PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claims to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed?

Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR GOLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPAIBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensatory as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes. Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys.

Our Peruna Tablet Is Peruna With Fluid Removed.

These opinions as to the ingredients of Peruna are held by all writers on the subject, including Bartholow and Scudder.

OF HYDRASTIS, BARTHOLOW SAYS it is applicable to stomatitis (catarrh of the mucous surfaces of the mouth), follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), chronic coryza (catarrh of the head). This writer classes hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic catarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes).

BARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBEB, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostatorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSPAUGH, MEDICINAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal herbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, collinsonia canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp, dropsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficacy.

This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample quotations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. An Amazing Coincidence

There were amazing coincidences in connection with inquests held on two men at the London Hospital recently by Coroner Wynne E. Baxter.

Both men were named George Lee.

Both were window-cleaners.

Both were fatally injured by falling from windows.

Both were taken to the London Hospital.

Both accidents occured at 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Both men died on Sunday.

The cause of death in each case was fracture of the skull.

The inquests on both men were held on the same afternoon, by the same coroner, and with the same jury.

The men were not related to one another.

One man was 35 and the other 41 years old.

Why He Sent No Kisses.

George had been away on business for a whole long week, and during that time he had sent Clara 10 letters, 6 letter cards and 42 picture postcards.

Why, then, was there a touch of coldness in her greeting when he flew to her arms on his return?

"Dearest," he whispered, "what is the matter?"

"Oh, George," she said, "you didn't send a kiss in your ninth letter."

"My precious," he replied, "that night I had steak and onions for dinner, and you wouldn't have liked a kiss after onions, would you?"

And, such is the unfathomable power of love, she was satisfied and nestled to him.

Added Years.

Young Wife—Tomorrow will be my birthday, dear.

Young Husband—You'll be 21?

Young Wife—No; 25.

Young Husband—Why, a year ago, just before our wedding, you told me you were only 20.

Young Wife—Yes; but I have aged rapidly since our marriage.—Chicago News.

That unless she shows courtesy to others she cannot expect it from them, and that the best answer to rudeness is being blind to it.—New Haven Register.

POCKETS FOR WOMEN.

"It is remarkable how women are leaning toward masculinity in the matter of pockets," said a salesman in a Market street department store. "The demand at present is so great that now in almost every garment intended for women one or more pockets are to be found. In the latest hosiery, pockets are woven in the stockings when they are made. The newest of knitted silk shirts are also equipped with pockets, and many night dresses of the higher grade have small pockets in the garment. The fashionable boas and muffs invariably contain more than one securely hidden and fastened pocket. Even enterprising milliners are making tiny pockets in the tops of their most expensive hats. These pockets, which of necessity are very small, are completely hidden under the lining of the hat. The midwinter gauntlet glove is provided with two pockets stitched on the outside. One of them laps over and snaps, and is used for small change, and the other is a patch pocket and is intended for the handkerchief, which is allowed to stick out and ruffles at the top."—Philadelphia Record.

PRINCESS LAZAROVITCH.

Princess Lazarovitch, of Servia, American wife of the claimant of the throne of that country, visited Secretary Root recently. It is understood she does not ask anything of the State Department except that her private fortune, invested in Servia before her marriage, and the estate given her by her husband in the marriage contract, be restored to her.

Princess Lazarovitch was Miss Eleanor Calhoun, daughter of Judge Calhoun, of California. She was formerly an actress and after studying under Sardou, in Paris, played leading roles in a score of productions in Paris and London. In the zenith of her career she gave up the stage to become the wife of Prince Eugene Lazar Lazarovitch.

Since King Peter's ascension to the throne in Servia the lands of Prince and Princess Lazarovitch have been seized by the crown, because he is a claimant to the throne. While the princess is advocating her husband's claim, she is asking of Secretary Root nothing but the recovery of lands which she says are rightfully hers.

to be always well dressed.—Washington Post.

THE WELL DRESSED WOMAN.

The news comes from Paris that a leader of fashion says a woman cannot be well dressed in the gay French city for less than $30,000 a year. She must pay at least $600 for a dress for ordinary wear and $3000 for a "creation." Proper hats cannot be had for less than $250 each, and the dainty hosiery of my lady of fashion must run $5 to $50 a pair.

