In honor of their triumph the Whigs of Baltimore on Tuesday last fired a grand salute of one hundred guns from Fair Mount, at 12 o'clock, and the same number of guns at the Park at 5 1 2 o'clock.

A rumor has just reached us,—says the Albany Daily Advertiser—that Gov. Marcy is about to decline the Herkimer nomination, and to take in place of it the vacant embassy to St. James. He has a brother-in-law abroad, who would probably be made secretary of legation.

RAIL ROAD TRAVELLING.—We see it stated, that Mr. Stephenson, the celebrated engineer, says, he will not be satisfied until the journey from Liverpool to London is made in two hours, being at the rate of a hundred and forty miles an hour! He has already travelled forty.

ESTIMATE.—The value of real and personal estate in the city and county of N. York, by the estimate of this year's assessment, amounts to one hundred and eighty eight millions of dollars.—N. Y. Star.

From the U. S. Gazette, Oct. 6.

We understand that the young man who lost his life in Locust ward, on the day of the ward election, was named WM. PERRY. He had been a member of the Jackson party, but seceded lately, (we speak from information, having had no acquaintance with the deceased.) It is stated to us, that he was counted off among the Whigs, & at the time of receiving the wound of which he died, was standing quietly apart from the crowd, and as night have been supposed, from danger. While we deeply deplore the fatal event, as well on account of those who directly suffer therefrom, as for the credit of our city, we cannot include in the censure which such an outrage deserves, the whole of the Van Buren party. The sanction which that party has given to violence on the days of elections, deserves deep reprobation; but homicide is chargeable directly only upon those who struck the blow, or were privy to the intention of the wicked perpetrator.

CORONER'S INQUEST ON THE BODY OF WILLIAM PERRY.

At an inquest held by me, at the house of Sarah Perry, No 143 Locust street, on the body of William Perry, it appeared in evidence, that the deceased was of sober and peaceable habits—was never known by his most intimate friends, to have had any quarrel or enmity between himself and others, either of a private or political nature—that himself and his friends were not in any crowd at the time he received the wound, but were quiet spectators of an affray which occurred at the corner of Twelfth and Locust streets, on the opposite side of the street—that suddenly there was a running of persons from the place of riot in different directions—that some of these persons stabbed William Perry in his flight, so suddenly and escaped with so great celerity, as to entirely elude the observations of the young man who was engaged in conversing with deceased, whose first notice of the attack, was from deceased exclaiming, "I am struck." On an examination of the body by Doctors Huston and Zantzinger, it appeared that some sharp pointed instrument had entered the fore part of the thigh, wounding the great artery, and extending to the lower part of the abdomen. The above particulars are published under a sense of duty, and that a true knowledge of the case may have a tendency to prevent the ill effects of misrepresentation upon the public mind, already much excited as respects this horrible outrage.

JOHN DICKERSON,
Coroner.

October 4th, 1834.

The Mayor of the city has offered a reward of $500, for the apprehension of the person who killed Mr. PERRY, on Friday.

From the U. S. Gazette, Oct 7.

We gave, yesterday, what appeared to be the general opinion of the respectable portion of citizens, as to the circumstances of young Perry's death. It appears now to be generally conceded, that the unfortunate man had consented to stand in the Whig ranks, with a view of promoting the election of two personal friends. Subsequently to which he received a wound, inflicted with some sharp instrument, which caused his death. This awful circumstance is deeply to be deplored. Every freeman is concerned to detect the perpetrator of the deed, as every freeman, of necessity, deplores the stain upon the institutions of our country, which such an act has caused.

But this act, painful and bloody as it is, can only be regarded as the natural consequence of that wicked violence which the Jackson men have, for a long time, been exercising with increasing boldness. What better than homicide could have been expected last year, when the Jackson men, of North Mulberry Ward, marched, in solid phalanx, from their rendezvous, to the place of election, each wearing a badge by which he could be signalized, whether called to aid in attacking a political foe marked for vengeance, or to be saved from the violence which was to be given to the opponents.—These men, thus marshaled, blocked up the access to the voting window, and violently kept therefrom the anti-Jackson men. It is difficult to guess what would have been the consequence, if those anti-Jackson men had sought to exercise their privilege of voting? On Friday last, the day on which the death of Mr. Perry was wrought, the Judges of the Ward Election, fairly chosen by the Whig party, were forcibly kept from the house in which the election was to be held. In North Mulberry Ward, the Whigs out-numbered their opponents by 76; yet the Van Buren men, who stood nearest the house, rushed into the voting room, and positively refused admittance to the Judges elected by the Whigs. In several of the wards in the northern Districts, it was the same. How well disposed to peace the Jackson men of Locust Ward were, may be gathered from the communication of Justice, which wa subjoin; and to which the writer is willing to append his name, with affidavit of its truth. With such brutal ferocity, manifested at various places by the Van Burenites, it is not strange that they have deprived one man of life.

The proceedings at Cedar Ward.

