JULY 9, 1938

The reception accorded Senator Sasscer on his visit to Calvert last Saturday showed that he has many enthusiastic supporters for the nomination for Governor. After a short address from the Court House porch, which was well received he attended the Huntingtown-Owings baseball game, when he also made a short address and received many assurances of support. Aside from his qualifications for the office, he is regarded as the Southern Maryland representative in the campaign, which gives him double claim for support.

Senator Coad, of St. Mary's, has decided not to be a candidate for Comptroller. Announcement was made last Wednesday in response to a request of a number of influential friends that he become a candidate. The Senator states that his business interests would prevent his giving full time and attention to the duties of the office, which is demanded by its importance. Senator Coad is president of the County Trust Company, which requires his constant attention. His decision leaves the field open for this very important office.

Developed From Cape Jasmine

The types we know now as gardenias were really the result of experimentation with the old fashioned, so-called cape jasmine of the southern states—a small white with semi-double flowers. This was popular in the beginning of the Nineteenth century and used first for adornment about 1850.

RARE MUSIC FOUND BY PITT PROFESSOR

Manuscripts 200 Years Old Discovered in Church.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A cache of rare musical manuscripts, hidden for almost two centuries in a church in the village of Lititz in eastern Pennsylvania's Lancaster county, has been discovered by Theodore M. Finney, lecturer in music at the University of Pittsburgh and director of Pitt's famed student band and the men's glee club.

Mr. Finney made his discovery last summer. He said the music had been written between the Revolutionary war and the War of 1812 by composers who were communicants of the Moravian church whose members fled Germany to come to country around Bethlehem—and of course, to be dubbed "Pennsylvania Dutch."

None of the music—save what was written by the Moravian musicians before they migrated to America—has ever been published. It is in the classical tradition of Mozart and Haydn.

Some of the pieces are religious anthems. Others are in symphony and chamber music arrangements.

The Pitt teacher explained:

"It is unusual—in violation of the tradition of its times—because in the Eighteenth century the churches of New England considered any music, except the singing of psalms, sinful.

"No one in New England would have dared suggesting an orchestra might play in a church. But in the little towns of eastern Pennsylvania it was done every Sunday."

A large percentage of the Moravians must have been skilled musicians, for many of the pieces Mr. Finney found would prove severe tests for the ability of even a professional of today.

Moravians liked music, he said, and indicated in their writings they didn't think much of the New England style of unaccompanied singing of hymns in which every member of the congregation carried what was his own idea of the tune. One Moravian critic referred to the Massachusetts church music as the "woeful shrieking and squalling of the congregation."

He said the manuscripts will probably be turned over to the Moravian church's seminary at Bethlehem, and kept there.

Artificial Leg 39 Inches Long Is Without an Equal

New Orleans.—The longest and largest artificial leg known to J. E. Hangar, Inc., artificial limb makers, has been sent to E. C. Bledsoe of Bastrop, La., 7 feet 6 inch giant.

The leg is 39½ inches long and weighs 9 pounds 3 ounces. The average artificial leg is 26 inches long.

The shoe, which matches the one worn by Bledsoe, is size 22. The shoe is 15½ inches long, 5¼ inches wide and weighs 2½ pounds.

C. W. Apperson, manager of the firm, said in the 76 years the company had been in existence, records show it had never before been called upon to make such a large leg.

Bledsoe is forty-three years old, a farmer and woodman. He weighs 267 pounds. He has removed the front seat of his automobile and drives from the rear seat.

A tree fell on him in November, 1936. Blood poisoning set in and the leg was amputated at about the middle of the calf.

The artificial leg, however, straps to his knee and thigh.

New "Pa" and "Qs" Urged as an Aid to Composition

Buffalo.—The reason many people find it difficult to put their thoughts on paper is that their handwriting cannot keep up with their ideas, according to Dr. Walter V. Kaulfers, of Stanford university, who advocates streamline English spelling and handwriting.

Dr. Kaulfers told the National Council of Teachers of English, which held its annual meeting here, that he favored a system of shorthand and simplified spelling.

"How much better it would be if we could be taught from the start to use a kind of shorthand that would make it possible for any one to write down an idea as fast as he could think," he said.

Coeds Spend 2 Hours Daily Before Mirror

Canyon, Texas.—A student at West Texas State Teachers college here said the 130 girls in her dormitory average two hours daily before the looking glass.

The girl, who prefers anonymity for obvious reasons, said the schedule runs about like this: 30 minutes before the first morning class, 10 minutes before lunch, 5 minutes after lunch, 30 minutes before bedtime—with the remainder of the two hours consumed by interim primping or getting ready for "dates."

Vail Medals And $250 Each To 3 Telephone Employees

National Vail medalists: Mrs. Lila Cook Gaddy, operator, Streetman, Tex., Henry R. Bell, line foreman, Salem, Mass., and Mrs. Irene Regina Duncan, operator, St. Joseph, Mo., awarded Theodore N. Vail medals and cash awards of $250 for noteworthy public service.

Three silver Vail medals accompanied by cash awards of $250 each will be presented Mrs. Irene Regina Duncan, St. Joseph, Mo., operator of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company; Mrs. Lila Cook Gaddy, Streetman, Tex., operator of the Three States Telephone Company; and Henry R. Bell, Salem, Mass., line foreman of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, for noteworthy public service.

