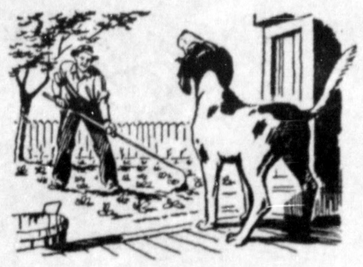
Down the Line
with Johnny Bell



They wouldn't treat a dog like that!

A family owned a dog who learned to bark when the telephone rang for that household. If the family was in the yard, the dog would run to the porch and bark. Then the ring was changed. A few days later, the owner of the dog reported that his dog was developing a case of nerves over the fact that the family had another ring. It wasn't an easy problem to solve, but the telephone people did it. They found a way to restore three rings to that number and now the dog's as happy as, well, a dog!

"Certainly makes things easier!"

That's what one customer says about courtesy on the party line. She's perfectly right, of course. People respond to courtesy and consideration. And on the party line, you know what that means. Better service for everyone. So remember to space out your calls so that others may use the line in the intervals . . . keep them reasonably brief . . . surrender the line to others in case of emergency . . . and hang up properly when you're finished calling. Before long everybody on the line gets the idea—and returns courtesy for courtesy.

July is a good month to—Re-read the Declaration of Independence, and wonder at the wisdom of the founding fathers who wrote it.... Control Japanese beetles with DDT powder on flowers and shrubs.... Give animals in short pastures some extra hay or silage.... Cut and burn raspberry canes when harvest is over.... See your county agent for his latest recommendations on fly control.... Make full use of ladino pastures for growing pigs and sows.... Keep livestock and poultry happy and producing with plenty of clean water and cool shade.... Sit back and hope for enough rain to keep the corn growing.
