State Forester

cooperative plan that had been in force by mutual consent. This was flatly turned down by the Roads Commission in regular session and a request for an opinion by the Attorney Genral was the result.

The effect of the Attorney General's opinion in ruling that the State Roads Commission has exclusive jurisdiction over trees within the limits of its own right-of-way, extends to the Roads Commisson the privilege of cutting, trimming, or removing any roadside tree without regard to acceptable standards for tree treatment. The public has recognized in the past and even now is aware that the best trained engineer or construction specialist is usually poorly advised upon matters of tree growth, technique of tree trimming and prevention of disease. Further than this, special knowledge of tree species, root systems and strength characteristics are necessary in recognizing trees that endanger the public.

Maryland people have actively supported the effort of the State Department of Forestry to assure the application of scientific principles to trimming and removal of roadside trees. The State Roads Commission has now been exempt from any necessity for protecting the same roadside trees which other governmental agencies, public service companies and private citizens are being required to treat with studied consideration. This may be the start in the granting of special privileges to other public and semi-public agencies and the consequent abuse and gradual destrution of many of our finest trees.

It was pointed out in the Attorney Genral's opinion that a coordination of effort between the State Departments might be asolution. The Forestry Department has in the past made all reasonable overtures to the State Roads Commission in offering advice and assistance in the care and protection of roadside trees in an effort to carry out the intent of the law, and there has been a satisfactory working arrangement tothat end. This was grossly violated by the Roads Commission recently in the Waldorf Road case. As a result of the official ruling rendered in this case, the Roads Commission is given a free hand to cut or trim roadside trees at will recognizing no rules or restraint such as has existed in the past. The Forestry Department, therefore, divested of authority is no longer able to maintain the high standards for roadside tree protection heretofore required of all agencies including the State Roads Commission.

There has developed a new public attitude toward protecting the beauty of the roadsides. The Forestry Department is recognized by all interests as the one agency with power and purpose to protect the public interest in roadside trees and to prohibit advertising signs in the road right-of-way. In this respect, Maryland has furnished a model of action that has been adopted by other states Are we now to return to the deplorable conditions that existed prior to 1914 when the roads were plastered with advertising signs and the only protection for roadside trees was what a few battling individuals could offer in asserting their rights often with force of arms- Are we to see these thousands of trees that have been so carefully preserved these many years jeopardized by unthinking road employees as fancied obstructions or perrchance cut down to make more visible gasoline filling stations and hot dog stands?

The Forestry Department has gone to the limit of its authority. It is now the duty of interested individuals and organizations to see that the ground gained in establishing an effective State program of tree protection shall not be lost.

HOW NEW YORK FAIR MOVES BIG TREES BY HUNDREDS

NEW YORK (Special).—As the housewife repots geraniums or the gardener moves berry bushes, so does the New York World's Fair 1939 Corporation transplant stately trees from five states to the 1216½-acre exposition site. The Fair's landscape engineers explain that the moving of the big trees differs from the replanting of small shrubs only in the matter of size, and that modern mechanical aids make possible the creation of a mature-looking park on the newly made land of Flushing Meadow.

Shown at the top of accompanying photographs is a grown maple that has just been restored to upright position after a 120-mile ride on a specially-built truck. Note truck's winch and the secure balling of earth about the tree roots. In the centre is a 35-foot Norway maple, 12 tons weight, moving the last few yards to its new home by means of the forward gear of a modern tree mover. All trees shown, a number of the 474 veterans moved this spring, are new to the great expanse of filled land. The Fair will move 10,000 trees and 250,000 shrubs.

Shown, just above, on the bay hunter is Harvey D. Gibson, President of the Manufacturers Trust Company and Chairman of the Fair's Finance Committee. Up on the handsome grey and speaking to a landscape engineer is Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation, during a horseback tour of the site.
