With the new cleaning machines that I have lately added, I feel safe in guaranteeing a cleaner and purer line of Corn Goods than can be produced by any mill in the county.

Seed Wheat.

I have just placed a machine, by the use of which I can thoroughly clean SEED WHEAT of all foreign matter, for the cost of only 5 cents per bushel. My long experience in handling grain justifies me in saying that the use of this machine on SEED WHEAT is the only method by which the highest standard of excellence can be obtained. I can clean it for you while you wait, and you can take it right back with you. All screenings returned with wheat.

I am thankful for all past patronage and ask the continuance of the same.

BUSINESS OFFICE in the KENT NEWS BUILDING, where we shall be pleased to see our friends and the public.

CHESTERTOWN, March 19, 1892.

WE ARE STILL IN THE FIELD
—MANUFACTURING—
Our Standard Grades of Fertilizer.

TRADE MARK

Our Special Fertilizer for Oats has proven itself to be particularly adapted to that crop, and to those farmers contemplating sowing this spring we would be glad to have them give this goods a trial.

Then, for Truck,
we manufacture two grades that have been used for years in competition with such goods as Mapes', Yarnell's, Lister's and others, and compared so favorably that we are just in receipt of orders for NINE CAR LOADS, to go to the truckers of New Jersey, Virginia and Delaware. If you are going to plant potatoes, peas, vegetables or top-dress your asparagus. See, or correspond with us before so doing.

Then Your Peach Trees should not be neglected because last year's crop was not as remunerative as anticipated. Three of our largest and best fruit growers have been to us and said that they could tell just where our FRUIT GROWER was used, and that they certainly are going to use it again this spring from the fact the peaches where it went were larger and brought more money. This article and its merits has become so well known that comment from us is unnecessary. We have now in our factory ALL THE O. B. GUANO IN THE UNITED STATES, and will only say to those farmers who are going to use it would do well to send in their orders early, or will not be able to supply them with this goods.

New Discovery by Accident
HAIR ON THE NECK, FACE, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON

—SILK DRESS— FREE TO INTRODUCE IT.

quickly destroyed and permanently removed with QUEEN'S ANTI-HAIRINE, the new and wonderful discovery. Discovered by accident, while compounding a solution, a part was accidently spilled on the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. It is perfectly harmless, and so simple any child can use it. Lay the hair over and apply for a few minutes, and the hair disappears as if by magic. No scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. Thousands who have been annoyed with hair on their FACE, NECK and ARMS attest its merits. It cannot fail. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently, the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require one or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application without the slightest pain or injury when applied or ever afterward. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming can also use it. Harmless as water. Price of Queens Anti-Hairine $1. per bottle, sent in safety mailing boxes postage paid by us, (securely sealed from observation). Send money or stamps by letter with full address written plainly. Notes of Local Interest.

Mr. Shewell, of Rock Hall, had charge of the services at St. Paul's P. E. Church last Sunday. The church is without a regular supply since Rev. Mr. Sutton left and services are often held under the leadership of Mr. Shewell, a devoted member of the church and a scholarly gentlemen. The people of that locality are fortunate in securing his services.

Rev. W. W. W. Wilson, of Smyrna, who was present at the missionary anniversary held at Millington M. E. Church Sunday evening, March 6, said never in his life had he seen a programme better gotten up for an occassion like that of Sunday evening and what was remarkable, there was not a single mistake made in rendering it. The missionary collection of the Sunday, school ($77), the pastor, Rev. E. E. White, said was the largest he has ever had during his entire pastorate.

Rev. G. Q. Bacchus, who has successfully filled the bill, as Pastor of Mt. Pleasant M. P. Church, for two years, notified his official men that he desired to make a change at the end of the conference year, and therefore would not return here as Pastor for another year. At their delegate meeting, a a few evenings since, Capt. G. S. McCready was elected Lay delegate, and we understand that he will go to Conference, unlimited in the amount of salary to be paid. It is reported that Mt. Pleasant will pay $1,000 to her next minister. The members and friends of the church seem to want Rev. J. M. Holmes as their next pastor. Mr. Holmes is a strong preacher, and no doubt would please the people. We regret, however, to part with Bacchus. He is a genial, whole souled gentlemen, and a good preacher, too. Notwithstanbing a little dissension in the church, his salary was increased for the year now closing, and it has been paid with less effort, with some members withholding their contributions than a smaller salary, heretofore, with all the members in harmony. We are sorry that he will not return, and we take pleasure in saying, that the charge securing him as Pastor will make no mistake. The Quarterly Conference of Mt. Pleasant, was held on Monday evening last, at which resolutions, complimenting his earnest christian work, despite obstacles, and eulogizing him as a minister and a man, were passed unanimously.—Crisfield Leader.

MEALS BY SCHEDULE.

Close Figuring as to What Can Be Eaten While Waiting For the Train.

From the Boston Herald.

