A NEVERFAILING PREVENTIVE.

Hog Cholera Never Known to Attack Hogs on this Farm.

Dr. G. Irving Barwick, formerly of Kennedyville, but now enjoying a lucrative practice in Baltimore county, was a welcome caller at our office on Tuesday morning and in the pleasant visit our conversation drifted to farming and kindred subjects. The great prevalence of hog cholera in the county was noted, and our statement led Dr. Barwick to give the following valuable information: When my father was farming near Kennedyville, he never had a case of cholera on his place. His neighbors all about him were heavy loosers from the disease, but his hogs were always healthy. I believe the secret of the good health of father's hogs was that he gave them all the JERUSALEM OAK he could find for them to eat, and I have even seen the hogs leave their swill and grain feed to eat the Jerusalem Oak. I presume the oak contained certain medicinal properties which the animal's instinct detected, just as dogs and cats seek certain kinds of grass and catnip which their instinct teaches them contains medicinal properties which serves as a remedy for their ills. Our hogs were kept up in the barn yard from August to killing season. Their quarters were kept clean, all filth was removed, and they were given feed of chops containing a package of Barkers' Horse and Cattle Powders which father bought by the case. When it came time to fatten our hogs for killing, their range was enlarged, and we gave grain, etc. But the more I think of those days, the more I attribute the splendid condition of our hogs to the effects of this Jerusalem Oak and keeping the quarters clean. Our farmers should try this oak, and these powders. Senator Foxwell followed Dr. Barwich and said he was a great believer in Polk Root. He always kept a supply in his swill tub, and his place was practically free of the cholera. Mr. John M. Comegys, another experienced farmer, said he had never given his hogs any preventive except coal oil in certain quantities, and he had never had cholera on his farm but once. These things are important for our farmers to know. Try one or the other. It may save your hogs from the disease.

BIG FIRE AT M. A. C.

New Administration and Other Buildings Destroyed, with a Loss of $270,000.

A disastrous fire Friday night swept through the Maryland Agricultural College, at College Park.

The new administration building, which was erected in 1904 at a cost of $75,000, was completely destroyed. The old original barracks, which were erected in 1858, were also burned.

The fire was discovered about 10.30 o'clock in the administration building. When the flames were seen the roof was in a blaze, and the fire spread with remarkable rapidity.

When the firemen from Washington arrived the two buildings were too far gone to be saved, but the firemen from Hyattsville, aided by employes and students at the college, had the flames well under control, and it appeared that the other buildings of the institution would be saved.

The fire broke out in the attic while guests attending a dance were at supper. The cause of the blaze is unknow, but is presumed to have been due to crossing of wires.

Owing to the holiday season many of the cadets were away and their property was destroyed.

The total loss is estimated by officials of the college at $270,000, covered by insurance.

The campus in front of the destroyed building was filled with furniture, etc., removed from the burning building.

A large crowd from the surrounding country watched the flames.

The new administration building housed about 185 students and the old building contained about an equal number of cadets.

Possibly all of the records of the college were gotten out of the building. The building contained the president's effice, the treasurer's office and the board of trustees' office, besides the assembly hall.

Temporary quarters for the students have been provided in Science Hall and other buildings. Many of them have found quarters with the faculty and with residents of nearby towns.
