The Spirit World.

The following is an extract from one of Bishop Simpson's beautiful sermons:

Man rises on the triumphs of art just in proportion as he approaches towards the invisible. The studies of men lead in the same direction. We commence with the simple elements around us—the visible.—We take hold, in philosophy and chemistry, on what might be termed the alphabets, the elements, the grosser forms of matter. As we rise in our speculations, we go still higher, and light and heat and electricity and magnetism, in all their impalpable forms, pass before us in review; and to-day, a large part of the chemical and philosophic science is employed in reference to this impalpable and imponderable element, and science rises to its highest glory as it lays hold of the invisible.

* * * * * * *

If we can know that we shall be the sons of God and heirs of a glorious inheritance—with this assurance we can look out into the invisible with calmness. There is no one of us that does not have a feeling that the invisible is near us. It gathers about us—its very shadows seem sometimes to fall upon us. We know not by nature what that invisible is, but that there is an invisible the very instincts of our heart tell us. Who has not trembled at thoughts of the invisible? Who has not been anxious to lift the veil that shrouds it from our view? Who has not thought of friends who have just passed over the boundery line? Who has not trembled by the side of the death-bed and the grave, when the eternal seemed to come so near and the invisible to move in view? And why that feeling?—We have a relation to the invisible.

* * * * * * *

The very grave itself is a passage into the beautiful and the glorious. We have laid our friends in the grave, but they are around us. The little children that sat upon our kee, into whose eyes we looked with love, whose little hands clasped our neck, on whose cheek we imprinted the kiss—we can almost feel the throbbing of their hearts to-day. They have passed from us,—but where are they? Just beyond the line of the invisible. And the fathers and mothers that educated us, that directed and comforted us—where are they but just beyond the line of the invisible?—The associates of our life, that walked along life's pathway, those with whom we took sweet counsel, and who dropped from our side—where are they but just beyond us?—not far away—it may be very near us, in the heaven of light and love. Is there anything to alarm us in the thought of the invisible? No! It seems to me that sometimes, when our heads are on the pillow, there come whispers as of joy from the spirit-land, which have dropped into our hearts, thoughts of the sublime and beautiful and glorious, as though some angel's wing passed over our brow, and some dear one sat by our pillow and communed with our hearts, to raise our affection towards the other and better world.

* * * * * * *

The invisible is not dark; it is glorious.—Sometimes the veil becomes so thin, it seems to me that I can almost see the bright forms through it, and my bending ear can almost hear the voices of those who are singing their melodious strain before the throne of God. Oh, there is music all around us, though the ear of man hear it not; there are glorious forms all about us, though in the busy scenes of life we recognize them not. The veil of the future will soon be lifted, and the invisible shall appear. And when you and I shall just step beyond the veil,—oh, how glorious! We shall look back to life and wonder why it was that it did not flame with light, even while we were treading the pathway here below. Oh, that look into eternity! We see the invisible, and it gives us joy. Our friends are there our beloved ones are there, and they are not far from us. Whether through connection with the coming of Winter—whether my mind has been inclined to look more into the grave of late, and beyond it, I cannot just say; but as I grow older, it seems to me that the invisible has greater and greater attractions for me from year to year.—Never did I ponder so much on those beautiful forms where the life of the future is brought to light, and where immortality seems to glow all around me, as I have done in recent times.

The Duty Done.

A Presbyterian minister tells the following story:—He was at one time pastor of a church in a town where the richest, and in every way the most prominent man, was notoriously a neglector of religion, and openly hostile to the ministers. Seeing the old man in his carriage before a store in the place one day, he felt a strange impulse to go near and join himself to this chariot, and ask the liberty of visiting him, that he might preach the Saviour. Fearing a scene, he refrained, and was conscience-smitten. Six weeks later he met the carriage on the street again, and the impulse was renewed, and the same words suggested. He immediately consulted one of his judicious deacons, who advised him not to visit him. He would be driven from the door—there would be a scandal, and he would become an object of derision. But he could not rest. He felt it was God calling him "to go near and join" the godless old man, and in disobedience to advice, the next day he approached the stately mansion trembling. He saw the old man, and was seen by him. The door was opened and he expected insult. Instead, two trembling hands were extended in welcome, and the strange words uttered: "I have been looking for a visit from you for six weeks. I have been longing to know more about the Lord I have so long rejected." The wife and daughter were called in, and there he preached unto them Jesus, and all three soon afterwards believed, and went on "their way rejoicing."—When one is promted by the Spirit to speak, it is safe to hope and believe that the Spirit is prompting to hear.—Baptist Weekly.

To the Sick.

A great many are now suffering with cold, coughs, and other ailments, which, if not promptly attended to, may result in an incurable disease. For all diseases of the throat, breast and lungs, bronchial or asthmatic affections, Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry is a pleasant and certain cure. The oldest and best remedy. It promotes expectoration, and removes all diseased matter which obstructs the lungs, the ulceration is healed, and the sufferer restored to perfect health. It is nourishing and strengthening, and for disturbed rest at night, its use will give sweet repose. If the bowels are costive, or liver disordered, take at first a few doses of Swayne's Tar and Sarsaparilla Pills, which will evacuate the bowels, and is of vital importance, relieve the congested liver, and remove all billiousness. Then follow with Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup, and health, strength and happiness is sure to be the result.

SAVED HIS LIFE.

A Remarkable Cure

Was that of Edward H. Hamson, Engineer at George Sweeny's Pottery, 1334 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia. He had a violent cough, night sweats, sore throat, great weakness, spit at different times a pint of blood, gave up all hope of recovery. Through the use of "Dr. Swayne's Wild Cherry Syrup" became a sound and hearty man, and remains so to this day, although over twenty years have elapsed since he was cured.

☞ We are permitted to refer to the following gentlemen who have experienced great benefit, and used "Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry" in their family for many years.