"I have only two minutes to get my breakfast and catch my train," said a tall man in an Irish frieze ulster to the waiter in a railway station the other morning. "What can you give me in the smallest possible time? Take into consideration, too, the fact that I have left my false teeth under the pillow at my hotel."

"We have just the thing for you, sir," and he immediately brought a cup of coffee and a piece of lemon pie.

The gentlemen sat down, and in less than a minute from the time he gave his order was rushing toward the office for his ticket.

"He made pretty good time," remarked a customer who sat at the next table.

"Oh, that's nothing," replied the waiter, "we beat that every day. I once knew a man who came in here who only had sixty seconds in which to get his breakfast, buy his ticket and reach his train."

"What did you give him?"

"Two soft baked apples and a glass of milk. He finished in just fifteen seconds, took another fifteen for the purchase of his ticket, and when I last saw him he was walking up and down the platform smoking a cigar, impatiently waiting for the train to start."

"I suppose most passengers who come in here are in a hurry?"

"Never saw but two who were not, and one of these was a soldier who had lost both legs in the war, and the other was a tramp who was waiting for the night freight.

"When a customer comes in and says he wants something to eat in a hurry I ask him how much time he has or what train he wants to catch. Now I have a list of those articles that I can serve and which can be eaten in exactly the time the passenger has to spare. To the customer having one minute for luncheon I serve baked apples and milk; if he has two minutes, lemon pie and cold coffee; three minutes, apple pie and hot coffee; four minutes, slapjacks and coffee; five minutes, ready cooked sausages and mashed potatoes; six minutes, fish balls and hash; seven minutes, cold roats beef, and so on. I tell you we work on springs all the time." And the waiter rushed off to serve another customer who appeared to be in a hurry.

A BULLET AT A COFFIN.

Sensational Conduct of a Man at His Wife's Funeral.

Baltimore Evening News.

Fifteen months ago, after a most unhappy marital experience, F. August Nelker and his wife Caroline D. Nelker, separated. Nelker drank heavily and his sons heard that he had often threatened them, but paid no attention to the reports.

Last Friday week Mrs. Nelker, was paralyzed, and died the following Wednesday. Before death she requested that her husband be not allowed to see her remains and also that her body be not buried in the Western Cemetery where Nelker has a lot, as she had heard that he had threatened to pull her from the grave by her hair. Nelker was, consequently, not notified of her death.

He heard of it, however, and sent a floral mound with "God Will Forgive Her" in immortelles upon it. This rather dubious tribute was placed not on the coffin but in the cellar.

While the funeral services were being held Saturday a policeman was stationed at the door for fear Nelker would call. Soon after the corpse had been taken from the house he drove up in a hack. He was dressed in a new black suit, light gloves, patent leather shoes and a high silk hat. When he found the body had gone he ordered the driver to overtake the procession and follow it to the Loudon Park Cemetery.

As the body was being carried to the vault, where it was to be deposited, he placed himself in front of the coffin, but stepped to one side as it neared him. Then he drew a revolver and, aiming at the casket, fired. He then, it is alleged, pointed the pistol at his son-in-law, Christian Nichel, but did not fire. His sons had not left their hack at the time and were prevented from doing so by bystanders.

Nelker finally shoved the revolver in his pocket, but Louis Schusler, a pall-bearer, managed to get it away from him. He was then pushed into his hack and driven away. The services were continued without interruption.

Nelker returned to Mrs. Gausman's house in his ordinary clothes. Mrs. Gausman said this morning that just before and after his wife's funeral he had drank very heavily. No criminal charge was laid against him, and he has consequently not been arrested.

A telegram was received at Centreville from Washington announcing the sudden death of Mr. John T. Deford, a former well-known resident of Queen Anne's county but for the past thirty years connected with the Treasury Department. Mr. Deford married a Miss Harper, a member of a prominent Queen Anne's family. He leaves one son.

Snow to the depth of about four inches fell Wednesday. Quite a number of sleighs had been put away for the winter and this together with the oyster shells on our streets prevented many from taking a spin on the snow; there were some few sleighs out, however.

What Does this Mean?

The Alliance Journal, a leading agricultural paper and published especially in the interest of the Farmer's Alliance, was an outspoken opponent of Senator Gorman all last year. In its last issue we find the following leading editorial, which is significant of the universal drift in this State:

In publishing the portrait of the HON. ARTHUR P. GORMAN, the Farmer's Alliance Journal presents to the public the solved problem of Democracy. ARTHUR P. GORMAN, a great man, a statesman, has earned and holds a proud position in the public thought. Washington at the head of a feeble army facing the most powerful nation on earth was doubtless a sublime sight to patriots, but Gorman in his gallant fight against the Force bill has put a wreath of glory on his fame. From that time he has stood in the front rank. He never wavered. He could not have won it over the able adversaries with whom he contended if he had not known his business thorougbly. In a government of the people a leader should be a man of stainless integrity—a statesman, capable of seeing the fundamental principles of human society—a man of remarkable poise, keen and acute. There is needed something of all these and more—it needs a character strong at all points, liberal as Jefferson, but conservative also; a man whose counsels are also considerate, but always positive. The finger of fate points to ARTHUR P. GORMAN, and the citizens of this free country will make no mistake in honoring him with the nomination for the Presidency, and we predict for him a nomination that will be a spontaneous tribute from the people. He does not seek the Presidency; the Presidency seeks him. It can be truly said of him that the fame came to him, not because he planned for it, but because he went straight ahead serving his country, and it is the only way, after all, in which fame really worth having is to be secured.

