Section 4. And be it enacted, That the said sum of $10,000.00 or so much as may be necessary therefor for the purpose, shall by the said Commissioners of Chestertown be used and applied to the purchasing of additional fire equipment for said town, and if any part of the proceeds of sale of said bonds be left over after the purchasing of said fire equipment, the said amount is to be turned over to the Treasury of said town to be used by the said Commissioners of Chestertown in improving the streets of said Chestertown.

REV. JOHN WHITE SURPRISED

Children and Grandchildren Celebrate His Seventy-third Birthday.

An enjoyable surprise was given on Tuesday evening to Rev. John White by his children and grandchildren. It was the occasion of his 73rd birthday anniversary. The members of the family gathered at the home of the only daughter, Mrs. James Leach, 2230 Pine street, Wilmington. Mr. White had planned to attend the reception given by the people of Cookman M. E. Church to their pastor but was persuaded by Mrs. White to visit the home of his daughter first and there the children and grandchildren surprised him. A bouquet of 73 carnations was presented to Mr. White. Mr. White has been married twice, the children being by his first wife. There were ten children, three dying in infancy. Six children survive, five sons and a daughter. The oldest son, John White, Jr., died a few years ago leaving a widow and two sons, all of whom were present at the reception. The other children are: William P. White, president of the Snow White Laundry and well known in this city; Harry N. White, shop clerk of the Pennsylvania Railroad shops: Rev. Frank White, pastor of the M. E. Church at Ridgely, Md.; Clarence White, clerk in the mailing department of the du Pont Co.; Rev. Leonard White, pastor of Mt. Salem M. E. Church, and Bertha, wife of James Leach, clerk at the experimental station of the duPont Co. There are 20 grandchildren and one great grandchild. Mr. White for a number of years served as a supply preacher in the Wilmington Conference, retiring from active service at the last session of Conference. Mr. White was married to his present wife, who was Mrs. Adolphus Strong, in 1911, the ceremony being performed by his son, Rev. Leonard White, who was then assistant superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Delaware. He served Fairlee Church.

INTERESTING MEETING HELD IN CHESTERTOWN

Tomatoes Was The Theme of The Addresses Made

The tomato meeting held in the Court House on Thursday afternoon, April the 15th, under the auspices of the County Agent proved to be a most interesting and beneficial meeting. About 140 farmers were present. Mr. E. A. Corey, president of the Kent County Produce Exchange presided over the meeting by request of County Agent Derrick.

Chairman E. A. Corey first called upon County Agent Derrick to state the purpose of the meeting. The County Agent said that the meeting was primarily for the purpose of increasing the yield per acre of tomatoes in Kent county.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, Director of the Extension Service of Maryland, was then called upon to speak upon the "Maintenance of the tomato industry in Maryland." Dr. Symons first paid a tribute to the farmers of Kent County for leaving their farm work to attend such a meeting; for gathering together on such a beautiful day for farm work; and for realizing the value of a public discussion on the tomato industry. Dr. Symons touched upon the seriousness of the present situation in the United States regarding the farmer.

Dr. Symons said that the tomato industry in Maryland is a $50,000,000.-00 enterprise or business. Maryland has a record in the past five to six million cases of tomatoes annually. Last year Maryland only canned three million cases. California a few years ago canned one hundred thousand cases of tomatoes. This number has steadily increased until last year when California canned three million cases. Dr. Symons stated that, of course he knew that last year was a very bad tomato year for Mar land. Both farmers and canners lost money, and the farmers lost the most. Dr. S mons urged the farmers to consider that there are three parties to the tomato industry, the grower, the canner, and the consumer. The consumer should get a can of well-packed tomatoes, but could not be expected to pay more than twenty-five cents per can. Dr. Symons described the profiteer among the farmer as one who stays out of organization, lets the other fellow do all the work, and benefit thereby.

Dr. Symons recommended that the farmers raise their own tomato seed, that every farmer in Kent county join the Produce Exchange and stick, and that the acreage be cut in half this year. Dr. Symons closed with the appeal that the farmers of Maryland hold the tomato industry, and raise tomatoes at a profit and put them on the market so that the consumer will purchase them.

Professor Wellington, considered by some authorities the best vegetable man in this country, was the next speaker. Profesor Wellington said that 3 or 4 tons of tomatoes was too low, and that 8 or 10 tons should be grown. He stated that he once grew 27 tons on one acre. "Manure is the best fertilizer for tomatoes," continued Prof. Wellington. "Fields should be rotated which would increase fertility and also would stamp out disease." Plants transplanted more than once have been proven to give much larger yield. Prof. Wellington recommends getting tomatoes in the ground earlier, and advised the use of hot beds and cold frames for getting plants started. Prof. Wellington recommended that each grower save his own seed from plants selected in the field. Good, healthy, stout, good-colored plants which bear forty or more tomatoes should be selected. Prof. Wellington displayed some charts showing the value of sprayng tomatoes and recommended that young plants be dipped before transplanting.

Tom Fowler, a very successful Kent county tomato grower, gave an excellent description of how he grows tomatoes. Mr. Fowler picks out his land a year ahead and manures the field thoroughly and heavily. He plows it when he plows for corn and always plows his tomato land deep. Mr. Fowler puts commercial fertilizer on his tomato land at the rate of 800 pounds per acre in addition to the manure. He saves his own seed, and has always done so. Tom Fowler raises the greater Baltimore and John Bear varieties and often gets 12 tons per acre, and even last year grew 8 tons per acre.

Tom Bryan, also a very successful tomato grower of Kent county, was the next speaker, and also gave an excellent description of how he grows tomatoes. Mr. Bryan usually selects a part of his corn field for his tomato patch, also considering his haul. Several varieties have been tried by Mr. Bryan but he prefers the Greater Baltimore. He does not work them when they are wet from either rain or dew. Mr. Bryan cultivates his crop about 7 times during the season. He saves seed sometimes but not always. Mr. Bryan manures his tomato land heavily and thoroughly. Experiences cited by Mr. Bryan show that it does not pay to grow tomatoes in the same piece of land two years in succession. Tom Bryan has averaged over 8 tons per acre for the past 14 years.

Mr. A. L. Harris, secretary of the Kent County Produce Exchange, was called upon to read the resolutions adopted at the last board meeting.

Fifteen farmers who were present joined the Kent County Produce Exchange after the meeting. Dr. Symons then gave a short talk on the Temple of Agriculture.
