ALL young men who will become 21 years of age before the day of election on November 3rd, are entitled to a vote in the primaries on Tuesday, even though every one will be compelled to register before the day of the next general election. This is the law, and we hope that every young man in Kent county will avail himself of the privilege.

WE HAD NO IDEA that the Delaware State Fair held at Wilmington this week is such a big affair. It compares most favorably with the big fairs of the country, and reflects in a splendid manner the agricultural, industrial and domestic life of the little State on a very large and representative scale. The exhibit of farm products, farm implements, cattle, sheep; hogs, poultry, horses and household goods is very good, while the dog show can't be beat. And let us say to the very great credit of the management that it is one of the cleanest, best conducted and best arranged fairs we have visited. The amusements in front of the big steel grandstand including the horse show in the paddock, are well worth seeing, and if there is a gambling device or a catch penny concern on the grounds we failed to see it. The racing, too, was good, and thoroughly in keeping with the other features. Five or six hundred people from Kent attended one or more days.

MR. VOTER, the baneful effects of a protective tariff was never more forcibly brought home to you than in the recent rise in the price of sugar. Under the present tariff law sugar was put on the free list for two years, and its price immediately came down to 4½ cents a pound to meet foreign importation. No sooner had the European war begun than the sugar trust used the war as a pretext for raising the price of sugar to the astounding figure of 9 cents a pound. As a result of this conspiracy to raise prices, President Wilson started an investigation in the interest of the consumer, and 31 price fixers have been arrested in the city of Washington, and more arrests, and we hope convictions, will follow in other large cities. The sugar trust, the meat trust, and all other commodity trusts are doing the same thing under the cloak of a European war that they were permitted to do under a protective tariff system originated and fostered by the Republican party. We say that America is the greatest and wealthiest country on the face of the earth, and yet in the eyes of the protectionist, she is not great enough to do what the other great powers of the world are doing to-day, permitting a free and unrestrained trade with other nations to the financial advantage of the great masses of America's people. What a sad commentary upon our relation to other countries.

THE PRIMARIES.

Next Tuesday is the day for holding the primaries throughout the State, and of course Kent county is included. Very little interest has been manifested by the voters, and while such should not be the case, we believe the vote will be exceedingly light because of this lack of interest. For the candidate for Congress the voters have a choice among three excellent candidates. Senator Jesse D. Price, president of the Maryland Senate, is a man of years of legislative experience, and this experience should make him a capable representative in the lower house of Congress. Col. Sisk, though not of legislative experience, is a man of marked ability, and is thoroughly in sympathy with the principles and policies of President Wilson, as well as with the best interests of the agricultural life of the State. Mr. James T. Bright, candidate for the hort term, is a lawyer of prominence and ability, of Queen Annes county. Mr. Bright is the recognized leader of the progressive and dominant faction in the Democratic party in Queen Annes and has been a strong supporter of sound progressive principles for years. Either of these three candidates would make a capable representative in Congress from this district. We sincerely trust that every voter in the county will go to the polls on Tuesday and vote for the man of his choice for the long and short terms. As between the Senatorial candidates, Senator John Walter Smith and Former Attorney-General Isaac Lobe Straus, take your pick.

IF THE TARIFF HAD NOT BEEN TOUCHED.

The request of the President for additional revenue, for which he recommends additional taxation, has started the protective tariff worshippers off on another howl. "If only the tariff had not been touched there would have been no falling off in revenue," is the burden of their complaint.

Well, suppose the tariff had not been lowered. What then? Not only would the cost of everything imported during the period of lower tariff taxation have been increased to our people, but the cost of everything else, home products as well as foreign products. We had the experience during the long reign of protective tariff taxation, of the tariff being added to the cost of every home production that came in competition with a foreign product. The consumer not only paid the tariff tax on the imported product, but paid it also on the home product in the form of an advanced charge equal to the tariff imposition.

What would have been the limit of price increase consequent upon the outbreak of the war in Europe had the old tariff been in existence? The imposition surely would have been doubled, at least. The protective tariff would have afforded the pretext for "going the limit."

Truly, the people may be thankful, in these times of disturbed trade and continual tendencies to erratic advances in the prices of all commodities, by reason of the tremendous calamity of a great war in Europe, that the protective tariff is not operating at high pressure to add to the burden of their worries and the cost of living.

THE PROCLAMATION of President Wilson setting forth October 4th as a day of prayer for peace in Europe is one of the most beautiful and patriotic precedents ever established by a President of the United States. If you want to know what kind of man Woodrow Wilson really is, and how exalted is his greatness of mind and soul, read his proclamation elsewhere in this issue, and let everybody accept this beautiful invitation to pray for the peace of which he speaks.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Denton, Md., Sept. 10th.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE TRANSCRIPT:

A few years ago the late Governor Crothers and the present junior United States Senator from Maryland, Hon. Blair Lee, then in the United States Senate, had one of the fights of their lives in securing the passage of the first primary election laws, whereby each voter was given a right to participate in the naming of candidates for public office. The Governor and the then State Senator went joyously to the conflict, although knowing that it would be a strenuous affair, and it was indeed all that. I remember the Baltimore Sun took an active part in aiding the good work, and it no doubt helped Governor Crothers, Senator Lee and the others to win the great victory. The primary laws secured at the time made the State of Maryland more of a democracy than ever before. The Sun's editorials at the time were certainly written with an unction that could not be doubted. There was indeed fervor in them. No wonder there were loud amens from the Democratic amen corners throughout the countryside, and that the people were very prompt with their praise of The Sun.

But the direct primary laws, which mean so much to the people of Maryland, in giving the voter his rightful power, are attacked to-day, and some of the friends of these laws constitute unconsciously a part of the attacking force, seeking to nullify these important statutes.

Some weeks ago it was announced that the organization leaders—meaning Senator Smith (a most delightful gentleman) and some committeemen from some of the counties, had "selected" a Congressman from the Eastern Shore, and thereupon The Sun and two or three other papers repeatedly referred to the matter in words which might lead some readers to think that the editors of these papers regarded the matter as a closed incident, and that the thing was all over, including the shouting. So often did The Sun and the other papers speak of the matter in that way that some people might not have been surprised if the proposition had been made to repeal as useless the direct primary laws, without delay.

Without disparaging the gentlemen who constitute what is known as the organization, (this I would not do), let the Democrats—all of them—who have a perfect right to participate in the election, take their full time to decide upon candidates, and let The Sun and others refrain from their work of nullifying laws of the State which some years ago The Sun advocated so zealously. Let them remind the Eastern Shore Democrats that it is really worth while to go to the polls next Tuesday after all, for on that day will the selections be made and not before. Nominations must not be ready-made like store clothes. This is certainly the case on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Let me cite a modern instance. Look at the Presidential primary figures as shown in the Sun Almanac of 1913. There you will find an illustration. In the contest of 1912, most of the committeemen on the Eastern Shore and elsewhere throughout the State were with Speaker Clark; and Senator Price, the organization selected candidate for Congress, was with them. His opponent, Col. Albert W. Sisk, another Democratic candidate for Congress, was one of the leaders of the Woodrow Wilson forces. The result of the primaries proves that the influence of the State Central Committee, or the organization, whose wishes are followed by some office-holders and others in some sections with the zeal and promptness of boy scouts, does not always prevail, for Woodrow Wilson carried the nine counties of the Eastern Shore by over three thousand. Nobody is sorry now that the people did something for themselves, in this country in 1912. They were away ahead of our committee friends in the matter of thinking.