COURTIN' DAYS.

In Such Times the Lovers are Ubiquitous Says a Sufferer.

Jerome K. Jerome in Three Men in a Boat.

Have you ever been in a house where there are a couple courting? It is most trying. You think you will go and sit in the drawing room, and you march off there. As you open the door you hear a noise as if somebody had suddenly recollected something, and when you get in, Emily is over by the window, full of interest in the opposite side of the road, and your friend, John Edward, is at the other end of the room with his whole soul held in thrawl by photographs of other people's relatives.

"Oh!" you say, pausing at the door, "I didn't know anybody was here."

"Oh! didn't you?" says Emily, coldly, in a tone which implies that she does not believe you.

You hang about for a bit, then you say; "It's very dark. Why don't you light the gas?"

John Edward says he hadn't noticed it, and Emily says that papa does not like the gas lighted in the afternoon.

You tell them one or two items of news and give them your views and opinions on the Irish question, but this does not appear to interest them. All they remark is: "O!" "Is it?" "Did he?" "Yes," and "You don't say so!" and after ten minutes of such style of conversation you edge up to the door and slip out, and are surprised to find that the door immediately closes behind you and shuts itself without your having touched it.

Half an hour later you think you will try a pipe in the conservatory. The only chair in the place is occupied by Emily; and John Edward, if the language of clothes can be relied upon has evidently been sitting upon the floor. They do not speak but they give you a look that says all that can be said in a civilized community, and you back out promptly and shut the door behind you.

You are afraid to poke your nose into any room in the house now, so after walking up and down the stairs for a while, you go and sit in your bed-room. This becomes uninteresting, however, after a time, and so you put on your hat and stroll out into the garden. You walk down the path, and as you pass the summer house you glance in, and there are those two young idiots, huddled up in one corner of it, and they see you and are evidently under the idea that, for some wicked purpose of your own, you are following them about.

"Why don't they have a special room for this sort of thing, and make people keep to it?" you mutter, and you rush back to the hall and get your umbrella and go out.

How to Cure Nervous Headache.

You know that means a nervous head ache and a night of agony unless something is done quickly.

Try this: Slip off your bodice and bare your neck. Twist your hair into a loose knot on the top of your head. Then take a sponge and a basin of hot water—just as hot as you can bear it.

Pass the hot wet sponge slowely and steadily over the face and forward for eight or ten minutes, keeping the sponge as hot as it can be borne. By that time your face will look and feel as if it were parboiled. But don't worry.

Then bathe the back of the neck as you have done the face, carrying the sponge each time well up the back of the head.

Keep this up for the same length of time then, without looking at yourself in the glass, because that would be sure to disquiet you, dry your face and neck softly and go and lie down flat on your back.

Close your eyes and think of this one thing, How heavy you are on the couch and how easily it supports you. That is really an important part of the cure.

Lie there for half an hour, if you don't fall asleep, as you probably will. Then get up and take the deferred look in the glass.

The tired look has gone; the muscles have regained their tone; the wrinkles have disappeared. You look like your younger sister. Best of all, the darting pain in the head and the pessimism of the soul have gone too.—Boston Herald.

A Valuable Opinion.

The late A. T. Stewart was harassed by a certain treasury decision which vastly increased his payments of duties. His lawyer, says the New York Press, called one day about another matter. Stewart spoke in an exasperated way about the treasury decision.

"Let me see the decision," said the lawyer. After reading it through he said:

"This law speaks of 'all-silk' garments. Why don't you have a thread of worsted run into these goods when they are made abroad?"

"Will that come within the new law?" asked the great merchant.

"Certainly."

"How much do you want for that opinion?" asked Stewart a few months later.

"Fifty thousand dollars," said the lawyer. And he got it. He was modest, too, but a dollar went further in those days than it does now.

Stewart years after told his legal adviser that the casual suggestion made that day had been worth over one million five hundred thousand dollars to the merchant.

So the fifty thousand-dollar fee was not high.

IN an interview at Wilmington, Del., Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State during President Cleveland's administration, gave vigorous expression to his views as to the grave danger to the country of the proposed silver legislation.

REV. WM. P. EVANS, a prominent minister of the Lutheran Church in Baltimore, stationed at St. Paul's, has withdrawn from that denomination and united with the Protestant Episcopal Church.
