RELIGION, MORALS AND COMMON SENSE

Your Moral Wages—They are paid whether you want to receive them or not. And you determine the rate of pay. You can't strike because the conditions under which they are paid are likewise determined by you and you alone. "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life."

To discharge responsibilities, become loaded with them.

If a man tells you your virtues, watch him. If he tells you your faults, heed him.

Prayer is a key which being turned by the hand of faith unlocks all God's treasures.

Wisdom is knowing what to do next, skill is knowing how to do it, and virtue is doing it.

Don't get so interested in what you are going to do tomorrow that you don't do anything today.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy.

Things that I felt absolutely sure of but a few years ago I do not now believe now; and this thought makes me see more clearly how foolish it would be to expect all men to agree with me.

Whoever acquires knowledge but does not practice it is as one who ploughs, but does not sow.

DOES DUTY OR HABIT KEEP GIRLS AT HOME

Dear Miss Flo:—

Must a girl marry to have her own home? After attending a prominent college for two years, I was forced to leave, because of a change in the financial circumstances of the family. After the intense and interesting life at school I find that my interests at home have dwindled and I have nothing in common with my parents ro with my old friends. I am bored with everything. Life seems uninteresting and flat. I am not popular with men—neither am I overburdened with feminine company. I want to go to a large city and find a position. However, my folks believe that such an action would condemn me to everlasting perdition. They have an idea that no working girl can be respectable, and that no nice girl has her own apartment. The few friends I have say that I am gloomy. Do you believe that I am selfish in wanting to leave my home and make my own life, or is it a mistaken sense of duty and age long habit that is forcing me to remain at home with my folks?

GERTRUDE

* * *

Perhaps your friends are right Gertrude. It may be that you have a gloomy disposition. Your letter carries with it a little touch of discontent. It may be that your two years at college have made you a little too critical—that you feel a trifle superior to your less fortunate acquaintances. You may be intolerant. I knew a Gertrude once. She was born in a fog, and she has been wearing an umbrella over her mind ever since. She has an exquisitely miserable time anticipating horors that never materialize. Naturally, she isn't popular.

I believe you need a strong motivating purpose. The very best thing you could do is secure a position. I am not so sure that it would be the best thing in the world for you to leave your home and the few friends you have, to go to a larger city. It is rather difficult to make friends in a city, and you need friends more than anything else.

However, if you are quite sure that it is impossible for you to secure interesting work within commuting distance of your home, I see no reason why a nice girl, when she is old enough and when she has a knowledge of the conventions, should not have her own home, with the privilege of making her own life. I wouldn't advise you to start in alone, however. You will find it much easier if you start in with another girl—one who has proved herself to have high ideal—and not too many "free" ideas.

First, convince yourself that you are justified in wanting to leave home. If you find, after a careful study of yourself, that you are gloomy, then attempt to overcome it before leaving home. It may be that you are too old to hvae the illusions of sweet sixteen, and too young to have yet acquired a balance wheel. As it is, you must find joy in work, in friends, in books, and a religious faith.

Your folks must be nerrow to make a statement that working girls are not respectable. Tell them that the very fact that such girls are earning their living by work proves them respectable.

But the most important thing of all, whether you continue to live at home or go to the city, try to acquire a tolerant nature—and by all means, LIVE UP TO YOURSELF.

Modern Boy Ambitious And Able, Says Executive Who Has Helped Thousands To Higher Places

OGDEN and HIS BOYS

Those who question the flapperism of 1925 and mourn the jazzy maiden need have no fear that American youth considers life a giddy, dizzy plaything. Only one boy in a hundred is discharged for "freshness" from one of the largest business organizations in the United States. This testimony as to the sound moral fibre of the modern boy is provided by I. H. Ogden, of Newark, who starts hundreds of boys on their business careers every year.

"Practically all boys engaged by the Prudential Insurance Company at the Home Office in Newark begin their work in the mail department," explains Mr. Ogden. "I know boys pretty well, for I have dealt with them for thirty years at the Prudential. They are about the same now as they were years ago. We rarely have to discharge a boy for insubordination. Sometimes a little of the aggressive spirit, if not over-emphasized, is a helpful factor in his getting along. However, the 'too fresh' boy doesn't last long.

"Then there is the draw-back to the boy who is over serious—who is a man before his time and is weighted by too heavy thoughts early in life. That type is liable to be an old man before he reaches twenty-one."

The boys at the Prudential begin as mail-boys, thus learning where the departments are located and the personnel of the office force in general. By the time each boy is qualified for promotion and is removed from the duties of his original assignment, he is ready to fill in various places and thus attains a broader acquaintance with the office. This method also provides an opportunity for closer enlightenment as to the young man's ability and general make-up.

The boys remain in the mail department only long enough to earn promotion. Just as soon as a department or a division head needs a boy or a position, it is filled from the ambitious in the ranks of the mail room.

Mr. Ogden says the boys often have dual personalities. During business hours they are serious, quite and hard working. A few minutes after the closing hour they may be seen in the role of the hilarious, modern American growing boy.
