CLEARED UP THE MYSTERY

Son Enlightens Mother as to Queer Remarks After Partners' Names on Program.

The young man's mother was straightening up his chiffonier and she picked up one of his dance programs. This is part of what she read:

1. Two-step. X.
2. Waltz. Miss Brown, pink lady.
3. Two-step, Miss VanSant, blue.
4. Waltz. X.
5. Two-step. Miss Dusall, red, black in hair.
6. Waltz. Miss Dawson, old rose.
7. Two-step. Miss Barnes, gold locket.
8. Waltz. Miss McKay.
9. Two-step. Miss Buchannon.

"Son," said the mother that evening, "what are those remarks after your partners' names? Miss Brown would not be pleased to know she had been called the pink lady."

"Why, mother, that's all right. Lots of the fellows mark their programs like that. You see, a fellow can't always remember a girl when he meets her for the first time, there are so many of them. So, to avoid embarrassment, he notes some distinguishing mark. Now, Miss Brown wore a pink dress. The X indicates, of course, the girl I accompanied to the dance. Miss Dusall wore a red dress, but so did others, so to be sure not to waste any time hunting her I noted that she had a black band around her hair. The girls with whom I am acquainted I know without any descriptive notes. O, it's all right, mother. In that way we never have to go up to a girl and ask her if she is herself."—Indianapolis News.

RATHER CRUDE AND BOLD

Bethel Preacher Gives Congregation of Shellbacks Startling Description of Bad Place.

"I knew the late Clark Russell well," said a Philadelphia shipping reporter. "The unhappy man, racked with rheumatism, lay for many years on his back as helpless as a newborn babe. That, perhaps, was how he came to leave $100,000. He couldn't spend any of his money, you see.

"Authors make less than is supposed. Clark Russell was once talking to me about authors' earnings. He said that publishers exaggerated the earnings so as to get more people to write for them.

"He said that the millionaire publisher, in order to draw authors on, painted the prosperity of the successful writer with the bold, crude exaggeration wherewith the preacher in the mariners' bethel painted the horrors of the bad place.

A bethel preacher, he explained, was describing the bad place to a congregation of shellbacks.

"'Shipmates,' he said, 'you've seen the molten iron come running out of the furnace, haven't you? It comes out white hot, sizzling and hissing like some kind of snaky, horrible monster. Well, shipmates—'

"The preacher pointed his forefinger at the awed shellbacks.

"'Well, shipmates,' he said solemnly, 'they use that stuff for ice cream in hell.'"

Good Story, Anyway.

Ollie James of Kentucky, recently a representative, but now a senator, tells of the time when he was driving through a hilly section of his native state partly for pleasure and partly on business connected with his political hopes. He came to a farmhouse where there was a nice looking well and windmill, and he pulled in and asked the farmer if he might have a drink.

"Ah'm sorry, sah," said the farmer. "Ah'd suttenly like to 'comadate you but I cyant. Ef you all 'll jest drap into Jones' place, 'bout a mile further on, maybe you can git somethin'."

"But I thought I noticed a fine well here on your place," said the senator from Kentucky.

"Why, that's water! I didn't know you wanted water; I thought you asked me for a drink. You sure can have all the water you want."

Quail in Southern California.

Ranchers from the Coachella Valley, who were in Los Angeles today, reported that quail were so thick in the valley that crops of all kinds were being destroyed, despite the efforts of the state game wardens, who are now trapping the birds by thousands and sending them to other sections of the state. One rancher said he saw one covey of quail that must have contained 5,000 birds.

"They were so thick the sun light was shut out when they flew past," he said. "The quail are very wise," he continued, "and hunters find trouble in shooting them, while trapping is still more difficult."—Los Angeles correspondence San Francisco Chronicle.

Extremes of Temperature.

Water freezes every night the year round in Alto Crucero, Bolivia; while at noon each day the sun is hot enough to blister the flesh. Above all others, it is the place where extremes meet.

Short Lives of Physicians.

In keeping others alive, physicians appear to lose their own lives. Of all professional men their lives are the shortest. Between the ages of forty-five and sixty-five five doctors die on an average to one clergyman.

The True Church.

For there is a true church wherever one hand meets another helpfully, and that is the only holy or Mother church which ever was or ever shall be.—Ruskin's "Of King's Treasuries."

Home.

A home! It is the bright, blessed, adorable phantom that sits highest on the sunny horizon that girdeth life.—Ike Marvel's "Reveries of a Bachelor."

Poor.

Having a big funeral is a poor way of showing one's popularity.

Same Goal.

Haste and Waste are always traveling in the same general direction.

Bold Attempt at Robbery.

A bank messenger in Berlin had an exciting time of it, recently, while riding in a taxicab with one of the bank's clerks. The incident occurred in broad daylight, in a leading thoroughfare of the German capital. The clerk, with no warning, suddenly attacked the messenger, producing a noose of wire, with which he attempted to strangle his companion. The messenger, however, succeeded in freeing himself from the other's grasp, and pulling down the window in the cab, shouted for help. The chauffeur, alarmed by his cries, stopped the cab and came to his assistance, while a number of constables hurrying up secured the assailant. The bank messenger had a considerable sum of money in his possession, and the clerk admitted to the police that he had hoped to secure it, having planned the attack a long time ago.

Primitive Screws.

