Hicks' Forecast for September

A regular storm period beginning in August, will reach its culminating crisis, in central to eastern states on September 1st, 2nd and 3rd, followed closely to the Atlantic Ocean by rising barometer and change to cooler weather.

A reactionary storm period has its central days on the 4th, 5th and 6th. This period finds the full moon on both the ecliptic and the equator, hence there is an eclipse of the moon on the 4th. This is another period in which general convulsions of earth, sea and air will be most natural. If the barometer falls far below normal—results reasonably to be expected—there will be danger of violent, equatorial storms, reaching inland from the Gulf and south coasts, on and touching the 4th, 5th and 6th. Great electrical storms, and much kindred phenomena, will center on and about the 5th.

A regular storm period is central on the 11th, only one day from the center of a mercury period center on the 12th. It must also be remembered that the annual, autumnal crisis of magnetic and electrical unrest falls from about the 8th to the 15th of September. This storm period is therefore coincident with the magnetic crisis, in the mercury period, and nearing the center of earth's autumnal equinoctial disturbance. We conclude that very general, wide-reaching and intense storm disturbances will appear from about Thursday the 10th to Monday the 14th. Autumnal weather will most probably follow the storm period, 9th to the 14th. After low barometer, rain, high winds and thunder, on and touching the 11th to the 14th, look for a general change to cooler weather, followed by probable frosts over many sections northward, say from about the 13th to the 16th.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 17th, 18th and 19th.

A regular storm period falls at the crisis of earth's September equinox, being central on the 22nd, and extending from the 20th to the 25th. The moon is in perigee on the 21st, only one day after new moon on the equator on the 19th. As stated above, the probability is that storms, with threatening weather generally, will continue from the 19th into the regular storm period. If the barometer does not rise very decidedly about the 20th, with sharp change to cooler, and stiff westerly winds, expect many active storms during the 21st, 22nd, 23rd and 24th. This is a period when dangerous equinoctial disturbances are liable to visit many parts of the globe—land and sea—especially both the Atlantic and Pacific coast regions to the southward.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 27th, 28th and 29th. On and about these dates, threatening conditions will return—barometer will fall, temperature rise, cloudiness ensue, with more or less storms and storminess moving from west to east across the country. September will go out with clearing and much cooler weather moving eastward from the northwest.
