THE LOVER—A NEW SONG.

SOME few years ago,
My poor Brother Joe
Got in love with a damsel as fat as a plover,
And ever since then,
Most certainly I've been,
That Nature ne'er could,
In most frolicksome mood,
Make a more comical thing than a lover.

Chorus.—What a whimsical dog is a lover—
Flames and darts,
Broken hearts,
Sudden starts;
Fearful eyes,
Sobs and sighs,
Grunts—groans,
Skin and bones;
Oh! what a queer dog is a lover!
To think of his vapors,
And comical capers,
By my soul, I have laugh'd full a hundred times over;
The devil a bit
Could we get him to eat,
He'd whimper and whine,
He'd mope and he'd pine,
And look full as sad,
As a dog running mad,
O! what a sad fellow's a lover!

Chorus.—What an ill dog is a lover!
His eyes dull and red,
And sunk in his head,
His face thin and pale,
His pace like a snail;
O! blood, fire and thunder,
What is there, I wonder,
In the world that looks worse than a lover?
O! ne'er was poor wight
In sush terrible plight,
Doctor Squab swore by Galen, he'd never recover;
He'd rip and he'd tear,
And he'd foam like a bear,
And he'd swear that in nature,
There was not a creature,
So charming as Tabitha Rover.

Chorus.—O! what a blind dog is a lover!
Girl plump and fat,
Or poor as a rat—
Hale looking,
Pale looking,
Clear ey'd,
Blear ey'd,
"Long spliced,"
Strong spliced,
This—that;
No matter what;
Ah! such a blind dog is a lover.
Full well I remember,
One night in December,
I wish'd that the devil had Tabitha Rover—
For while I was sleeping,
And Joe vigils keeping,
He kick'd off the clothes,
And the frost bit my toes;
Ne'er again will I sleep with a lover.

Chorus—O! zounds! who would sleep with a lover!
With his mutt'ring and mumbling,
His tossing and tumbling,
His bouncing and burning,
His flouncing and turning,
By the squirt of old Chiron!
What perils environ
The poor devil that sleeps with a lover.
But it's all over now,
For two years ago,
Brother Joe popp'd the question to Tabitha Rover,
Sweet Tabby said he,
Will you marry me?
Her bosom turned red,
She hung down her head,
And sunk in the arms of her lover.

Chorus.—Sobbing—sighing,
Groaning—dying,
Moping—pining,
Whimp'ring—whining,
Sheep's eyes—glances killing,
Pops the question—very willing,
Pretty Miss is—hugs, kisses,
Raptures—blisses!
Then the wedding,
Then the bedding,
Honey-moon,
Over soon,
And then good-bye to the lover.

BOOT & SHOE-MAKING.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

THE subscriber has removed his shop to the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Holms, nearly opposite the Bank, Washington-street. He returns his sincere thanks to his customers for their many favors since he began business; and if any work done by him should not prove good, they will please to inform him, and they shall have better work and on better terms until the same is made good.

At the above place he will still carry on his BUSINESS in its various branches—any one having a family to shoe, and will favor him with the whole, they shall have them on reasonable terms; and rips sewed gratis. This is from one that wishes to give general satisfaction so far as may lay in his power.

GEORGE SEWELL.

N. B. Hides will be taken in payment for shoes, at the market price.

ABRAHAM NICE.

December 2, 1806. 13tMy

THE Editor of the paper, of which the following is a prospectus, offers it to the consideration of an enlightened public. He has an ardent desire to promote the best interests of the community, and solicits the aid of the gentlemen of talents, who are certainly numerous, to give their assistance to a paper which has such valuable purposes in view. SAMUEL THOMAS, Esq. the present Sheriff, has obligingly consented to become the agent of the OBSERVER; by him, therefore, all communications and subscriptions, on this shore, will be received.

THE OBSERVER.

The friend of Socrates, the friend of Plato,
But above all, the friend of truth.

Vol. I. Baltimore, Saturday November 8, 1806. No. I.

PROSPECTUS.

SIX months' experience has convinced the Editor of the Companion, that notwithstanding the zeal and assiduity devoted to conducting this work, the circumscribed nature of its original plan, has rendered it impossible to communicate to it, that degree of interest of which such a paper is certainly susceptible.

Variety is the essence of amusement: hence we abandon the smooth and unbroken plain, however productive of the most useful harvests, to ramble amidst scenes, where nature exhibits her more varied, picturesque, and fantastic forms.

We find then, that for a periodical work to command the attention of the public, it does not suffice that it should be alone "A Safe Companion and an Easy Friend," but it must evince a spirited versatility, must move in quick transition from "grave to gay, from lively to severe," if it would not remain unregarded and unknown.

But to communicate these qualities to a paper, requires more time and attention than were compatible with the other avocations of the late Editor: to obviate this inconvenience, he took an associate in his labours, and to this associate, he has ultimately deemed it proper to relinquish the management of the work.

The last volume of the Companion being completed, by the advice of several judicious and enlightened friends, the present Editor has resolved to give the work a more extensive range, and by many important alterations to merit for it, the encouragement of all those who are friendly to the cause of the arts, of literature and science.

To advance the interests of morality and religion, to ameliorate manners, and to polish taste, are the objects to which we shall devote every exertion, and to this end we have the assurance of ample assistance from many able and brilliant pens.

We are resolved no longer to confine our fellow-labourers within the narrow limits prescribed by the regulations of the Companion. We shall require no reserve on the part of our correspondents, but propose to give full scope to the talents and opinions of all those who may favor us with their assistance, in forwarding our views

But while we cease to be governed by those restraints, which have hitherto excluded us from the aids of genius on the most interesting subjects, such as the great political events, which no paper presented to the public ought to pass over in silence: Yet it must be remembered, that the virulence of party spirit must never contaminate our pages.

General satire is one of the most successful weapons, for combating the vices and follies of the age; but indecent personalities, and malignant contention, must ever be productive of evil. We aim at enlightening the minds and improving the taste of our fellow-citizens, and being useful to society, as well as to individuals. But we know that the language of passion can never promote those great and honorable ends; for if from fair and liberal discussion proceed the bright rays of truth, which irradiate and convince the mind, angry disputation by strengthening the influence of prejudice, and impeding the operation of reason, can only heighten the gloom and perpetuate the reign of ignorance.

The Companion then will henceforth be presented under the title of the OBSERVER; but as prudence exacts, that we should at least be assured all the expences attending the work will be defrayed, we cannot venture publication, until we have five hundred subscribers. If these are obtained, the paper will commence on the first of January next.

To make it more interesting to country gentlemen, every agricultural improvement at home and abroad, will be regularly noticed.

CONDITIONS.

THE OBSERVER shall be published every Saturday, on good Type and Paper—each number to contain Sixteen large Octavo Pages.
