Happenings that Effect the Future of Everyone

The 1954 elections, which will determine the political fate of all the members of the House and one third of the members of the Senate, are more than a year away. But to all practical purposes the campaign is underway now. As U.S. News & World Report put it, members of both parties "are issuing statements, making speeches, holding rallies, setting up party organizations, working as if the voting were to be this year instead of next.'

In this early stage of the game, the Democratic leaders are the more aggressive, which is pretty much to be expected—the party which is out of power and trying to get back in always carries the battle to the enemy. Another reason for it is found in the character and attitude of Mr. Truman, who is a firm believer in knock-down-and-drag-out tactics so far as political wars are concerned—the kind of tactics which brought him his wholly unexpected victory in '48.

Actually, of course, Mr. Stevenson is the titular head of the Democratic Party. If he wants the nomination again and works for it, the chances are he will get it. But Mr. Stevensson is not the "give 'em hell" type. He does not see everything in blacks and whites as Mr.Truman does, and he does not argue that the Democrats are all on the side of the angels while all Republicans are the devil's deciples. Indeed, there are a number of fields—foreign policy being one—where it is hard to find any basic difference between the views of Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Eisenhower. So, when it comes to the heavy line-plunging, Mr. Truman is filling the fullback spot.

An excellent preview of things to come was provided in Mr. Truman's Detroit speech on Labor Day. He gave unrestricted praise to the achievements of the Democrats during the 1932-52 period, saying, "We stopped wild speculation. We taxed in accordance with the ability to pay. We enacted minimum-wage laws and social-security laws. We helped agriculture and small business. We moved to develop the great natural resources of the country in the interest not of a few exploiters but of all he people . . . We saw to it that the American labor movement got an even break Then, naturally he denounced the acts of the new administration in equally unequivocal terms.

The Republicans have not yet brought out their biggest guns to present their case. But the general line the ywill take is easily detailed. Their principal arguments, in the view of U.S.

Auto Is Invented to Balk Drunks

German inventor Guenter Hehemann said he had developed an automobile that cannot be driven by an intoxicated person.

Applying for a patent in Munich, Hehemann said his "psychotester" can be installed in any automobile.

When the driver puts the key in the ignition three lights flash on and put him through a drill before the motor can be started. One light calls for one turn of the wheel, two lights for two turns and three lights for three turns.

Hehemann said a sober driver can follow the instructions, but an intoxicated person cannot.

On the road the gasoline flow to the engine is cut down when the steering wheel is turned. An elert driver, said Hehemann, will immediately press the accelerator and the car will respond. But, if the reactions it not immediate the car stalls and will not start until the proper signals are received.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Modern Art Takes a Licking!

Did you know we had a real artist in town? Yes sir! Handy Jackson was a contributor to the Sculpture Exhibition at the Centerville Fair last week.

His work was streaky pink and curved all around—sort of streamlined. Caused quite a stir. Nobody was sure what it was supposed to represent, but some liked it and thought it was good art. Handy gave me the lowdown:

"Why, it was nothing but a piece of cattle salt our cows have been lickin' at for months. I just had it mounted. Fooled a lot of folks — one fellow even wanted to buy it!"

From where I sit, Handy's "modern art" just shows how some people can be led astray. Some even get to be "experts"—especially about the other fellow's business. Whether it's art or music, or a simple thing like choosing, say, beer or milk with a snack, we should live and let live. There's no call for either of us to set ourselves up as a "model" for the other!
