I believe that advertising pays. When one has goods that he wants to sell the best way to accomplish it is to let the people know what he has; then let the goods be examined and if the prices suit they must go. My aim shall be to keep my stock always complete and prices always low, and I invite an inspection of my goods.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

VARIOUS RECEIPTS.

Dried apples can be used for mince pies when it is impossible to obtain fresh fones. Take nice, well dried fruit, soak it over night in cold water, chop fine and use in the same quantities as when the apples are fresh.

A little camphor rubbed over a cold-sore, when it first appears, will effectually prevents its becoming a disagreeable and unsightly blotch. It is best to give two or three applications to insure success.

A little saleratus rubbed on, with the finger or a bit of linen, will remove stains from cups and other artcles of tableware. It will also remove spots from marbleized oilcloths, and many stains from tinware.

A large picture ring screwed into the top of the handle, is the nicest thing made by which to hang up a broom. A strong screw with a small head should be placed in the wall at a proper height to receive it.

An easy and quite effectual plan to keep tinware from rusting consists in rubbing the new vessel inside and out with fresh lard or butter; then placing in the oven and keeping hot for several hours. The heat must not be so great as to melt the solder; still it is essential that the tin be kept very warm.

It is really a task to knit double heels in men's hose, and yet it pays, for they are warmer, and wear much longer. It is necessary to have more stiches than for an ordinary heel, and an extra one made after every fourth stich is about right. Knit across on the right side and slip (pass from the left needle to the right without knitting) every third stitch. In passing back on the reverse side slip two stitches and knit the one slipped before. This forms a heel as thick and durable as can be desired.

LEARNING HOW TO COOK.

Being interested in the art of cooking, and having a desire to become a good housekeeper, my attention has often been given to such books and articles as treat of cookery, domestic economy and like subjects. It is unnecessary to speak to the inexperienced housekeeper of the uncertainty and unsatisfactory results often attained after a study of the cook book. Sometimes the particular subject on which we want information is not mentioned, or having found the desired directions, one is confronted by the vague word "handful." I do not mean to disparage all cook books, though we might profitably spare a good many of them. I gratefully acknowledge having received some good ideas from that source.

Frequent disappointments in the search for knowledge in that direction leads me to suggest that a much better way than reading cook books is taking practical lessons from the best housekeeper and we can learn. Knowing this to be true, is it not advisable that every girl should improve the earliest opportunities for learning in this most useful and necessary branch of education; not waiting until the time when she must undertake the work, thinking, if she thinks at all, that she can "go by the cook book" and get along somehow. That is a good way to learn, and what is gained in that school is likely to be remembered. But is it not more rational to get the benefit of our mother's experience. By beginning, in one sense where they left off, we are saved an infinite amount of experimental cookery, with a corresponding decrease of wear on our tempers and the digestive faculties of the family. However, advice is generally abundant, but not often heeded. Experience is conceded to be a valuable possession, and this of mine is given in the hope that though it comes second hand to the reader, sufficient value may still attach to it to give point to the suggestion.

ALFRED.

BEEF SOUP.

Take a nice beef shank or soup bone, wash it clean and chop it into three or four pieces. Place it in boiling water and let it boil up. Skim well; add a few pepper corns and allspice berries, and two onions sliced fine. Let it boil slowly for five or six hours. Four or five quarts of cold water, according to the size of the bone, should first be used, and let it boil down to two quarts or three pints. An hour before it is to be dished, add two carrots and two small turnips, chopped very fine. Mutton bones from roast meat will make excellent soup if they are prepared in the same way.

ONION SOUP.

Take half a pound of nice, fresh butter, put it into a large saucepan and let it melt slowly, but not brown at all. Cut up very finely ten good-sized onions, put them into the melted butter, dredge in a little flour, and let the onions stew slowly for fifteen or twenty minutes, stirring them occasionally. Then pour in one quart of boiling water, dredge in a little more flour, and mix all well together. Add a teacupful of sweet milk and boil for fifteen minutes, stirring often. Beat up the yelks of two eggs, and after the soup is taken from the fire stir them in rapidly for a few minutes. Serve with bits of toasted bread in the tureen. Season with salt and pepper, but not till just before taking up, as the butter will nearly salt it enough.

RICE MERINGUE.

To three tablespoonfuls of rice add only as much water as will boil it soft. Put into this boiled rice a little salt, one pint of milk and the whites of two eggs and the yelks of three, beaten well together with sugar sufficient to sweeten it. Put the milk and boiled rice over the fire, and when they have come to a boil, stir in the eggs quickly, so that they do not coagulate. Set it aside to cool. Beat up the whites of the eggs; when quite cool add ten teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar, and any flavoring you may like. Spread over the top of the puddiug.

POSITIVELY CURED BY

Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First.
Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second.
Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.
Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth.
Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth.
Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth.
Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.
