BIDDLE'S SINCERITY.

We find the annexed paragraph in the Pittsburg Mercury. What cares Mr. Biddle for the humble traders of Pittsburg, when they come in competion with the Josephs, the Barings, and the other money lords of modern times, who sport with millions robbed from hard work and honest trade by paper contrivances! "Let millions die that one may live," is the tyrant's maxim.

'More of the 'Pennsylvania Measure.'—The ink had scarcely dried on Nicholas Biddle's letter to the Pittsburg committee, in which he politely informed them of his utter inability, from various specious causes, to spare a single dollar for this city, when we find him voluntarily offering a million dollars to a single house in New York! What will our business men think of Biddle's excuses and his veracity now? The most besotted of his advocates will scarcely claim any Pennsylvania partialities from him after such evidence."

From the Boston Post

MR. BIDDLE'S BELIEF.—Biddle proposes to issue the promissory notes of his bank, payable a year hence, which the merchants are to remit to London and Amsterdam, instead of money! These merchants will give Mr. Biddle paper and securities, payable at a short period and take his bank bonds, payable at a long period. This is precisely what the Josephs were in the habit of doing. They would take the drafts of the New York merchants, and give their own notes for the amount, payable at a period after those drafts became due. In other, words, they bought the negotable and available paper of the merchants, the notes of the merchants' customers, on a credit. Instead of furnishing capital to the Merchants, they took capital from them; and this is precisely what the Bank, managed by Mr. Biddle, proposes to do, by issuing its bonds. The Josephs failed, some say for ten, and some fifteen millions of dollars. Mr. Biddle's bank, and the interlocked house of Barings, may be found to be equally much extended as the Josephs, and the Hermans, were. These houses stood as firm in credit in New York and New Orleans, as Biddle's bank does in Philadelphia, and Barings in London. Mr. Samuel Williams one stood as high in the London Exchanges as the Barings: but misfortunes overtook him, and he failed. A great banker, treading on the heels of the Barings in London has tottered, and would have fell but for the aid of interested creditors. Even the Bank of England suspended payment for twenty years. Such being the facts in the case, we think that the relief proposed by Mr. Biddle is worse than idle mockery. It is but proffering to exchange endorsements with the merchants, the merchants giving short paper and collateral security, and paying interest, to the bank, and taking long paper without interest and with no security from the bank. Sound men and wise men will not thus interlock their names, and on such unequal terms, with an institution that may be no more sound than the Hermans, the Philippes, the Josephs, who, in the aggregate, wielded half as much capital as the Bank.

In principle, the Bank is no better than a pirate and freebooter; nay, it is worse—it sets traps and digs pits to catch and plunder its own friends and supporters. It has not even that partial morality, "honour among thieves."

The Bank also proposes to take inland exchange. If the Bank have really any means, why does it not let those means out at a legal rate of interest and relieve the merchants, at least in Philadelphia? Why does it contrive by exorbitant discounts on drafts, under the name of exchange, to keep the rate of interest within the city, nay, behind the very pillars of the Bank itself, at 18 to 30 per cent. per annum? Mr. Biddle says his Bank is now a State institution and he feels under no obligation to relieve the nation. Can he relieve the nation? Does he relieve his State or even his city? The Bank plunders its own friends within the droppings of its own eaves with as little remorse as the highwayman plunders his victim. The money market is kept in as agitated a state in Philadelphia as in other cities; and the best relief the merchant can get is to rely upon his own resources, and take neither the money nor bonds, nor promises of the United States Bank of Pennsylvania.

The Sea Serpent once more.—The following is an extract from the logbook of the ship Havre, arrived at New Orleans from Havre. The statement is confirmed by the whole ship's company, 28 in number:

"Lat. 35 32 N. long. 26 05 W. saw something very singular, about 100 feet from the ship; as it approached, discovered that it was a snake; its head, which was shaped like that of a flying fish, and about the size of a barrel, lay within fifty feet of the ship's side, and the end of its tail between 4 and 500 feet in a perpendicular direction from the same; color of its body greyish, and about the size of a ship's mainmast. As this monster of the deep moved gradually from the ship near the surface of the water, it motion appeared like that created by a series of barrels rolling in water in direct line. The day was perfectly calm and all on board had a fair view of his honor, the monster, for the space of half an hour, when he shook his tail in token of adieu and left the ship.

Royal variety in dress.—Queen Elizabeth appeated almost daily in different habits, and tried every mode of varying their favor. Nor would she ever part with her clothes. At her death, three thousand dresses were found in her ward-robe.

The Kentucky Editors have lately held a convention, and agreed, among other things—'That in all future discussions, whether political or otherwise, the Editors of the Kentucky press shall carefully abstain from all disrespecful personal allusions or epithets towards each other, or apply nicknames, but shall conduct all controversies between themselves, with decency, decorum and moderation; and, that it be also recommended to them to cultivate each other's good will, and on all proper occasions, to advance each other's interests.' &c.

TAILORING BUSINESS

IN ALL ITS DIFFERENT BRANCHES,

At his old stand, in Cambridge.

He has lately procured A NEW SYSTEM OF CUTTING OUT GARMENTS, which has never been used before in this part of the State. It is adjusted upon a mathematical principle, and cannot fail to succeed in all cases. Upon this plan, the science of cutting clothes is no longer uncertain, and dependent upon the eye and accident, for a good fit. It is as unerring as the truths of geometry He congratulates himself and his friends upon the possession of this long-sought desideratum. He is prepared to make up clothes for his patrons in the neatest and most fashionable style, having made an arrangement to procure the of the season. His work shall be finished in the best manner, and he warrants his garments to fit. Having been located in this place for the last twelve years, he returns his acknowledgements to his friends and the public, for the flattering encouragement they have bestowed upon him. He pledges himself to to devote his most assiduous attention to accommodate those who entrust work to his care. In conclusion, he invites all to call, and he flatters himself that they will be entirely satisfied that he has promised nothing but what he will most rigidly fulfil.

VALUABLE LAND FOR SALE.

(in Somerset County.)

THE subscriber offers for sale all his land lying and being in Somerset county, on Barron Creek, near the "Spring." It comprises several tracts or parcels of land, contiguous to each other, containing in the whole more or less. The improvements upon the same are a two story Dwelling House, near the water, at which there is a first rate landing place—a new store house, considered to be a good stand for business.—also an orchard, affording most excellent fruit. There is another dwelling tenement upon the property, immediately adjacent to the water, with a very thriving orchard of young apple trees annexed. About 70 or 80 acres of this land is cleared, the greater part of which is good for a corn crop—the residue of the property is covered with oak, chestnut, hickory, pine, and gum timber, suitable for vessels, cord wood, &c. The title is in fee simple, and clear of all disputes and incumbrances.—The property being in a county in which I do not reside, induces me to dispose of it, provided I can get something like the value of it. I will sell it if applied to, on reasonable terms, and if not sold at private sale by Friday the 28st of April next, I will offer it on that day at public sale on the premises, at the hour of 12 o'clock.
