THE J&K SHOE FITS THE ARCH

Extract From Mr. Albert C. Ritchie's Speech at Betterton.

Mr. Albert C. Ritchie, Smith Organization candidate for Attorney-General, in his address Thursday night at Betterton, made the following statement to his audience: "Now, gentlemen, we need just exactly such men as Senator Wm. W. Beck and Mr. Howard Turner, your fellow-citizens, in the Legislature. They are the sort of men whom we can work."

How much there is in this requires no guess. These two gentlemen doubtless were well and hard worked by and for the Smith machine in those thrifty days. If it was a slip of the tongue, Mr. Ritchie none the less told the truth clearly and distinctly. That is why your Smith machine, Mr. Ritchie, will not have these two to "work" in Annapolis next winter.

Second Annual Red Men's Tournament, Massey, Md., August 21, 1915.

Massey placed herself on the map on Saturday last, with one of the "biggest" celebrations ever witnessed in the First District. For several weeks Togwogh Tribe, No. 169, I. O. R. M., of Massey, had been making preparations for their second annual tournament, and credit must be given the members of this order for the manner in which the affair was conducted. Starting at one o'clock, a parade of Red Men and automobiles, headed by the Red Men's band, composed of members of the tribe, was put in motion by Chief Marshall Laws. The calvacade wended its way direct to the tournament field, where riders from Kent, Queen Annes, Cecil and Talbot were soon contesting for the prizes. Frank Whelen, Jr., of Massey, delivered the charge. The riding was excellent and speedy, resulting in several ties for which extra contests were necessary. The final summary was:

KNIGHTS.

PROFESSIONAL CLASS.

Charles Jacquette, Knight of Lankford	3	3	3	3
Milton Melvin, Knight of Talbot	3	3	2	2
Elwood Fowler, Knight of Melitota	3	3	1	3
R. Messix, Knight of old St. Joseph	3	2	1	2
T. Messix, Knight of Willoughby	3	3	3
Tom Fowler, Knight of Flatland	3	3	2
Walter Fowler, Knight of Worton	3	3	2
Edward Fowler, Knight of Chestertown	2	3	3
Chas. Walls, Knight of Lewistown	2	3	3
W. Morgan Robinson, Knight of Forest	2	2	2

AMATEURS.

Warren Johnson, Knight of Rhoads	3	2	1	2
W. Robt. Newnam, Knight of Massey	3	2	0	1
Arthur Johnson, Knight of Plains	2	2	2	1
Edward Stradley	2	2	1	0
James H. Knight, Knight of Sassafras	2	0	2
L. Irvin Atwell, Knight of Cumberland	0	1	1
Noland Haley, Knight of Angel's Rest	1	0	0

Mrs. Jacquette was crowned queen of love and beauty; Miss Mildred 1st maid of honor; Mrs. Fowler, 2nd maid of honor.

After the close of the tilting, W. F. Russell, Jr., in an able and eloquent manner delivered the coronation address. Mr. Russell possesses a style that is pleasing, and his discourse was well received. Following the tourney, a base ball game between Massey and Golts held the attention of the crowd during the seven innings played, the score resulting in a 9 to 9 tie. The supper tent then received a throng, after which an excited but good-natured crowd watched the drawing for the six-cylinder automobile. Mr. Price, of Middletown, holder of ticket 91 Series K., was the lucky man.

The dance in the evening was largely attended, Godwin's orchestra of three pieces, furnished the music. Threatening skies for a time seemed to be ready to spoil the day, but at 1 o'clock when the parade started, the sun shone and a steady stream of autos and carriages entered Massey, till a throng of fully one thousand had gathered. It was a gala day for the politicians, their bright smiles and cheery greetings served to dispel the gloom even when the clouds were most dense. Disorder was conspicuous by its absence, not a solitary happening of this sort marred the occasion. And the Red Med are assured of a record-breaking crowd at their next annual affair.

Grange Meeting at Betterton.

Grangers from several States, and from the different counties of Maryland gathered at Betterton on Thursday last in a State-wide meeting. An interested audience listened to an interesting programme, and from the opening of the meeting, when the orchestra played the Star Spangled Banner, while everyone stood till the close, there was not an idle moment. Turner's theatre was beautifully and tastefully decorated, the stage presenting a tempting array of fruits and vegetables, the ladies in charge of this portion of the meeting having won the praise of all for their efforts.

The meeting opened with a short address by County Master Smyth, in which he eulogized the tiller of the soil, and spoke of the calibre of the farmer, who not only is a member of but who attends the grange.

Mr. James T. Anthony followed with an address that was received by prolonged applause. Mr. Anthony possesses a vocabulary that abounds with words beautiful in their simplicity, and his talk was to the point and touching.

State Master Black spoke of the fraternity of the grange, and the equality of the sexes which has been brought about by this order. The purpose of the grange, as stated by Mr. Black, was not so much "what we receive, as compared to the fraternal brotherhood, which grows in communities where the grange exists."

National Grange Master Oliver Wilson, of Illinois, is well-fitted for his high office because of the brainy and masterful grasp he has upon things pertaining to the farmer. Mr. Wilson's address was a revelation, and his tribute to the Eastern Shore, while glowing, was none the less sincere. He mentioned the wonderful growth and improvements along the Shore since his visit of five years ago, and said that the progressiveness of the people here was wonderful. In a portion of his address, Mr. Wilson spoke of the ridicule in which the native of an agricultural community is held by his city cousin, but laughed this fact to scorn by showing that ignorance is far more existent in the large cities. Consolidated schools were given a thorough explanation by Mr. Wilson, who told of the benefits they have brought where they have been given a thorough trial, beside being more economical. He also admonished the farmer to treat his son less like a slave and place him on the pay roll, as the average farmer thought that his boy was less entitled to recognition for his services than the lowliest laborer. In further consideration of the knowledge required on the farm to-day, Mr. Wilson stated that the more a farmer knew about botany, entomology, soils, climates, etc., the more successful that farmer is likely to be.

Short talks were offered by F. C. Bancroft, Master of the Delaware State Grange, Hervey Walker, past master of Delaware, Mrs. Black, wife of State Master Black, and several others.
