SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1919

The boys are coming home. Welcome, boys, thrice welcome.

Experts now state the "flu" epidemic was caused by the lack of sugar. Bring on the preserves, Hannah, and let's prevent a relapse.

President Wilson is to leave Europe February 16, and return by March 15. The little matter of crossing the ocean does not bother folks these days.

The President of the German Republic is to receive a salary of $250,000 a year. It is presumed that he will not resign because of the impossibility of living on his salary.

Mason Shehan, Esq., State Insurance Commissioner, has resigned. Salary too small. We admire the man, who, when the pay of his job doesn't suit him and gives up the job instead of crying over the pay. We venture the assertion that there will be plenty of men ready to accept the job at $2,500.

WAKE UP, COMMITTEE!

Awake ye people of Kent county! What are you doing toward welcoming our returning heroes, and honoring our beloved dead? Shall we be the last to act in this great patriotic movement. Everywhere preparations are in progress to thus honor our noble boys. What part will Kent county play, not that of a sluggard. These boys, our sons and brothers, are returning to us, to their home-land, what welcome shall we extend them.

To those others, our glorious dead what memorial erect?

Are we so complaisant that we can calmly accept their great sacrifice, and do nothing to show our appreciation. Have we so soon forgotten that these lads of ours sacrificed all that life held dear, and bravely and courageously went forth to battle, that we might live happily, in a free country.

Shame on us as Marylanders, if we fail to arise to a sense of our privileges, and arrange such a welcome for these returning heroes, and such a memorial for our dear immortal dead, that will be an honor to Kent county and to our country? Then awake! be up and doing! You men who were privileged to remain by your own fireside, now show your patriotism in deed, not words.

A MOTHER.

THE LET-DOWN AFTER THE WAR

When the strain of the war period ended, many people developed a case of that tired feeling. They were sick of wheatless days and meatless meals. They hated this continual prodding to exercise thrift, give money, save food, buy bonds. Many of them see no reason why they should not live just as they did before the war.

Yet the sacrifices that have been made will be futile if they have not taught something. While this war was not the fault of the American people, it developed as the result of certain world wide tendencies in which every people had some share. If wars are to be avoided in future everyone must take some share in building a new civilization on a firmer basis.

There are certain lessons that every sensible person should have learned from this experience. A few are suggested.

One—To stop the pursuit of money as the first end in life. The money grabbing spirit produces hostility between classes and makes the nation less united when it confronts difficulties.

Two—To deal justly with all men. Universal justice would produce national unity and a united nation is a powerful nation.

Three—To exercise thrift and save some money each year. This will produce capital that will develop the resources of the country, make it ready for any emergency and reduce living costs.

Four—To give some time regularly to promote community causes. The man who lives for himself alone gets no help from other people. If his neighbors are like him, he gets no help from the advance of his community.

If such ideas have been acquired the war experience has had value.

Buick Utility

UTILITY, as expressed in the various Buick Valve-in-Head models for nineteen-nineteen, is a composite thing, made up of those elements which may be considered vital factors in the serviceability of a motor car.

This utility has been arrived through the experience of nearly twenty years, during which time the Buick course has been characterized by unswerving fidelity to accepted engineering ideals, and constructive advancement has been made by the processes of elimination and improvement.

Always, Buick cars have been developed, not re-designed. And for nineteen-nineteen they reach the highest pinnacle in this development. Each model has a certain scope, a particular range of usefulness. Enough models have been provided in the complete Buick line to enable any purchaser to select a Buick car that is exactly equipped to serve him to the utmost limit of his demands for utility.