That story was probably only circulated in America, and with the intention to catch the American eye and gull the American trade. Because of our lavish use of money, Americans have come to be regarded by Europeans as wholly money-minded. They think we have set up the dollar mark as the arbiter of good taste, and judge only worth and elegance and art by what they cost in terms of gold. It is not true that the dollar mark is the symbol of value to all of us. We do not form our tastes upon the size of it. We do not think that richness means elegance, or gaudiness beauty. Our American women do not need all the appliances nor appurtenances some of their Parisian sisters require to make them well dressed. The American woman has taste, grace, style and dignity, and she need only gown these with a simplicity as sweet as her own character

QUEEN SETS A NEW FASHION.

By having her dinner brought from Buckingham palace and served in the rear of the royal box during the interval between the first and second acts of the opera the Queen has set a fashion that London society believes will not only become popular for the charm of the idea, but will also solve the practical problem of ministering to the appetite at early performances without missing parts of the opera. Owing to the increasing demand for the rendition of operas without cuts, the eating problem has recently become very acute at the long performances. The situation becomes especially annoying when the performance begins as early as 6.30, as was the case with "Siegfried" in English at Covent Garden recently.

During the general scamper to neighboring refreshment bars and sandwich depots between the first and second acts four attendants carefully carried into the rear of the royal box a small table, already set, and containing the queen's favorite dishes. The food had been prepared at the palace and kept warm by means of patent heat retaining devices.

Thus Queen Alexandra, with one or two friends, was able to turn from the stage to dinner, which they had time to enjoy heartily before the beginning of the next act. When the curtain ascended the attendants disappeared with the dinner table as silently as they had appeared.

Many persons believe that box dinner parties will be accepted as really smart and sensible functions at Covent Garden in the future.—New York Times.

IF SHE WERE A MAN.

Mme. Sarah Grand, the once much-discussed lady who wrote "The Heavenly Twins," was asked by M. T. O. to say what she would do if she were a man. She prefaced her not very interesting remarks by the following not uninteresting statement: "Not that I should ever have cared to be a man. It is so much easier to be a woman, for one thing. Take it that you have been born in tolerably agreeable circumstances, that you are healthy, intelligent, industrious, and have the heart to think and feel for others, all that you require in order to make a success of your life as a woman is charm, and charm comes of cultivation. If a woman have charm to perfection she need have no other grace apparent, for charm couches for the possession of all good graces. The plainest women endowed with charm are more beloved than the most beautiful without it.

"But just think what the endowment of a man must be and what he must accomplish in order to make a good thing of his life! He may get through his early school days with tolerable satisfaction to himself by dint of not thinking much about anything, but from the time he leaves school and discovers, as so often happens, that he has not been learning anything during all those precious early years to fit him for any one useful pursuit, and that he has to recommence at the beginning of something somewhere and work his way up again—from that time for the majority of men the path of life is all up hill if they do their duty, slow, laborious, heavy going, or else it is rapidly down hill, and from bad to worse physically, materially, mentally or morally, one or the other if not all four. No; I cannot see the advantage of being a man so long as one has a fair start as a woman. But just supposing for fun, as the children say, that I were a man—what would I do? How should I order my existence? What a revolution in a woman's whole habit of thought the bare supposition of such a possbility makes!"

The Country Newspaper.

The real bulwark of the country is not the great metropolitan newspaper, but the neighborhood weekly printed in the country newspaper office, remarks Editor and Publisher.

Seventy-five per cent. of the population of the United States is located in the rural districts. The farmers, who are the real wealth producers, rely for their news upon the small daily or weekly published in the nearest town or village. They want to know what their friends and neighbors are doing, what prices are being paid in the markets for their products, and what the Legislature or Congress is up to. They like to read a good short story, an article or two on crop conditions or about improvements in farming machinery, etc. All these things the farmer finds in his home paper, which he prefers to the larger and perhaps better edited metropolitan daily. He cares little about what society people are doing in New York, Chicago or Kansas City, but he does want to read about the last sociable or entertainment given at the church or town hall.

The country paper has other admirers besides the farmer. You will find a copy of it on the desk of the bank president in Philadelphia or the broker in Wall Street. Other papers may be thrown into the waste basket unread, but not the weekly from the prairie town or New England village, where its recipient was born. Every line of the local column in which is chronicled the fact that "Deacon William Smith has painted his barn," is eagerly read, for although he may be one of the city's richest and most influential business men, he has not lost interest in the neighbors and friends of his childhood home. The little paper is to him a message from another world. It brings to him the breath of the fields and glimpses of a simpler life in which he once found an all satisfying joy.

