been lying idle for years would have doubled in value instead of merely accumulating dust and cobwebs.

Happily not many persons today actually heard money with the belief that it is safe from theft or accident.

Money need not be buried in old walls or cellars to be hoarded. It is hoarded money if it is idle money, useless money.

The safest way to make your money work for you and the community is to deposit it in the bank, where it is safe, draws interest, and helps build up the local community, thus enhancing the value of your property.

Our officails are business executives and can help to make your money work more profitably for you. Consult them without obligation.

APPLE EXPORT IS GREATEST IN YEARS

Exports of apples have been exceptonally heavy this season. And most shipments are going to England and Scotland. Movement has been stimulated by the short crop overseas and by the high opening prices. Foreign markets have thus far proved more profitable than domestic trade for the shippers of eastern apples. But recently British prices have declined sharply.

For the three months July, August and September, total exports this season were 179,869 barrels and 566,744 boxes compared with 136,432 barrels and 257,582 boxes during the corresponding period a year ago. During the entire 1922-23 season exports amounted to nearly 593,000 barrels and 3,491,000 boxes.

This present season the early fall varieties of apples were less abundant in the eastern states and were mostly sold in domestic markets. But the large crop in the Northwest provided an early surplus of boxed apples for export. The abundant main crop in Virginia and West Virginia was the chief source of a very active September movement to foreign markets.

The peak of the barreled movement seems to have passed but the shipments of boxed stock are increasing.

Apple growers in the Cumberland-Martinsburg-Winchester belt of the Potomac valley have found the export trade a welcome outlet for their record crop this season. Shipping records for the three weeks preceding October 20 show that factors in the apple deal there have been quick to take advantage of export opportunities made possible by the failure of Great Britain's crop.

Price returns from exported apples have been in striking contrast to those of some other agricultural products for which outlets are sought in European markets.

Apples are perhaps the only American crop being sold abroad at greater profit than in this country.

Average net returns will probably be higher at the season's close than those from domestic markets even though heavy exportation has relieved American markets of excess offerings.

Growers and shippers in the Potomac valley attracted by the excellent price returns from exported apples have exported every 2 1-4 inch apple available. Jonathans moved first followed closely by York Imperials. And Ben Davis 2 1-4 inch have been moving to English markets for some time.

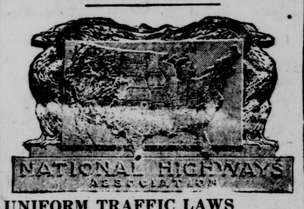
It is estimated that 25 per cent of the apples shipped from the Cumberland - Martinsburg - Winchester belt have gone into export trade. But the peak of the movement has been reached and a rapid decline in volume is expected.

Perhaps the most important contributing factor to heavy exports has been the lack of profitable domestic prices. The home market has been sluggish and shows no immediate sign of improvement. On the other hand export prices have declined since October 11 due to heavy supplies.

The wisdom of exporting just now is questioned by some dealers and although net returns are still above the domestic price to growers many expect a further break in the English market.

Outstanding requirements of the export market are good color and medium size.

The total production of apples in the United States this season is estimated by the Bureal of Agricultural Economics Department of Agriculture, at 10 per cent less than last year—190,727,000 bushels; in 1922 the harvest was 201,252,000 bushels. The commercial crop of 1923 based on October 1 condition, is forecast at 33,104,000 barrels, against 30,955,000 barrels last year.



UNIFORM TRAFFIC LAWS ON NATIONAL HIGHWAYS

Traffic laws which differ in different states and different towns in the same state are a cause of confusion, accident, loss of property, and loss o life. Uniform traffic laws, the same the country over, will promote safety.

The objection urged against uniform traffic laws that traffic conditions are different in different localities, does not hold in the face of the obvious power of the locality to modify or add to the uniform law for special conditions. There are many observances which, made uniform, would make for safety, such as the system of signalling for a stop, slow up and turn, a uniform rule as to the right of way at crossings, safety procedure at grade crossings, a heavy penalty for such dangerous practices as passing another car when coming to a curve or top of a hill, etc.

With forty-eight states and thousands of municipalities making their own traffic rules, the motorist is more or less at sea as to what he can and can not, should and should not, do. But when the national government builds roads for the nation, a national traffic law will be inevitable as a national police force for the national highways.

"A paved United States in our day" is not only devoutly wished for, because of the material benefits it will bring, but because of the safety the uniformity of traffic rules will provide, when the congress authorizes a system of national highways which will serve all the states as a good state highway now serves all the counties in that state.
