EASTON ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES.

ENCOURAGED by Gentlemen of the first respectability, R. Owen, late of St. John's College, (where he has taught for a number of years) has opened an academy in this place for the reception of Young Ladies, in conjunction with his Daughters; and respectfully solicits the attention and patronage of the friends of science—They flatter themselves by their united exertions to afford general satisfaction.

In this Seminary at present will be taught Reading, Writing and Arithmetic, in all its branches—Grammar, Composition, Geography, and various kinds of Needle Work, at the rate of five dollars per quarter—for Shell Work, Drawing and Music, extra charges.

The utmost care and application will be used in the progress of the pupils, and a parental regard to their morals, manners and habits, constantly exercised.

The long standing and experience of Mr. Owen as a teacher, aided by the acquirements of his daughters, under the favour of a liberal public, will, it is hoped, enable them to make their Academy productive of credit to themselves, and of usefulness to the community.

A few scholars will be received in our present residence, expecting soon to remove to the house formerly the Bank. Boarders will be admitted the first of January.

NOTE.—Having been accustomed to furnish the Students of St. John's College and others with Books and Stationary, he has on hand a valuable assortment of Books in various languages and branches of literature or science R. D. OWEN.

PROPOSALS
BY EDWARD EARLE,
FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION,
THE WORKS OF
CORNELIUS TACITUS,
With an Essay on his Life and Genius, Notes, Supplements, &c.
BY ARTHUR MURPHEY, ESQ.
The first American from the last London edition—with the author's last corrections.

AS a brief recommendation of the above works to those to whom they may not be already known, the following notice of them is copied from the London Review of the time when they were first published.

"Though," says this Review, "it be with the translation of Tacitus that we have now to do, not with the character of that original and great historian himself, it would be difficult, perhaps unnatural and indecorous, to pass by the present opportunity of recognising the merit of that sublime genius, and joining in the general voice of applause and admiration. Cornelius Tacitus, by a rare felicity of circumstances, united in himself all those relations, qualities and accomplishments, that are requisite to form a great historian: He was of senatorial rank, and in that order highly distinguished. He enjoyed the favor of the princes and sovereigns of the civilized world, and held civil offices of the highest dignity and importance. He possessed a native probity and elevation of mind; and these noble qualities were heightened and confirmed by an habitual conversancy with the history of the Roman republic, and an education in the principles of the sublimest philosophy. The profoundness of his reflections, the precision of his diction, his elegant and energetic brevity, and something remarkable picturesque and dramatic in his manner, conspire with the dignity and importance of his subjects, to clothe his works with a never failing bloom, and render his fame immortal. He records the actions, the counsels, the secret motives of the great actors in the greatest political drama that was ever exhibited on the world; and the History of Tacitus, as is well observed by his accomplished translator and critic, is "Philosophy teaching by example."

The contents of these volumes seem naturally to admit of the following division:—

1. A dedication to the right honorable Edmund Burke; an essay on the life & genius of Tacitus; the annals of Tacitus, with supplements and an appendix; a genealogical table, with an index, of the Cæsars; notes on the annals and appendix, and maps of the ancient world as known to the Romans, and of Asia. 2. The history of Tacitus, with an appendix and notes to the history and appendix; and maps of the city of Jernsalem and of Italy. 3 The celebrated and valuable Treatise on the manners of the Germans, with notes and a map of ancient Germany; and the life of Agricola with notes, & a geographical table of the places, rivers, &c. mentioned in these volumes. To these authentic works of Tacitus is added, "the dialogue concerning Oratory, of which, as Mr Murphy in a note has justly remarked, "The commentators are much divided in their opinions about the real author. This work, they all agree, is a masterpiece in the kind; written with taste and judgment entertaining, profound and elegant But whether it is to be ascribed to Tacitus, Quinctilian, or any other person, whom they cannot name, is a question upon which they have exhausted a store of learning." Mr. Murphy, after giving an account of the principal arguments pro and con, says in conclusion, although he seems to lean to the opinion that it is the production of Tacitus: "The dispute is of no importance; for, as Lipsius says, whether we give the dialogue to Quinctilian or to Tacitus, no inconvenience can arise. Whoever was the author, it is a performance of uncommon beauty."

"Mr. Murphy has given the sense of his author in a pleasing and proper style, and even catched not a little of his manner: in order to do which, in so long a work, it was necessary to be master of the whole compass of the English language. His notes and supplements show that he is intimately conversant with Roman antiquity, and with literature in general. He views the objects that pass before him with the eye of a critic, a moralist, and a politician; and in particular, he makes interesting comparisons between the situations and characters of different ancient and modern tribes and nations."

CONDITIONS.

1. The Works of Tacitus shall be put to press as soon as a sufficient number of subscriptions shall be obtained to justify it.

2. They shall be printed with a new pica type, on a fine paper made for the purpose, with proper attention to uniformity of colour and quality throughout.

3. The volumes shall be delivered in the order in which they are published, and shall succeed each other as speedily as a due attention to the execution will permit—each volume to be paid for on delivery, at $2 50 per vol. in boards.

☞ The London edition of Tacitus is in 8 vols. 8vo; the American edition will be in 6 vols. 8vo. and will sell at half the price of the former.

 Subscriptions will be received by the publisher, and by the principal booksellers in the United States—Such as may become answerable for the amount of six copies, shall be entitled to a seventh.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
EDWARD LLOYD, ESQUIRE,
GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND,
A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS it is directed by the forty-ninth section of the Act entitled "An act concerning crimes and punishments," passed at November session eighteen hundred and nine, that as soon as the Penetentiary House in Baltimore county is ready for the reception of criminals, that the Governor of this State shall notify the same by proclamation. And whereas, the inspectors of said institution have reported to me that the said building is completed, and the requisites of the said law have been in all other respects complied with: I have therefore thought proper to issue this my proclamation, hereby declaring the said Penetentiary House to be ready for the reception of criminals who may be condemned to work and labour therein as the said law requires.

Given under my hand and the seal of the State of Maryland, this 30th day of September, in the year of
(L. S.) our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eleven, and of the independence of the United States of America the thirty fifth.

EDW. LLOYD.

300 DOLLARS REWARD.

ABSCONDED on Sunday, 24th ult. from the subscriber, living near Centreville, Queen Ann's county, Maryland, negro Charles (or Charles Elias,) thirty-six years old, about five feet seven or eight inches high, rather of a thin flat make, brisk and lively in his motions, steps long with a slight bend of his knees forward in walking; can be an excellent hand on a farm and do rough carpenter's work—He is not very black—face a little hollow and flat, spare or thin—has a peculiar cast with his eyes, inclining a little to squint—common head of the negro; is very plausible in his manners; very artful in avoiding detection; has great use of his tongue and speaks deliberately—has lost some of his fore teeth, (I think rather on the right side of his under jaw) this defect is seldom noticed. He took with him a variety of clothes—his working suit new white kersey jacket and trowsers and striped blue and white cotton under jacket, a checked cotton handkerchief round his neck—strong new coarse shoes, and white yarn stockings not new. Sunday suit, deep blue cloth jacket, pale blue trowsers, red under jacket, and black fur hat little worn, a great coat of reddish brown cloth with very large cape, a little worn. He is fond of dress and can look well in it—He left a free wife and three or four small children, youngest only a boy—It is thought two negro fellows went in company with Charles. I will give three hundred dollars reward for apprehending and securing said Charles, in either the jail of this, or Talbot county.

STEPHEN LOWREY.
