THE BRONCHO.

Some Peculiarities About this Animal that are Worth Knowing.

A broncho is a horse. He has four legs, like the saw-horse, but is decidedly more skittish. The broncho is of gentle deportment and modest mien, but there isn't a real safe place about him. There is nothing mean about the broncho, though; he is perfectly reasonable, and acts on principle. All he asks is to be let alone; but he does ask this, and even insists on it. He is firm in this matter, and no kind of argument can shake his determination. There is a broncho that lives out some miles from the city. We know him right well. One day a man roped him and tried to put a saddle on him. The broncho looked sadly at him, shook his head and begged the fellow, as plain as could be, to go away and not try to interfere with a broncho who was simply engaged in the pursuit of his own happiness; but the man came on with the saddle and continued to aggress. Then the broncho reached out with his right hind foot and expostulated with him so that he died.

When thoroughly aroused the broncho is quite fatal, and if you can get close enough to him to examine his cranial structure you will find a cavity just below the eye where the bump of remorse should be. The broncho is what the cowboys call "high-strung." If you want to know just how high he is strung, climb up on to his apex. We rode a broncho once. We didn't travel far, but the ride was mighty exhilarating while it lasted. We got on with great pomp and a derrick, but we didn't put on any unnecessary style when we went to get off. The beast evinced considerable surprise when we took up our location upon his dorsal fin. He seemed to think a moment, and then he gathered up his loins and delivered a volley of heels and hardware straight out from the shoulder. The recoil was fearful.

We saw that our seat was going to be contested, and we began to make a motion to dismount, but the beast had got under way by this time, so we breathed a silent hymn, and tightened our grip. He now went off into a spasm of tail, stiff-legged bucks. He pitched us so high that every time we started down we would meet him coming up on another trip. Finally, he gave us one grand, farewell boost, and we clove the firmament and split up the ethereal until our toes ached from the lowness of the temperature, and we could distinctly hear the music of the spheres. Then we came down and fell in a little heap about 110 yards from the starting point. A kind Samaritan gathered up our remains in a cigar-box and carried us to the hospital. As they looked pitingly at us, the attendant surgeons marveled as to the nature of our mishap. One said it was a cyclone, another that it was a railroad smash-up, but we thought of the calico-hided pony that was grazing peacefully in the dewy mead and we held our peace.—Santa Fe (N. M.) Democrat.

Upside Down.

One of the most singular cases of vision on record is found in the fourth grade of the Marysville school, in the person of Belle Kinney, a little girl 12 years of age. Her teacher discovered that she always read with her books upside down, and that when writing she invariably placed the copy in the same position and wrote backward, with the letters inverted and with her left hand. Not knowing whether to attempt a correction of the habit the teacher sent for Dr. I. N. Hamilton, president of the board of education, who tested her thoroughly with figures, pictures, reading and writing, and found that she was equally skillful with her books in any position, although the child had never particularly noticed her peculiarity, but expressed a desire to use her books as others do.

Vital Statistics of Massachusetts.

At a recent meeting of the Boston Society for Medical observation, Dr. Folsom cited the vital statistics of Massachusetts for forty years, as showing a decrease in the number of deaths from consumption in that State. Only about one-sixth of the total death rate is now caused by the disease. The Doctor thought physicians were too much inclined to give unfavorable prognostics in such cases, and he advised keeping patients quietly in one place, rather than shifting them about in search of a more favorable climate.

When He Returned.

Mr. Grablin, who is a candidate for Mayor, and who prides himself upon the respectability of his social relations, was met on the street by a well-dressed man.

"Ah, I am glad to see you," exclaimed the man, grasping Grablin's hand.

Grablin, who faintly remembered the man's face, and thinking that he had been away on an extended visit, slapped him on the shoulder and asked:

"Why, my dear friend, when did you return?"

"Got out to-day. The Governor pardoned me."—Arkansaw Traveler.

It Was the Trimmings.

"Blessed shade of Saint Cressus!" howled Old Hyson, when Mrs. H.'s millinery bill came in. "Bank of the Universe! $68 for a bonnet?"

"Yes, dear," she said, so sweetly, "these are the days of Jeffersonian simplicity. The bonnet only cost $1.50; the rest is for the trimmings."

And the old man grunned and paid the bill without a murmur.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Difference.

"Father," asked the young son of Deacon Squibbs, "what is the difference between a man who dyes wool on lambs and a New York editor?" "Well, now, really my son," beaming benignly on his offspring, "I am not prepared to state. What is the difference?" "Why, pa, one is a lamb dyer, and the other a"—"What! what! my son?" "New York editor," continued the youth, rolling his tongue around his cheek.

He Owned a Skating Rink.

"Well" remarked the divorce lawyer, "what alimony do you want?"

"I think $30,000 cash and an income of $30,000 a year besides lawyers' fees would only be fair," replied the lady.

"Fair! madam?" answered the lawyer in surprise. "What business is your husband in?"

"He owns a skating rink."

The Latest Stab.

"More Afghan troubles, I see," remarked a passenger from St. Louis; "and that reminds me of the first Afghan trouble I can remember."

"When was that?"

"Many years ago. I took two St. Louis girls out sleigh-riding one cold night and both of 'em tried to cover their ears with one Afghan. It couldn't be done and war followed."—Chicago Herald.

Guarding Against Temptation.

Little Minnie's mother had several times whipped her for going out into the street. The other day as the grocery-man was leaving the house, Minnie called to him and said:

"Tome back and shut the gate."

"Why?"

"So I can't get out."—Philadelphia Call.

Candor!

Mistress (catching the butler helping himself to a glass of "34" port)—"James! —I'm surprised——"

Mr. James—"So am I, Mu'm! I thought you were out!"—Punch.

On Old Battlefields.

Twenty years have not sufficed to destroy the explosive qualities of shells which were used in the late war. Forest fires have recently laid bare the old battlefields of the Wilderness, Virginia, and many old shells have exploded.

A friend of faultless spirit, but of an exceedingly immoral orthography, suggests the use of pepper as a preventive of drowsiness during public worship. Admirable! Let it be of the scarlet hue, and put it in the eye freely and without regard to cost. Perhaps a lighted match applied to the end of the sleeper's nose might also have a reviving effect. The best remedy is genuine piety.—Richmond (Va.) Religious Herald.

Money Tells the Tale!

I AGAIN call your attention to the fact that I have filled my shelves with a line of goods now most likely to be called for. These goods were bought in New York and Baltimore for "spot cash," and I expect to sell them for less than any man who does a credit business. And now, my friends, although I can't afford to blow with printer's ink, I have put my prices

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

Come and see for yourself. It will pay you to pay the cash for your goods and avoid the extra charges always incident to the credit business.

Again, only my own force is employed—another saving to my customers. I intend to run my business hereafter on a

Close Cash Basis,

and intend that you shall hear from me "before the races are over." Mark it!

Another word to my country patrons: I will, at a small discount,

PAY CASH FOR TRADE

if you do not wish my goods.

I promise to be, as I have been before, a benefit to you.

Yours with much respect.
