New Blood Fails to Save N.C. Teacher

WINSTON - SALEM, N.C. — Despite donations of blood for a transfusion by her former classmates, Mrs. Marian Troxler O'Neal, a teacher in the Middle-ear school system, died at a local hospital on December 16.

Mrs. O'Neal was born in Gibsonville. She received her early education there, later attending Atkins High School and Winston-Salem Teachers' College in this city, where she spent most of her life.

A Colored Member on the School Board!

If you think we should have a colored representative on the school board, and that Mayor Jackson should also take steps to see that Dr. Francis M. One in the Army, One in the Navy

Here's Pvt. Ephrim Slaughter of Harrisburg, Civil War veteran, who celebrated his 96th birthday January 17. Where a boy, he ran away from his North Carolina home to join the 37th Regiment, U. S. colored troops. His brother joined the navy and died in service. Only two Civil War vets are alive in Harrisburg, the other being John Barton, 94. Private Slaughter, who lived with his first wife for 72 years, remarried in 1937. His present wife is Mrs. Georgianna Slaughter.

Local Teacher's Mother Buried on Wednesday

Funeral rites for Mrs. Mary Gallen, 60, mother of Mrs. Helen G. Hughes, local teacher, were held Wednesday at Providence Baptist Church, the Rev. E. W. White, pastor, assisted by the Rev. V. V. K. Stokes, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church, officiating.

Mrs. Gallen died Sunday at her home, 2441 Druid Hill Avenue. Interment was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

Native of Baltimore

Daughter of the late Mrs. Georgeanna Booker, Mrs. Gallen was a native of Baltimore, but up until three years ago made her home in Philadelphia where she was a member of Cherry Memorial Baptist Church and the Colonial Circle.

Since coming here in 1937, she has been living with her daughter, Mrs. Hughes, at the Druid Hill Avenue address. Her husband, Joseph Gallen, died eighteen years ago.

Survivors, besides Mrs. Hughes, include another daughter, Mrs. Mildred Hudson; three grandchildren, Peggy, Mary and Lillian Hudson, and a brother, Albert Rice, all of Baltimore.
