MONARCHY.

CURS'D be the day, how bright soe'er it shone,
That first on Freedom's ruins rear'd a throne;
And curst the wretch, who first, with regal pride,
To equal man their equal rights denied;
But curs'd o'er all who first, to slavery broke,
Submissive bow'd and own'd a monarch's yoke—
Their servile souls his arrogance ador'd,
And basely own'd a brother for a lord—
Hence wrath and blood, and feuds and wars began,
And man turn'd monster to his fellow man.

MARRIED—In Norwalk, (Con.) Mr. Philetus Brush, to Mrs. Fisher Wood.

The fire of love can ne'er decline
When Brush and Wood do both combine
To keep the flame a going;
The Brush has kindled, and the Wood
Has caught the heat and as its good,
'Twill want but little blowing.

300 DOLLARS REWARD.

ABSCONDED on Sunday, 24th ult. from the subscriber, living near Centreville, Queen Ann's county, Maryland, negro Charles (or Charles Bias,) thirty-six years old, about five feet seven or eight inches high, rather of a thin flat make, brisk and lively in his motions, steps long with a slight bend of his knees forward in walking; can be an excellent hand on a farm and do rough carpenter's work—He is not very black—face a little hollow and flat, spare or thin—has a peculiar cast with his eyes, inclining a little to squint—common head of the negro; is very plausible in his manners; very artful in avoiding detection; has great use of his tongue and speaks deliberately—has lost some of his fore teeth, (I think rather on the right side of his under jaw) this defect is seldom noticed. He took with him a variety of clothes—his working suit new white kersey jacket and trowsers and striped blue and white cotton under jacket, a checked cotton handkerchief round his neck—strong new coarse shoes, and white yarn stockings not new. Sunday suit, deep blue cloth jacket, pale blue trowsers, red under jacket, and black fur hat little worn, a great coat of reddish brown cloth with very large cape, a little worn. He is fond of dress and can look well in it—He left a free wife and three or four small children, youngest only a boy—It is thought two negro fellows went in company with Charles. I will give three hundred dollars reward for apprehending and securing said Charles, in either the jails of this, or Talbot county.
