RUMORS WHITE SOX PLAYERS GAMBLED ON CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES CROP OUT AGAIN

John Collins of the Chicago Americans takes no stock in the rumors being revived to the effect that certain members of the Chicago White Sox bet on the world series last fall. Collins does not believe Ray Schalk ever made the statement accredited to him. He says a close friend of Schalk's lost heavily on the series, but the famous catcher is not the type of athlete who would be making serious accusations against his teammates.

Jack Collins.

After the White Sox had dropped a couple of games in the world's series, Manager Gleason, at a conference of the players, spoke to them about the reports which had gone all over the country to the effect that some members of the Chicago team were betting on Cincinnati to win and were not doing their best in the series. The Chicago manager told the players he did not think there was any foundation to the rumors and regretted that any such impression should be created.

"Johnny Evers was a big factor in the defeat of the White Sox," declared Collins. "For weeks he followed our team around and sized up the style of play, also the weaknesses of the various members of the club. Evers instructed the Reds in the art of riding a team the way the Braves did when they went through the Athletics in 1914. Substitutes on the Cincinnati team, as soon as the series opened, managed to hurl remarks at star players which greatly disturbed them."

KILBANE DEAN OF FIGHTERS

Oldest Champion in Ring in Point of Titular Service—Has Held This Eight Years.

When Johnny Kilbane squared off against Benny Valger in their bout at the Newark Sportmen's club boxing fans saw the oldest champion in the ring today—oldest in point of titular service.

It was just eight years ago that the clever Clevelander won the featherweight title, outpointing Abe Attell in a 20-round fight at Vernon, Cal. Kilbane has dominated his division longer than the majority of Queensberry champions are permitted to rule. He has held the title longer than any other feather-weight champion.

GATES CLOSED TO GAMBLERS

Pacific Coast League Owners Suggest Rogues' Gallery as Means of Stopping Betting.

Club owners of the Pacific coast league have suggested a rogues' gallery of baseball gamblers as a means of suppressing professional betting at the ball parks. They would have clubs all over the country close the gates to men known to be professional gamblers.

In baseball in all positions left-handers have held their own with the best of them.

Ruth and Cobb, the two greatest batsmen in the American league, bat left-handed.

Left-handed pitchers like Kerr of the White Sox and Sallee of the Cincinnati Reds, carried off leading honors in the baseball blue ribbon of last year.

In the olden days Waddell, Plank, Marquard and other left-handed pitchers led all others in baseball and held their own near the top for years.

Tyler of the Cubs and Williams and Kerr of the White Sox are only a few of the left-handers who are expected to do great things in the major leagues this year.

While Cobb and Ruth, both left handers, were leading batsmen in the American league last year, in 1918 Wheat of Brooklyn, Roush and Southworth of Cincinnati, all left handers, were the three top men in the National league list. That proves how effective left-handed batsmen are and shows the advantage they have over right-handed players when it comes to reaching first base on a hit.

WALTER JOHNSON IS CREDIT TO BASEBALL

Content With His Present Berth With Washington.

Stove League Fans Make Many Trades and Among Others Shift Sensational Pitcher to Comiskey's White Sox.

When the stove league fans got into full swing last winter, all kinds of trades and sales were made of all the leading players in both major leagues, and, as usual, Walter Johnson, sensational pitcher of the Washington Americans, was tagged for shipment to several of the teams in the Ban Johnson circuit.

One report had it that Sir Walter in 1920 was to do the hurling act for the Chicago White Sox. The significant thing about this proposed deal, however, was that neither Manager Clark Griffith or Johnson himself had been consulted in the matter.

Walter Johnson's contentment as a member of the trailing Capital City club seems to bother those daring fans who delight to shift the players of the majors about to suit their own ideas. Johnson is perfectly satisfied with his berth at Washington and as far as is known, Clark Griffith is quite content to shoulder Johnson's big contract for at least another season.

Although the fans may not generally know it, Johnson had a chance to go to Cleveland a year ago, and he turned the offer down because he did not want to leave Griffith. At that time, Magnate Dunn of the Cleveland team was in the quest of pitching material to bolster an otherwise classy club. He made Griffith an offer for Johnson—said to be $60,000—and Griffith took the matter up with his pitching ace. Griffith did not want to lose Johnson, but he felt that Walter had been such a faithful worker he did not care to stand in his way of getting a substantial boost in pay, if the pitcher really cared to make the change.

When Johnson was asked about it, he promptly replied that he was perfectly satisfied with his job and did not really care to make a move. It is said Johnson dislikes to change about. He has come to know Griffith and Washington fans, and as he puts it he is content to continue pitching for that team, regardless of the fancy amounts he could possibly obtain from other club owners.

"I once heard a pugilist say he would not enter the movies for a salary of $10,000 a week and nothing could induce him to go on the stage and make a monkey out of himself, as he was a fighter and not an actor."

"His manager rushed up in great distress and soon proved to the satisfaction of everybody present that the pugilist had been drinking and was not responsible for his wild talk."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Her Preference.

The man next door had a close-clipped moustache while father's face was smooth. And Mary Ellen looked on the neighbor with something akin to awe. Also a longing came into her heart. And one day she voiced it.

Father was getting ready to shave when Mary Ellen happened to come into the room. She put out a protesting little hand. "Oh, daddy, don't shave," she begged. "I would like to have a whisker daddy."