Screws are still made in India just as they were made originally, by winding two soft wires together around a mandril. The wires are then carefully separated and one of them is soldered into a tube or nut while the other is soldered to a short rod. All the silversmiths make their screws in this way and they are all left handed, for they are wound over and over by the right hand. Screw bolts and screw presses were introduced by Europeans and for many years all the cotton exported from India was compressed by a massive screw of wood, turned round by cattle yoked to a long lever. This screw may still be found in remote districts. It is cut entirely by hand and is set out by winding two ropes around the hand dressed beam to give the pitch.—Eastern Engineering.

Was Working in the Dark.

Secretary MacVeagh, at a dinner in Washington, was urging the need of scientific financial laws. "But let us make these laws scientifically," he said. "We must let in light. If we work in the dark, you know, we will go wrong—like young Cornelius Husk. Cornelius was called one winter morning before dawn, and told to go and harness the mule. The lad was too lazy to light a lantern, and in the dark he didn't notice that one of the cows was in the stable with the mule. As he tried to harness the cow his father, impatient at the long delay, shouted from the house: 'Corney! Corney! What ye doin'?' 'I can't get the collar over the mule's head,' the boy replied. 'His ears are frozen.'"

Furs.

Mme. Maeterlinck in her quaint, witty way, was talking to a Boston reporter about feminine cruelty. "There is no such thing as feminine cruelty," she said. "Women, it is true, wear the feathers of birds, but they are unconscious of the birds' sufferings, and, as your old proverb says, 'What the eye don't see the heart don't grieve.' Men when they set a beefsteak or slip on their gloves, are unconscious of the slaughtered bullocks and the murdered kid—and just so am I unconscious when, an icy January morning, I wrap round my neck a soft, farm fur—whether it be fur of polecat or Russian sable my dealer alone knows."

Tree Valuable in Commerce.

To the casual observer there is little connection between camphor and cinnamon, yet a tree of the Cinnamomum family was not long ago discovered in New South Wales, whose leaves produce an oil from which the camphor of commerce can be extracted. From one particular Australian tree can be obtained an oil that is quite different from anything yet extracted in the way of Cajaputs. It contains a substance from which, if its chemical combination could be altered a fraction, "vanillin" might be extracted. Vanillin is the flavoring used in vanilla ice cream and chocolates.

A Wood Corner.

United States Commissioner Hayes of Boston is one of the most expert wood carvers and hammerers of brass in this country. In his own home in Cambridge he has one of the finest collections of carved wood and hammered brass designs to be found anywhere perhaps in the state. The handsome articles turned out under his knife are gems of the wood carver's art. His friends consider themselves fortunate when they are made recipients of his handiwork.—Boston Traveler.

Couldn't Understand Him.

A young man just returned from college was out cycling one day when suddenly he came to a steep gradient. While descending he lost control of his machine and two men came and found him lying on the ground. When asked what was the matter, he replied: "Well, I came down that incline with the greatest velocity and lost my central gravity, and was precipitated on the hard macadamized road." "Away, leave him alone," said one of the men; "he's a foreigner."

Elderly, but Still Good Skater.

P. Elverton Bancroft, aged eighty-five, claiming to be the oldest ice skater in the United States, recently appeared in an open-air exhibition at his home, Woburn, Mass. For an hour he sped about the pond, performing intricate evolutions. He is a former business man of Woburn and for the last seventeen years has not missed indulging in this winter sport.

Courtesy.

Visitor—I've just come from the doctor's funeral, but I didn't see any of you there.

Hostess—No, my husband didn't care to go, as funerals always upset him.

Visitor—If you never go to other people's funerals I don't see how you can expect them to come to yours.

A Case in Point.

"It takes all kinds of people to make a world."

"Yes, yes. That's quite true. Two men of my acquaintance stood for an hour on a street corner yesterday and argued about the new football rules."

Detect Submarine From Afar.

At a height of 3,000 feet a man in an aeroplane can see a submarine gliding along 30 feet under water.

Franchise in Switzerland.

Twenty years is the voting age in Switzerland.

First English Paper Mill.

England's first paper mill was erected at Dartford in 1588.

FERTILIZER TALKS

Number Five

Ammonia is the most costly ingredient of fertilizer—yet the air that hangs over every acre of your land holds uncountable pounds of it.

Draw it down.

If you are raising cannery peas you are doing just that thing—or with cow peas or clover if their roots have little bumps or nodules on them.

Best of all, the ammonia that is breathed into your land by the tiny bugs that form the nodules, will stay in the land until crops grow it out.

The best ammonia we can put in fertilizer will remain long in the land. Ammonia derived from some substances (and used by some fertilizer makers) not only will quickly leave the land, but is of no considerable plant value while there.

If your land isn't stored with ammonia (through pea or clover growing) you must get some in the fertilizer to at least start the crops growing.

But as far as possible get ammonia from the air and buy the other two fertilizing properties—phosphoric acid and potash, and put on plenty.

We have a letter from Washington to the effect that too much ammonia and too little of the other fertilizing properties are to blame for Tomato Blossoms Falling Off.

If the vine grows slowly enough to fairly mature the stalks as they come along, the blossoms will hold on.

Then, too, plenty of these cheaper needed properties will help to improve the color of the tomato.

Whatever your experience, observation and information suggest as best fertilizer for any crop, we will mix to your order from above ingredients, above reproach. We do not use "filler."

Fish tankage is favored in tomato goods by some growers and we have it.

Come to the works as often as you can—we have nothing to hide.
