The Depreciation Problem On the Farm

Modern farming is a business, and the farmer must deal with most of the financial problems that are an inescapable part of the operation of any business enterprise.

One of these is depreciation of machinery. Today good mechanical equipment is an absolute "must" if the farmer is to get maximum production at the lowest cost and is to conserve and enrich his land not only for his own future use, but for the use of coming generations. That equipment is ruggedly built and has a long life. Even so, it wears out eventually. And before it wears out, it may be made obsoles- by the appearance of sustantial improv-

Savings Bond the Treasury De tment has proposed a novel idea. It is called theFarm Machinery Replacement Plan. Under it, the farmer invests an amount equal to his annual machinery depreciation costs in the bonds, us methodically build re of re- k of that whether se bonds me other o handle needs.