The citation accompanying Mrs. Duncan's award reads: "For courage and perseverence in delivering an urgent telephone message." On September 8, last year Mrs. Duncan was asked to locate a man whose son had just died. He was employed on a government dredge working in the Missouri River near St. Joseph. After a hazardous trip of thirteen miles through a rough and dangerous area, the man was located and the message was "put through." The messenger service ordinarily employed for such calls had unsuccessfully attempted to locate the person wanted.

Accompanying Mrs. Gaitty's award, was a citation given "for alertness and initiative which led to the apprehension of two desperate criminals."

While operating her switchboard January 3, 1932, Mrs. Gaitty learned that two men had ditched a car on a nearby highway. After their disappearance it was discovered that the automobile contained firearms. The car answered the description of one being driven by two fugitives whom she had heard described in a radio broadcast concerning the shooting of several police officers at Springfield, Mo. Mrs. Gaitty notified police, who started in pursuit and two days later the fugitives shot themselves rather than submit to capture.

The award made to Mr. Bell was "for rescuing a man caught by falling debris in a partially burned building." While working with a line crew at Peabody, Mass., December 1, last year, Bell learned that a man had been caught by the collapse of a portion of the second floor of a building which had been partially destroyed by fire. Hurrying to the scene of the accident, Foreman Bell and his men braced the building in such a way that the victim was pulled free. He was then placed in an ambulance and taken to a hospital where he fully recovered.

Vail medal awards are provided from a fund established as a memorial to Theodore N. Vail, former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, who at the time of his death on April 16, 1920, had long been recognized for his conspicuous service in the development of the art of telephony.

MARCH IS A SIGNIFICANT MONTH IN TELEPHONE WORLD

March is a month of important anniversaries in the telephone world. Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone and the man who gave his name to a great communication system, was born on March 3, 1847, in Edinburgh, Scotland. Twenty-nine years later the telephone was born, when Dr. Bell and Thomas A. Watson, his assistant, held the first conversation ever transmitted over wires.

On March 7, 1876, a patent was issued to Bell covering the fundamental principles of the electric speaking telephone.

On March 18, 1878, the first telephone exchange in New York was opened at Albany. In 1879 on March 15, a certificate of incorporation was filed in Boston for the National Bell Telephone Company for the purpose of unifying telephone development throughout the country. On March 15, 1879, the first telephone exchange in Louisiana was opened in New Orleans. March 22, 1881, the first telephone exchange in Wyoming was opened at Cheyenne. On March 27, 1884, telephone service was opened experimentally between Boston and New York, using overhead wires of hard-drawn copper. The distance was 235 miles.

On March 3, 1885, a certificate of incorporation was filed in Albany, N. Y., by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, for the purpose of effecting intercommunication "with one or more points in each and every other city, town or place in said state and in each and every other of the United States and in Canada and Mexico and also by cable and other appropriate means with the rest of the known world."

March 7, 1926 saw the first public test of two-way transoceanic radio telephony, which was made between New York and London. On March 30, 1933, radio telephone service between the United States and the Philippine Islands was opened.

It was also in March, the twenty-fifth to be exact, in 1878 that Alexander Graham Bell issued in London a prospectus which gave a vision of the universality of communication, which the Bell System now provides. The following paragraph is quoted from Dr. Bell's prospectus:

"In a similar manner it is conceivable that cables of telephonic wires could be laid underground or suspended overhead, communicating by branch wires with private dwellings, counting houses, shops, manufactories, etc., uniting them through the main cable with a central office where the wires could be connected together as desired establishing direct communication between any two places in the city."

Starting from nothing in 1876, the telephone system in the world has grown until today it is possible from your telephone to communicate with any one of 19,450,000 telephones in the United States and 20,000,000 telephones in the world.

In 1900 there were 7,555 persons holding stock in the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. On December 31, 1937, there were 641,686 stockholders. From a mere handful of workers at the turn of the century, the Bell System employee family has grown until there are now 316,771 employees, including the Bell Telephone Laboratories and the Western Electric Company.

Dr. Alexander Graham Bell as he looked in the later years of his life.

Prompt Aid Will Be Given In Selecting PWA Projects.

The present Baltimore office of the Public Works Administration, under the direction of Project Engineer, Henry S. Shryock, will function to give this and nearby communities prompt aid in meeting PWA dead lines for filing applications for PWA loans and outright grants under the new PWA and recovery bill passed a few days ago by Congress. The office is located at 1156 Court Square Building, Baltimore, Maryland.

Selected because of his long experience with PWA procedure, he is charged with the task of helping and advising on applications for federal grants for the construction of such projects as roads, hospitals, waterworks, sewers, bridges and highways. As hours and minutes will count in filing these applications for PWA aid, this first hand assistance should prove valuable to local officials as any delay may mean that communities will lose their chance at receiving federal aid and financing for their projects.

As soon as applications are filed, the PWA officials will examine the documents prepared by the engineers and architects and recommend those "ready to go" for immediate allotment.

The establishment of this local office for the convenience of the officials in this area regional PWA director Col. E. M. Gilmore stated is part of the new streamline PWA procedure, designed to get work started as quickly as local authorities will permit.
