Mills for Sale,

At the Head of Chester, Kent county, Eastern Shore of Maryland.

THE subscribers will dispose of the above mills—They are situated on the main stream of Chester river, at the head of the tide, and about one mile above craft navigation; they consist of a large convenient brick mill, seated directly at the bridge over Chester river, where the main road from Kent and Queen Anne crosses it, and in the town itself. This mill is an overshot, with two pair of best French bur stones, and the whole machinery adapted in the best manner for merchant's work. Adjoining the mill a lot or piece of ground will be alotted to it sufficient for a mill house and other purposes. The other mill is situate at a short distance above, directly on the main road to Duck creek—The building being frame (except the lower story which is of stone) was destroyed by fire a short time since, but may be built at no great expence. It was calculated also for merchant work, and to run two pair stones; and had also a fulling mill adjoining, and a saw mill at some distance above. The whole of the mills are supplied by the same dams and races, which are built in the best manner. A convenient lot will also be sold with the last mill to accommodate buildings, &c.

These mills being seated directly in a very improving country town, where a great deal of business is done, and the owner may have the best opportunity of connecting them with a store; and also in the heart of a country which produces a never failing supply of the best wheat, offer superior advantages to a purchaser. A reasonable credit will be given on good security and interest being paid. For terms apply to the subscribers in Philadelphia; or the mills will be shewn to any person wishing to view them by William Farrell, the tenant in possession.