The country weekly is a much better publication than it was a few years ago. Its editor is a clean-cut, wide-awake, self-respecting business man who commands respect because he deserves it.

Animals and Music.

Experiments have proved on numerous occasions that animals, both domestic and wild, are susceptible to music. Who has not heard a dog howling when touched by sweet strains?

Among animals in captivity it was found that all were more or less affected by the sound of a violin. The lions were evidently pleased, opening their eyes to a lively measure, and closing them again when the tune was soft and slow. The bears swung their unwieldly heads in time with the melody, and seemed to be soothed thereby.

The kangaroos and deer both showed much active pleasure, the former jumping and skipping about when a Scottish reel was played. The monkeys, on the other hand displayed curiosity as to how the violinist made such a noise. Once this was satisfied, they paid no further heed to the matter.

When the wolves were visited, it was found that low, soft music caused them to relax their restless movements. They lay down in evident content, but when the music became lively they disregarded it a together, and resumed their nervous pacing to and fro.

HOW TO KNOW PURE PAINT.

A Way in Which it May be Identified Before Using.

After a building has been painted long enough for a weather test, it is easy to tell if the paint used was made of pure White Lead or not. But such belated knowledge comes like locking the barn after the colt is stolen.

What one wants is a test that will tell the quality of the paint before it and the labor of putting it on are paid for.

Nature has provided a way in which genuine White Lead may be positively distinguished from adulterated or fake White Lead before you spend a cent on your painting.

Pure White Lead is made from metallic lead, and, under intense heat, such as is produced by a blow-pipe, pure White Lead will resolve itself back into metallic lead. If, however, it is not genuine White Lead, or if it contains the slightest trace of adulteration, the change will not take place. Therefore the "blow-pipe" test is an absolute and final one.

The National Lead Company are urging every one interested in painting to make this test of paint before using it, and they guarantee that the pure White Lead sold under their "Dutch Boy Painter" trade-mark will always prove absolutely pure under the "blow-pipe" or any other test. To make it easy for you to perform the experiment they will send you free upon request a blow-pipe and everything necessary for you to make the test, together with a valuable booklet on paint. Address, National Lead Company, Woodbridge Building, New York City.

Who Was the Man?

While walking upon an unfrequented path I met an aged man who was carrying two lighted laterns. Recognizing him, I cried:

"Ah, Diogenes, isn't it about time you gave up your search for an honest man?"

And he passed on, weeping; for he had far to go.—Life.

Automobile Mortality.

Consul Frank W. Mahan writes from Nottingham England that the secretary of the Highways Protection League reports that, according to accounts in the press, 932 automobile accidents occured in Great Britain in 1907, killing 215 persons and injuring 675. For these accidents and other motor car offenses 2,270 persons were summoned, of whom 2,046 were convicted. As the number of automobiles in use is estimated at 45,000, it would seem that one in about every twenty-two did something illegal last year.—Kansas City Journal.

MUSIC STUDENTS Should Have Steady Nerves.

The nervous system of the musician is often very sensitive, and any habit like coffee drinking may so upset the nerves as to make regular and necessary daily practice next to impossible.

"I practice from seven to eight hours a day and study Harmony two hours," writes a Mich. music student. "Last September I was so nervous I could only practice a few minutes at a time and mother said I would have to drop my music for a year.

"This was terribly discouraging, as I couldn't bear the thought of losing a whole year of study. Becoming convinced that my nervousness was caused largely by coffee, and seeing Postum so highly spoken of, I decided I would test it for a while.

"Mother followed the directions carefully and I thought I had never tasted such a delicious drink. We drank Postum every morning instead of coffee, and by November I felt more like myself than for years, and was ready to resume my music.

"I now practice as usual, do my studying and when my day's work is finished I am not any more nervous than when I began.

"I cannot too highly recommend Postum to musicians who practice half a day. My father is a physician and recommends Postum to his patients. Words cannot express my appreciation for this most valuable health beverage, and experience has proven its superiority over all others." "There's a Reason."

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a new-born baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, 1907."