Mr. Chandler—Circumstances gave me an opportunity of noting the proceedings at this ward, on Friday evening, so favorable to a correct and impartial examination, that I consider it my duty to state what I was an eye witness to, for the purpose of showing who the offenders really were. I am not a resident, or a voter in Cedar Ward, but was there on business, having been commissioned to obtain the returns from that, and five other wards, for one of the daily newspapers. Cedar being the most remote ward, I commenced the performance of my duties there, at a few minutes after nine o'clock. While waiting for the votes to be counted, I observed a considerable body of men, extending from the ballot box window, down and partially across 12th street. They stood nearly in a body, perfectly quiet, but on passing along their line, and among them, I noticed a number with sticks in their hands, a circumstance which excited so much surprise that I immediately proceeded to the public house in Pine street, occupied by the Whigs of this Ward, for the purpose of mentioning my fears, that some breach of the peace was meditated. I was assured that they were the friends of the Whig cause, who had stationed themselves there to defend the polls of Cedar ward, against an attack which it was understood the Jackson men meditated. I returned to the tavern, on S. W. corner, where the polls were held, but found the votes were not yet counted.

While waiting, and at, probably, half past nine, I heard the cry of 'there they come!' and saw a number of persons coming from the direction of Locust Ward, down 12th street.—Anticipating bad work, I crossed over to the N. E. corner, for the purpose of witnessing the appearance and conduct of the mob, I moved a short distance up 12th, and as they were passing me, a halt was ordered; when immediately opposite to where I stood, the scattered forces, in advance of the main body, paused until the whole were consolidated. During this period repeated shouts were made of 'Huzza Locust," "Come on Locust," and similar exclamations, until orders were issued to "march on," when the mob proceeded to cross Pine street, and as they approached the Whig party, a general rush and huzza was made; the only sounds that were distinctly audible being 'huzza for Jackson' with an occasional shout for 'Ash' and 'Southerland.' and 'down with the traitors,' &c. In a very few moments after the scuffle and fight commenced, I noticed the Jackson mob flying up and down Pine street, and a portion of them up 12th.—In less than ten minutes, after the assault was made, the space in front of the tavern, was again clear, with the exception of the voters of Cedar Ward, who were again quietly assembling around the ballot box window.

Being intimately acquainted with a family, consisting in part of five females and several children, who, from their proximity to the disturbance, I was apprehensive, would be greatly agitated and alarmed; I started for their dwelling four or five doors from the corner, when, as I approached the house, I was astonished at seeing their steps covered and a portion of the mob apparently forcing their way into the house, I immediately ascertained, however, that they were occupied in conveying one of their wounded companions into Dr. Swayn's residence, whose door is adjoining that of the females for whose safety I had been solicitious. This individual, unfortunately wounded dangerously, as I afterwards learned, proved to be Mr. Hutchinson, proprietor and keeper of the Jackson Head Quarters, at the corner of Locust and 12th street.

I might here attempt to impress your mind, with reflections that occupied mine, at witnessing this open and reckless desecration of the sacred right of suffrage. This organised attempt to defeat the privileges of freemen and to rob them of their votes, for this assault, made after the poll was closed, when there could have been no design of aiding their friends, in getting in their votes, could have been fairly considered by the Whigs only as a desperate effort to plunder and bear off the ballot boxes by their infuriated opponents, is calculated to excite the gravest apprehensions for our liberties, and justify any terms of harsh and indignant censure. But it is not my purpose to indulge in language of irritation. The results of this unfortunate business, are such as must awaken the deep & lasting &, I trust, the salutary regret of all parties; while it will admonish those who would cheat & bully freemen out of the privilege of the elective franchise, that it cannot always be done with impunity

From this plain relation, which I am willing, at any moment, to verrify under oath, and which will unquestionably be sustained by any impartial observer on the ground that night, the injury committed by the Whig party, on the occasion of the assault, in which one individual, at least, received a fatal blow, was done in their own defence; in defence of their poll, in defence of rights, which, had they shrunk from, would have proved them unworthy the name of freemen—of American citizens:

The friends of order, and of the laws, have the proud satisfaction of knowing, that they have acted on the defensive, not only in the above instance, but in that which followed, when the mob from Locust Ward, avowing their determination of avenging the wounds of their associates, who were injured in the first assault, rallied again; and aided by a large mass from Southwark, with upwards of 70 transparencies, and numbering altogether seven or eight hundread men, proceeded, with loud threats and shouts from the Locust Ward Head Quarters, down to Cedar Ward.—They were there again met, by those who quietly awaited their approach, and who deserve the title of resolute and determined American citizens, and with the aid this time of the watchmen's rattle the mob was routed their lights were beaten down, and in an almost incredible short space of time there was not a transparency to be seen.

In this instance, also, the Freemen of Cedar Ward acted solely on the defensive, they went into no other ward, to assault those who might happen to differ with them in opinion; they stood upon their own ground, and quietly surrounded their own ballot boxes, determined to defend them from any assault. And in every instance, on every occasion, wherever disturbances and riots existed on Friday last, it will be found that the Whig supporters of the laws and the Constitution, have invariably acted in self defence, in proof of which let the preceding facts, together with those already published, be dispassionately considered.
