NATIVE POETRY.

FROM THE BOSTON CENTINEL.

THE NEW TO-MORROW.

IN the morning of life, my career when commencing,
May old Care be far banish'd away;
May dame Fortune be kind, her rewards in dispensing,
While I homage to Industry pay.
May Content spread her influence over my breast,
And chace from my heart med'ling Sorrow;
As, when with that blessing, a conscience at rest
I hail each returning to morrow.
May I meet with a friend, who is worthy the title,
Who will share in my joys and my woes;
One, who looks with disdain on deeds sordid and little,
And whose heart with benevolence glows.
In intercourse sweet the dull hours we will cheat—
Years of bliss from futurity borrow;
And with pity surveying the proud and the great,
Place our hopes on th' eternal to morrow.
Should my sweet smiling Bess on my love look approving,
And consent to combine in the wife
The kind friend and adviser, beloved and be loving,
How blissful will roll on my life!
And old father Time, as he glides swift a way
Imprinting the wrinkle and furrow,
Perhaps may combine in the husband to day
The cares of the parent to morrow.
But though pleasures I taste, I will not be forgetful.
That ere long they must fade from my view;
Of the 'one thing,' so 'needful' I'll ne'er be neglectful,
But religion with fervor pursue.
Then, when death sets me free, to those realms I will soar,
Where the soul shall no more meet with sorrow;
Where an endless to-day shall preclude, ever more,
The return of another to-morrow

DOCUMENTS

Accompanying the President's Message of the 19th ult.—Continued.

Mr. Russell to the Secretary of State.

PARIS, DEC. 4, 1810.

SIR—This serves merely to cover a copy of my letter to Mr. Pinkney, of the first of this month; since that time nothing has come to my knowledge to affect the statement which it contains. It is my duty, however, to say that I have not learnt the occurrence of any case to which the Berlin and Milan decrees could be applied.

I have the honor to be, with great consideration, sir, your very humble servant,

(Signed) JON. RUSSELL.

The honorable Robert Smith,
Secretary of State.

Mr. Russell to Mr. Pinkney.

PARIS, DEC. 1, 1810.

SIR—As nothing has transpired here of sufficient importance to be communicated by a special messenger, and as no safe private conveyance has hitherto presented itself: I have delayed, till now, to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 7th and 28th of October.

No event within my knowledge has occurred, either before or since the 1st of November, to vary the construction given by us to the very positive and concise assurances of the Duke of Cadore on the 5th August, relative to the revocation of the Berlin and Milan decrees. That these decrees have not been executed for an entire month on any vessel arriving during that time, in any of the ports of France, may, when connected with the terms in which their revocation was announced, fortify the presumption that they have ceased to operate. I know, indeed, of no better evidence than this which the negative character of the case admits, or how the non-existence of an edict can be proved, except by the promulgation of its repeal and its subsequent non-existence.

Our attention here is now turned towards England and the United States. The performance of one of the conditions on which the revocation of the decrees was predicated, and which is essential to render it permanent, is anxiously expected; and it is devoutly to be wished that England, by evincing the sincerity of her former professions, may save the U. States from the necessity of resorting to the measures which exclusively depend on them.

I need not suggest to you the importance of transmitting hither, as early as possible, any information of a decided character, which you may possess relative to this subject, as an impatience is already betrayed here to learn that one or the other of the conditions has been performed.

I am, sir, with great respect, &c.

(Signed) JON. RUSSELL.

His Excellency William Pinkney, Esq.

The Vice Consul at Bordeaux to the Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES CONSULATE.

Bordeaux, December 31, 1810.

SIR—I had the honor of addressing you on the 14th inst. by this opportunity (the schooner Maria Louisa, captain Shiddy) and I have now to enclose a newspaper of yesterday, containing two letters from the French minister of justice to the President of the tribunal of prizes, and from the minister of finance to the collector general of all the customs in France, concerning American navigation.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) CH. MEYER.

Vice Consul of the United States.

Honorable Robert Smith,
Secretary of State.

[Here follow the letters of the Dukes of Massa and Gaete, translations of which have been given in the National Intelligencer.]

Extract of a letter from Mr. Pinkney to Mr. Russell, dated

OCTOBER 7, 1810.

It may not be amiss to mention that as it will be obviously prudent, even if it will not be absolutely necessary, to furnish me with all such further evidence as can conveniently be gained, confirmatory of our expectation that the French repeal of the Berlin and Milan decrees will take effect on the first of November; I beg you to transmit me such evidence if and as soon as it shall be gained. It may be yet important to send me, with as little delay as possible, after the first of November, the most decisive proof in your power that the repeal has taken effect, at least an official letter from you to me stating that fact.

Mr. Pinkney to Marquis Wellesley.

GREAT CUMBERLAND PLACE.

December 8, 1810.

MY LORD,—I have the honor to represent to you that an American vessel, (the Fox) proceeding with an American cargo from a port of the U. States to Cherbourg, in France, in the confidence that the repeal of the decrees of Berlin and Milan had, in conformity with repeated pledges and the obvious demands of justice, been followed by the revocation of the British orders in council, has been captured since the first of last month by an English frigate, for an alledged breach of those orders, and brought into Plymouth, and since proceeded against in the high court of Admiralty as prize of war.

It is my duty to require that this vessel and her cargo may be restored, as speedily as possible, to their rightful owner; that she may be left at full liberty to resume the lawful voyage in which she was engaged, and that effectual measures may be adopted, with as little delay as circumstances will permit, for the prevention of similar interruptions in future.

I understand that the captors in this case are likely to be urgent for condemnation; and that the orders in council will, if unrepealed, be considered by the court as imposing upon it a necessity to pronounce such a sentence. I am further informed that the case may be heard, if the captors press it, on or very soon after Tuesday next. I trust, however, that the necessary steps will be taken by the British government for preventing the signal injustice and the many embarrassments that could not fail to result from such an adjudication.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) WM. PINKNEY.

Mr. Pinkney to the Secretary of State.

London, Dec. 23, 1810.

SIR—I received, on the 20th instant, from Liverpool, your letter of the 19th of October, the only one yet received of a date subsequent to the 17th of July.

My letter of the 14th of November will show that I had myself resolved upon the course of proceeding which the last paragraph of your letter indicates. I now wait only for the restoration of the capacity of the government.

I presume that my note to Lord Wellesley of the 21st Sept. will be considered as having anticipated such parts of your letter as relate to blockades. No answer of any sort has been given to that note, but I will not fail to take the first occasion to reinforce it, by enlarging on the considerations to which you allude. In my opinion the subject cannot be too much pressed, nor the importance of it exaggerated. If such blockades are to continue, we shall have got rid of the orders of 1807 and 1809, in vain.

You will perceive, that, in my note abovementioned, I undertook to mention the blockade of the whole Island of Zealand, as one of those paper blockades to which the United States objected; that in my note of the 12th of August, that blockade was comprehended under the general description of such orders as were "analogous to" the orders in council of 1807 and 1809; and that, in my late note (of the 10th inst.) I have urged the revocation of the blockades to which my note of the 21st Sept. related.

I had no instructions to warrant me in representing any other blockade than that of May, 1806, as dispensable in the view of our laws concerning commercial intercourse with G. Britain and France. I have endeavored, however, so to shape may different notes to Lord Wellesley, as that, when taken together, they may be considered to embrace the whole of the paper blockades for every purpose, or only for particular purposes, as future instructions or convenience might require.

Upon the subject of of impressments, I need not say any thing, as the affair of the Chesapeake has not been adjusted. For other matters, I refer you to the newspapers.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) WM. PINKNEY.
